WHY PRICES OF BEEF ARE HIGH.

There has been a great volume of talk about the beef trust putting up the price of meat products. It has been stated that five large concerns practically control the slaughtering business of our country.

The National Provisioner publishes facts that go to show that of the 11,000,000 head of butcher stock killed in a year, the five largest packers kill only 3,000,000 cattle and calves, leaving 8,000,000 outside.

This authority estimates that 6,000,000 head are killed by small firms and by the farmers, not controlled by the trust, and that the price of live cattle controls the price of beef.

In other words, the price of beef on the hoof controls the price of beef on the hook. Cattle sold this March in Chicago higher than any year since 1882, when in March they topped the market at 7.63.

Cattle went to $7.40 last month in Chicago, and have since broken that record. A 1600-pound steer brings $95 on foot at 6 cents. Dressed he costs the packer $105.90. The packer receives for the waste $17.

This makes the next cost of the beef in New York, after refrigeration, $89, or 9 1/2 cents a pound. At market prices this means 11 and 12-cent beef at wholesale. Drought and short crop last year are the cause.

LABOR AND THE DIRECT PRIMARY

Organized labor has a tremendous interest in the mass meeting at Salem next Saturday in behalf of the direct primary law. Direct nomination means that men who spend large sums in politics shall be checked.

It means as great a reform as the Australian ballot did over the old way of voting, when men were bought in blocks of five and ten. Labor organizations should attend that meeting in a body.

There is not a good reason that can be advanced why the primary should not be as direct and as fair as the perfectly safeguarded law as the regular election.

Yet it is readily understood that the man without money cannot readily get on the ticket under the old slated plan of holding primaries. Direct nomination puts the slate-maker out of business.

At the present delegate primaries the citizen steps up and votes for some other fellow's slate, and he doesn't know what has been the motive for making that slate, beyond perhaps a single candidate.

But that slate is used for forty purposes. The citizen never thought of it.

The rivers and harbors bill, as it passed the Senate, carries over $70,000,000—seventy millions—too much to ever get through. If they pass smaller bills, and pass one a year, the country would be more benefited. This is the second bill in going on ten years, and the president may veto this one.

All the plans for the great national federation of woman's clubs at Los Angeles are liable to come to naught. It seems that there are not enough dress makers in that city to prepare the ladies for the event.

Valdez is to be made to Alaska what Butte is to Montana—the copper center of the North.

Look out, Mr. Speaker Henderson, or the speakership will take a move to the West.

The strike is costing the San Francisco street car lines $50,000 a day.

TO GET RID OF MULTNOMAH METHODS.

Marion county Republicans will do a good thing if they rally for the movement to give this state a good, honest and firmly drawn direct nomination law. They will show their brethren of Multnomah county that Republicanism in Marion county is the same as "she ought to be played," and not as both factions have been playing it at Portland.

It is time the Portland methods were sat upon and eliminated from state politics. They have too long been stacking the cards to ever quit voluntarily, and nothing but an invitation to go into a back alley and sit on themselves will ever teach them that.

That invitation will have to be administered by the rural voters, and at the toe of a brogan about the size of the one worn by a deep-sea diver.

They are slower than the state house elevator, or the contractors on a federal building, and will go practicing their rudimentary Digger Indian politics for generations to come, unless brought up to date with a jerk.

The Marion county proposition, to make all nominations by a direct vote of the people, will be a bitter pill, but it will have to be administered to the Portland patient, if it takes the Filipino water-cure to do it.

Albany Herald, whose editor is Republican nominee for state printer, has a kick. He will not give his readers what The Journal said, but we print what he says, as follows:

The Evening Journal, Salem's freak newspaper, following its usual vilifying course, devotes a long editorial to what it is pleased to term the "state printing office graft," and insinuates that the editor of the Herald, the Republican nominee for state printer, was in a deal with a number of Republican leaders, to pay a large sum out of the profits of the office in order to secure the nomination, and that the office under Republican administration is to be a huge graft.

For the information of Bro. Hofer, and any one else who might be deluded with this silly story, it may as well be stated that there is absolutely no such deal of any kind, and that the Republican nominee, if elected, will use his very best efforts to conduct the office on an honest, business-like, economical basis.

Salem should build a beautiful and commodious pavilion on Willson avenue, and make provisions for a band concert on Saturday nights, whenever the weather is pleasant. The city has now a band that plays with a good deal of force and expression. We should encourage them to perfect themselves. We cannot invest all our money in sawmills and flax mills.

There is another side to life that gives pleasure to young and old. It is doubtful whether, from the standpoint of music and enjoyment, we are as civilized as the poorest European nation, and we boast ourselves superior. Who will start the movement for the pavilion and weekly concert fund?

Portland Chronicle, Rep.: George Chamberlain has pledged the people of Oregon that if elected governor he will veto all the reckless appropriations and grafts, which make taxes so insufferably high. What he promises he performs, as his public record abundantly shows. Of how infinitely great importance to the average farmer, whose taxes bear down heavily, is it that a man should be at the state house for the purpose of stopping waste than heading the ceremonies at the Portland exposition, or sitting at the table to look sweet when the president comes.

Since Finston, of Kansas, must stop talking it is hardly believed he will care to live. But there has been too much talking by a lot of dress parade generals, who have seen about as much fighting in the Philippines as a lot of boys attacking a flock of geese. None of them have seen the fighting. The second Oregon saw the first year of the war, and very few "sees" as much as the Indian war veterans. When you come right down to it, the men who were in real battles up to their necks were the veterans of the war of the Rebellion.

