

A SALEM OSTEO-PATHIST

Work Being Done in This Popular School of Healing by Mrs. Schoettie.

One of the new words added to the language in recent years is that applied to the science of healing being so widely practiced by ladies and gentlemen throughout the land. The latest advent in the field in Salem is Dr. M. Theresa Schoettie, who has opened offices over the Spa in flag block. Mrs. Schoettie is well known in Salem, being a sister of Barr Brothers, and a daughter of the late J. G. Barr, who was one of Salem's best citizens. Dr. Schoettie is a graduate of the American school of osteopathy, of Kirksville, Mo., and stands high in her profession. She already has patients in and about Salem, and is meeting with good success.

M. Theresa Schoettie.

For the benefit of JOURNAL readers who are not familiar with the new science, the following statement of what it is, is given below:

Osteopathy is that science which consists of such exact, exhaustive, and verifiable knowledge of the structure and functions of the human mechanism, anatomical, physiological and psychological, including the chemistry and physics of its known elements, as has made discoverable certain organic laws and remedial resources within the body itself, by which nature the scientific treatment peculiar to osteopathic practice, apart from all ordinary methods of extraneous, artificial, or medicinal stimulation, and in harmonious accord with its own mechanical principles, molecular activities, and metabolic processes, may recover from displacements, disorganizations, derangements, and consequent disease, and regain its normal equilibrium of form and function in health and strength.

Dr. Schoettie extends an invitation to the public to call at her offices, where she will be pleased to talk with them, and where an examination if desired will be given free with one treatment.

PAUNCEFOTE

In Unenviable Position on Account of Anglo-German Controversy Over England's Attitude.

Lord Pauncefoot.

Who would care to be Lord Pauncefoot these days? While England and Germany are doing a Codlin and Short act over America, the popularity of the British Ambassador is not being increased by the controversy.

Civic Improvement League

The American League for Civic Improvement was organized in the spring of 1900 at Springfield, O. A little group of people, prompted by their own experience in a local improvement society and by a series of articles published on civic improvement published in a local magazine, decided to call a convention. The convention was attended by people from various parts of the country and several interesting addresses were made. The organization which results was, however, largely left in the hands of those who inaugurated the movement, and the headquarters were located in Springfield. It was frankly regarded as experimental, since there were no other organizations in similar fields, such as the American Park and Outdoor Art Association, the American League for Municipal Improvements, the League of American Municipalities and the National Municipal League. The organizers of this new movement felt that in spite of the societies apparently in possession of the field, there was not only room for another, but also a necessity for a different kind of work. The first of the societies named is made up largely of professional landscape gardeners and park authorities, and attempts to appropriate as its field only outdoor art.

The next two organizations are representative of municipal officials. The last aims at changes in administration. It was felt that there was a demand for an organization which would represent the principle of federation and would embrace the various local societies of the country, which were known to be numerous, and at the same time be comprehensive in its purposes.

The first year's work was largely guided by the founder of the movement and its first corresponding secretary, Mr. D. J. Thomas of Springfield, O. The work of correspondence and organization was carried on under his direction by Miss Jessie M. Good and Mr. E. G. Routhan. It was through Miss Good's early efforts in writing articles and corresponding with inquirers throughout the country that the first materials were gathered which seemed to point toward the advisability of such a movement. Her pamphlets, "The work of civic improvement" and "The how of improvement work," still remain the chief literature of the movement. Through the efforts of these pioneers over three hundred local improvement societies were discovered, the geographical distribution of which, confined as it naturally was to a certain number of states, has led to the belief that there are in the country at least a thousand of these organizations.

A Few Pointers.

I have had twenty five years of experience in operating, repairing and selling sewing machines, and while what I do not know about the business would still make a fair sized book in this time I have picked up a few pointers which came in handy. I keep in stock supplies for any sewing machine that is being kept up. If you only want one for a time I can hire you one of any make you are used to or if you want to buy the right kind of a machine at the right price I can sell you one reasonable. It at any time you need anything in the sewing machine line, write or call on me. G. C. WILL. Pianos, organs and sewing machines, opposite Bush's bank.

IS SHE GUILTY

Whole Country Intensely Interested in Thrilling and Extraordinary Case of Beautiful New York Girl Accused of Shooting Her Lover.

Accused Miss Burns, of Good Family

The incidents in the case of Miss Florence Burns, the young Brooklyn woman charged with the murder of young Walter S. Brooks, are so thrilling and unusual that the greatest interest is manifested in the case throughout the entire country. Miss Burns, the accused, is a young girl refined and of good family. The dead boy is also well connected. Brooks is supposed to have proven faithless to the beautiful young girl who, it is charged, shot her betrayer in a moment of passion. Miss Burns steadfastly denies her guilt and her calm self-possession under the serious charge that hangs over her, causes the prison officials to marvel greatly.

Mr. Albert's European Tour

A more interesting display of stereo-ticon views was never presented in the Capital City than those shown by Hon. J. H. Albert at the Y. M. C. A. building last night. They are views taken by Mr. Albert during his recent trip to Europe. The explanations given by Mr. Albert made the display one of great benefit, the scenery being minutely depicted and all the historical connections lucidly given. To those who had visited the prominent cities in Europe, the entertainment was a great pleasure, and it was really only second to a visit to the places to the remainder of the audience.

The first views were the principal places of interest seen while enroute from Salem to New York; then was shown London buildings and street scenes, Scottish views, then Paris, with a number of the exposition buildings, Holland with its canals, dykes and windmills, German pictures, principally along the Rhine, and glimpses of Rome and adjacent scenery, the last of the collection shown being the rear of their new store and are fitted up for testing eyes and fitting lenses with the latest instruments.

A FINE STORE ON STATE ST.

Conducted by a Firm that Has Been in the Jewelry Trade for Fifty Years.

It is nearly half a century since John Barr began business in the jewelry line in Iowa, and then continued in Salem, where he is succeeded by his sons, who have recently moved into larger quarters at corner State and Liberty streets. Their new store is pretty as a picture, has a well displayed stock of silverware, watches and jewelry, lighted on two sides, and fitted up in a most attractive manner with many new furnishings. In conversation with a reporter Mr. Herman Barr, the manager, expressed himself as pleased and delighted with their new location, and it has been the common remark of their customers.

way from small beginnings by scrupulous honesty of methods until its reputation is well established in the minds of the public in regard to statements made about anything in their line. They propose to merit this consideration by their future conduct of business entrusted to them.

One of the strong features of their new store is the optical parlor which occupy the rear of their new store and are fitted up for testing eyes and fitting lenses with the latest instruments.
