Notes at the FAIR

The fair will be a record breaker this year. That has been the ambition of the managers, and they have labored as faithfully to make it that as they would to push the most lucrative private undertaking.

The Sparks herd of thoroughbreds, from Reno, Nevada, great white-faced Herforders, were first on the ground, and as they are stock of national reputation, they will be of great interest to lovers of fine cattle.

The log cabin of the Woodmen of the World is an exact exhibition of the pioneer shelters of our forefathers.

In the county exhibits and Indian school and industrial, agricultural and horticultural exhibits will fill the whole main pavilion.

Of course, a poultry show that was not in charge of Geo. D. Goodbus would not be recognizable.

THE FLOWER BOOTHS

The pavilion will be lighted at night with seventeen arc lights and altogether thirty arc lights well illuminate the fair at night.

President Wehrung put in an hour and a half at the telephone Friday evening getting into communication with Spokane and finally landed a talk that will result in bringing forty more race horses to the State Fair.

Owing to the numbers of exhibitors and increased labors necessary to get all the displays in position, the gates to the fair will be closed Sunday to all but exhibitors who will be passed on proper showing to the gate keepers.

W. W. Bosow, E. R. Coffin, M. C. Remington are the keepers of the railroad gate. Albert Tosler, President of the National Press Association, and J. C. Hare are ticket sellers at the main entrance.

W. A. Moores is assistant secretary and Miss Cooper as usual chief entry clerk. No Fair has ever yet been run without their help--indeed it could not be.

Miss Clara Wakeman of the Liberal University of Silverton is one of the principal exhibitors of China painting, and the only exhibitor of tapestry.

The Popcorn man who delights the hearts of childhood, and people, who are between their first and second childhood as well, is here.

THE STATE FAIR IN THE ESTIMATION OF THE PRESIDENT AND SECRETARY

Prepared for the State Fair and Harvest Home Edition of The Daily Journal.

W. H. Wehrung, President of the State Fair

The Oregon State Fair of 1901 will be the most representative agricultural exposition ever held this side of the Rocky Mountains.

W. H. Wehrung, President, M. D. Wisdom, Secretary.

John Savage, Sr., has been laid up for several months, but is now about again. There are few more regular State Fair visitors and few men in the world with a larger capacity for enjoyment than Uncle John or with a bigger heart in them.

The small lawn in front of the house is gay with daffodils in early spring, and shrubs of bridal wreath looking like fountains of white feathery spray.

ICE CREAM MAKING.

The Baptist ladies and the Ladies Aid Society of St. Joseph's church are conducting restaurants on the grounds.

The new dairy building is a model structure and worthy of the important industry it represents. It fitsly marks the rapid progress that has been made in their branch of farming, when but a few years ago the dairy show was housed in a space that resembled a dilapidated woodshed.

Bears seem to have wately disregarded the proclamation of Kitchener ending the war September 15. Perhaps they have been too busy to read.

Mrs. T. T. Geer is an exhibitor in the fine arts department, the domestic arts and several other, and is rustling around for space pretty much like any other farmer's wife.

Think of Hinges when you think of watches and jewelry. Why? Because you can't tell it. He leads.

Church Services:

At the Corner of 19th and Ferry streets, T. H. Henderson, pastor, preaching services will be resumed tomorrow.

Seventh and Cheneketa streets, N. Shupp, pastor. Preaching services at 11 a. m., by Brother E. Simpson, and at 7:30 p. m., by Rev. A. A. Engelbart, of Oregon City.

Corner Cheneketa and Cottage streets, William G. Eliot, Jr., minister. Service at 10:30 a. m. Subject of sermon-- white peaches, with a fine mild flavor, although not so pretty to look at.

In our vegetable gardens, tomatoes grew and flourished with great prodigality. We had six bushels of mammoth beauties. "We eat what we can and what we can't we can"--and pickle and make into catsup.

From a professional gardener's point of view these quantities are, of course, small. But if every family would utilize the small plots of ground which they possess of this productive Nebraska soil, it would prove of infinite benefit.

[The editor of THE JOURNAL for the first time in his life that he is no longer a young man. A President sits in the White House who is three years his junior.

As for fruit and vegetables, our table last summer was bountifully supplied with the most delicious of both, just fresh from the dewy garden.

Of red and black raspberries we had twenty-four quarts, and as many grapes as we could use, besides making several dozen bottles of grape juice, excellent as a drink and as a tonic.

There is nothing so appetizing as a nice juicy piece of meat for dinner, and you can always find it at the White House Restaurant.

Gentlemen who are engaged in outlining a course for President Roosevelt, might better direct their energies into other channels.
