Medical Class Graduates From University

Five Young Men and Two Nurses Are Honored.

Graduation honors were last evening conferred upon a class of five young men at the First Methodist church, the occasion being the thirty-fifth annual commencement exercises of the Willamette University Medical College. The large church auditorium and gallery were filled with the admiring friends and relatives of members of the class, which was composed of Messrs. Frank E. Beauchamp, Walter W. Bruce, Orland W. Bean, James W.
Thomas and Augustus E. Tamsieie.
At the same time Miss Lida L. Thompson and Mrs. M. M. Patton were given certificates of graduation from the Nurses' Training Department of the Salem Hospital, which is supervised

WHEN SHAKESPEARE COMES TO TOWN

On April 10 the Journal Will Present a Box at the Grand to the Most Popular Saleslady in Salem.

With a view to ascertaining who is the most popular among the many ladies who sell goods to Salem people The Journal, with this issue, inaugu-rates a voting contest, having for its prize a box at the Grand Opera House on the occasion of the performance of "The Taming of the Shrew," by the Hanford Company on the evening of April 10th.

The mere announcement of the contest in last evening's Journal caused no little interest, and many of the young men of Salem are already planning campaigns calculated to land the prize for the fair one they most admire.
In another column of this issue will be found the conditions of the contest, which closes on the evening of April 9th, and the comparatively short time of the competition is expected to produce some lively hustling on the part of the young men who desire to stand high with some of the pretty sales-ladies of the city. As the ballots come in they will be deposited in a specially prepared ballot box, and each evening's Journal will contain a statement of the state of the poll up to the time of going to press.

It is hardly necessary to state that the voting will be conducted with the strictest impartiality, and the young lady who receives the majority of the ballots cast, in addition to having the pleasure of inviting four of her friends to attend the best dramatic production ever brought to Salem, will have the further satisfaction of knowing—and, incidentally, having every one else know—that of all the pretty and amiable ladies employed in the stores of the Capital City, she has been selected by a fair vote as the most popular.

Wednesday evening's Journal will contain the results of the first day's balloting. Now is the time to get in and work. The first blow is half the battle.

and directed by the medical college faculty. In addition to their diplomas, each of the graduating nurses was presented with a beautiful gold medal, on behalf of the trustees of the University.

Dr. W. H. Byrd, dean of the Medical College, opened the program with a pleasing extemporaneous talk, in which he briefly reviewed the history of that department of the University during its life of 35 years, and also mentioned the wonderful progress that had been made in medicine and surgery in recent years.

Following an invocation by Rev.
John Parsons, the Genser string quartet executed a selection from Hayden.
This was the first appearance of a quartet before a Salem audience, and the players were warmly received.

The formal annual address to the class was delivered by Rev. Wm. G.
Elliot, Jr., of this city. The speaker selected as his text "The Progress of the Scientific Mind and Spirit," basing his remarks on the life, character and work of Wm. Beaumont, a medical practitioner and investigator of the eighteenth century.

Mrs. Hallie Parrish-Hinges again delighted her many admiring friends in singing "Because I Love You, Dear," with violin obligato by Mrs. Genser. As usual, the favorite was recalled and sang a beautiful love song. The completeness of any program is lacking without a contribution from Salem's nightingales.

Degrees were conferred upon the members of the medical class and the trained nurses by W. C. Hawley, president of the University, and the Genser string quartet rendered another selection from "Faust," that was equally worthy of praise as was its initial number.

Dr. W. H. Saylor, of Portland, delivered the charge to the class. Dr. Saylor is an alumnus of the University Medical Department and surgeon of Portland. His remarks were as brief and pointed as they were practical, and his "do's" and "don'ts" as enumerated to the young graduates, were deserving of serious consideration.

The Stalwart Quartet, consisting of Messrs. Eppley, Wenger, Snyder and Judd, gave a number and deserved the encore they received. They responded with a second number. The Capital City may well be proud of this organization of singers, which is rarely equalled.

A. E. Tamsieie was elected as the class valedictorian, but, instead of delivering the usual stereotyped form of a valedictory, Dr. Tamsieie substituted an intelligently and carefully prepared paper, in which he discussed the growth and advancement of medical
