FRUIT GROWERS' MEETING

At the Fruit Meeting Held in the City Hall Saturday Afternoon there were Present

About Sixty Growers, to Hear What was to be Done.

President Lloyd Reynolds called the meeting of the Fruit Growers' Association to order, and introduced Mr. Holcomb, of the Portland Canning Co., and who is a stockholder in the Alton cannery at Salem. Mr. Holcomb made a plea for more fruit of different varieties, in order to enable the cannery to run for a longer season. He stated that the cannery would be operating this season, and that his company is prepared to contract now for all the fruit that will be raised about Salem this season. He also offered to make contracts for a term of years on blackberries and strawberries. He offered to contract for the strawberry crop, or any portion of it, at three cents per pound, with an option to supply more fruit at 2 1/2 cents.

Mr. Holcomb reiterated that the Salem cannery would be operated this season, and asked that a committee of the growers be appointed to investigate what the intentions of his company are.

He offered to make five-year contracts for 40 acres of red raspberries at 3 cents per pound, and 15 acres of blackberries at 2 1/2 cents per pound.

Upon Mr. Theissen's suggestion, the directors of the association were constituted a committee to look into the propositions of the cannery company as to contracts, and the intentions of the company to operate the cannery.

Upon request, Mr. Holcomb stated that the varieties of fruit most wanted were Wilson, Ideal and Clark strawberries, Lawton blackberries and Cuthbert raspberries. He stated that there is little market for the black raspberry in cans. In cherries they receive all varieties, but prefer Royal Anna.

$10.00 A Ten Dollar Suit

We mean that the man who wants to pay $10 for a suit shall have the biggest ten dollars worth he ever had. We know that it may result in lots of men buying these suits who intended to pay more. But that doesn't deter us when we can increase the value we offer. Our $10 suits have always equaled the $12 grade anywhere else—$13.50 or $15.00 would be nearer their comparative worth. There's no more style in any garments than you'll find in these suits. The styles are new patterned Cheviots and Cassimeres—the right Spring cut, but it's the value in them that makes them remarkable at the price. Take a look. We also carry the "Packard Shoe for Men."

Father's Idea of Shoes.

"Spill shoes," said the teacher. "Sho-hoe," returned the little one promptly.

"Correct," said the teacher. "Of course you know what they are."

The little one nodded his head vigorously.

"My papa says," he announced, "that shoes are what drive the father of a family into bankruptcy."—Chicago Post.

Calling the Hours.

There is one place in London, and only one, where the ancient custom of keeping a watchman to call out the hours is still maintained. This is at New Inn, which in spite of its name is one of the oldest inns of court. The servants there are quite proud of the age of the place, and it was one of them who said one day:

"Why, sir, this inn was here in the time of Charles I."

After a long pause, to allow this astounding fact to percolate through the brain of the bearer, he extended his arm and added with emphasis:

"And it was here in the time of Charles II."

Some vague notion of the disturbances which intervened between the two reigns had probably been floating through the man's mind, but how an existing institution could possibly have dated from the reign of Charles I. without coming down through the reign of Charles II. he failed to explain.

Beginning at the stroke of 10 o'clock every night, the watchman in the yard of New Inn "calls the hour" in a stentorian but monotonous voice:

"Ten o'clock, and all's well!"

The words are heard in the adjoining chambers and offices. Tenants in Clement's Inn, whose rooms look into the pretty yard and garden of New Inn, may hear these words every hour through the night if awake.—New York Times.

The Indian Duck Trick.

A little tin or earthen pan or some times half a coconut shell supported on three stones is filled with water on which is sprinkled a red powder, rendering it practically opaque. A little duck of wood or porcelain is placed upon the surface, where it at first floats, but at the command of the performer suddenly dives, remaining submerged until again ordered to rise.

This very ingenious trick depends upon the fact that in the bottom of the vessel there is a minute hole through which passes a hair. One end of this is attached to the duck; the other remains at the disposal of the performer and is attached, by means of a pellet of wax, to his thumb or to one of the hands which he beats it. When he wishes the duck to dive, he pulls the hair. When he desires it to rise, he releases the pull.

There is naturally some amount of leakage through the plumbic, and to cover this the performer takes care, when filling the pan, to accidentally (it is said) spill a little water. The ground being thus already wetted, the fact that it gets a little more is not noticed.—Chambers' Journal.

Turner's Toast.

Turner, the painter, was a ready wit. Once at a dinner of artists and literary men a minor poet, by way of being facetious, proposed as a toast "the health of the painters and galsiers of Great Britain."

The toast was drunk, and Turner, after returning thanks for it, proposed "the health of the British paper stainers."

The laugh was turned against the poet.

Engallant.

A Maryville schoolma'am was teaching her class the mysteries of grammar.

"Now, Johnny," said she, "in what tense do I speak when I say, 'I am beautiful'?"

The little fellow answered quick as a wink, "The past."—Kansas City Journal.

The Other Way.

Teacher—I would like some one in the class to define the meaning of vice versa.

Bright Boy—It's sleeping with your feet toward the head of the bed.

One Boy's Loyalty.

A New York boy was at school in Canada, and it was his first day in class. The geography lesson was called, and it was his turn to answer.

"Which is the largest city in the world?" asked the teacher.

"New York," unhesitatingly came the answer.

"I mean the largest city in the world," said the teacher.

As promptly came the reply, "New York."

"But," expostulated the teacher, "I did not say the largest city in the United States, but the largest city in the world. You surely know which is the largest city in the world."

"New York," persisted the boy.

"London has a larger population than New York," said the teacher. "If I do not have the correct answer this time, I shall have to punish you. Come now," coaxingly, "tell me the name of the largest city in the world."

"New York,"

"Nay in during recess and write me fifty lines."

He wrote the fifty lines, and every line read: "The biggest city in the world is New York."—New York Tribune.

Praying and Prinkling.

Sam Jones, the revivalist, was once taking women to task for spending more time in prinkling than in praying.

"If there's a woman here," he screamed finally, "who prays more than she prinks, let her stand up."

One poor old faded specimen of femininity in the sorriest, staidest of clothes arose.

"You spend more time praying than prinking?" asked the preacher, taking her all in.

The poor old creature said she did—prayed all the time, prinked none at all.

"You go straight home," admonished Jones, "and put a little time on your prinking!"
