MARION COUNTY OFFICIALS

Still Disagree Over Making Tax Certificates

The controversy between the County Clerk and Sheriff concerning the redemption of property sold for delinquent taxes for the year 1901, is no nearer an adjustment than when precipitated last week. Neither of the two officers is making provision in his respective department for the performance of this important work and the question has not yet been formally presented to the judicial officers of the county for a legal opinion thereon.

The sheriff will maintain that the work must be performed in the clerk's department under the provisions of the old law, the terms of which governed the delinquent tax sale by which the property was sold.

The clerical work required in connection with the performance of this labor over which the discussion arose, amounts to a considerable item. The sale called for the writing of nearly 700 tax certificates, and a redemption certificate must be issued for every parcel of property that is redeemed and a correct record of such proceedings must be kept. At this season of the year County Clerk Hall is almost swamped with work, and having on hand the extension of the 1901 tax roll, registration of voters, summoning of jurors, two departments of the circuit court, besides the routine work of his department, and the new law contemplates that the redemption of property shall be made.

The sheriff says that he will not be able to make his returns on the 1900 delinquent role and sale until February 15, as it will require until then to complete writing the tax certificates. At the recent sale, County Judge Scott on behalf of Marion county, bid in property aggregating over $900 in delinquent taxes. This property will have to be redeemed in the same manner as though it had been bid in by individual parties, the county realizing the usual 20 per cent penalty charge. In addition to the amount of the tax in every instance.

The cost on the recent delinquent tax sale has settled over $100 expenses. A Mother's Favorite. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the mother's favorite.
