There appear to be five salaries provided by law, besides the salary of Secretary of State as fixed by the constitution. There are 28 different provis-ions of fees, ageneral appropriation for ciercal aid and a number of minor appropriations.

In each case the law has been found fixing the fees and then th of business under that law as reported by the secretary of state | mined the sum charged on that account.

The twenty-eighth item was left blank as it covers fees not provided by law which the secretary of state may collect or not. compliation of emoluments was made without calling on the sestate for information.

The Journal has gathered all its information about salaries independent of the officers effected thereby, preferring to make suc tions in each case as might be asked for by the various officers, if is not correct.

It cannot be said that these figures have been prepared by the s authorities. They are not colored for or against any official and are ed solely for the purpose of effecting a change in a system that ha from small proportions to be a large-sized abuse but for which the state officials are in no wise responsible.

The present secretary of state may have some corrections of figures to make and we shall give them to the public, and mak ductions from his employments in accordance with the truth and fac

On the other hand if The Johrnal can find any item of incom chargeable to the office of secretary of state they will be added, w desire to get at the actual truth of thematter.

The present secretary of state has made many improvement service of his department. He has introduced better methods and publicity to many matters that were formerly difficult of access.

The Journal believes that the present secretary of state has disposition to make his office more lucrative than the law clearly pe has conducted the office in a most gentlemanly and straightforwar and is in no way to blame for the large compensation that in such tude of ways comes to him through the state laws.