The Andrey of Shakespeare's "As You Like It" bears resemblance to the heroine of Mary Johnston's latest romance of Virginia only in that they are both daughters of the soil and derive their names from Saint Etheldreda. But it is more than likely that Miss Johnston's character will also be seen on the stage before long.

The election of Geo. E. Chamberlain for governor is conceded by many Republicans. Furnish has the barrel, but Chamberlain has the qualification necessary to make as good a governor as the state has ever had, and he will get the requisite number of votes.—Jefferson Review.

Fourteen Oregon City factory girls, weavers of plain cloth, are out on a strike. Each day the girls may be seen seated on top of the bluff, with their lunch baskets, watching operations at the mill.

The Albany Democrat has this suggestion (possibly to candidates): The consensus of opinion is that wheat sown before May 19th will do well.

Good roads and good streets are a good asset for any community. They should not be built entirely at the expense of the abutting property.

Senator Jones, of Arkansas, has resumed agricultural pursuits, as a result of the direct primary nomination laws of that state.

Chamberlain has the election today, and will have June 23, unless the Republicans get up a scare that will vote the sheep as usual.

Pendleton East Oregonian, Dem.

The insistence of the Oregonian that there is not Republican disaffection in Oregon in the present campaign is proof of itself that it does exist. If there were none the Oregonian would not have cause to repeat over and over again its assertion. In short, the Portland paper is whistling to keep its own courage up, and to encourage Republicans in all parts of the state to smile again, with the puckering out of their lips.

The fact of the matter is, there is Republican disaffection, and if all the dissatisfied Republicans, and a goodly portion of the stay-at-home vote in 1900, should vote the Democratic state ticket in June, the Republican state ticket would be defeated, and badly so.

The Oregonian is in terrible straits trying to conjure up reasons for supporting Furnish for governor. It can find nothing against Chamberlain—well, nothing except he has not made as much money as Furnish. Still the Oregonian should consider that Mr. Furnish will have a whole lot less money by the time he is through the canvass. Undoubtedly the Oregonian has some positive personal evidence as to what it is costing Mr. Furnish to run for governor.—Eugene Guard.

Governor Odell, of New York, is wielding the pruning knife to good effect in his treatment of the thirty day bills. Since the adjournment of the legislature he has cut out nearly a million dollars which were appropriated for one thing or another in the bills left for the governor to sign. It is not believed any interests will suffer by this interference with the schemes of the money grabbers.

W. J. Furnish, Republican candidate for governor, carried the state by 13,204 votes in 1900 as presidential elector. In Lane county he received the next highest vote of any candidate for presidential elector, Fullerton led with 2521. Furnish had 2513 and Till Ford 2475. It seems to be a new rule in the party that a newcomer is more popular than tried and true leaders like Geer and Ford.

The Corvallis Gazette, Rep., says: The platform recently issued by the Oregon Democracy favors giving the Philippine islands to the Filipinos, "retaining in the end such ports and stations as may provide for our widest trade in the Orient." The Republican platform is also in favor of retaining such advantages in the far East as will provide for our widest trade in the Orient.

The Ashland Tiding refers to the splendid record made by the Republican officials of Jackson county steadily reducing the heavy county debt left as a legacy from a long series of Democratic administrations, and says that should be endorsed and encouraged by the voters and taxpayers of the county at the coming election.

Linn county Republican campaign is being made on one Populist plank, the following resolution: "Resolved by the Republican county convention of Linn county, that we believe that the proposed amendment to the state constitution providing for direct legislation by the people, is in the interest of good government."

The Andrey of Shakespeare's "As You Like It" bears resemblance to the heroine of Mary Johnston's latest romance of Virginia only in that they are both daughters of the soil and derive their names from Saint Etheldreda. But it is more than likely that Miss Johnston's character will also be seen on the stage before long.

James E. Godfrey, the Democratic nominee for state printer, will take a salary of $2500 a year. It is $2500 versus $25,000.

HELPED THEMSELVES.

How the Citizens of an Illinois Town Got a Library.

Greenup, an Illinois village, meets a library gift from Andrew Carnegie, not to awaken interest in library creation, but as a reward for what the citizens have done in meeting the need of such an educational center. They have organized a village of 1,000 population and established a practical library without a bequest and without the aid of public funds.

The scheme originated with the women's clubs, and soon every resident was interested. A "book shower" at one of the churches brought in 282 desirable books as a nucleus, and a call for subscriptions in books or money brought the total up to 1,000 volumes. A second call added 500 more, and contributions are still coming in, no one person, however, giving more than $10.

An unused room in a new schoolhouse was assigned to the library, the local carpenters putting up the shelving as their contribution, and the librarians serve without compensation.

This is only one illustration of the way in which this village takes hold of an enterprise with popular accord. It owns the waterworks plant and an electric lighting system.

The Coming City.

The time will come in the history of civilized communities when the two most important departments of a city's government will be recognized as those of health and education. I believe that the health of the community can be materially improved by a regular flushing of the surface of the streets by salt water, by the consumption of all refuse by fire and by personal cleanliness, or secured by the working classes in public baths, the number of which should be largely increased.—Randolph Guggenheimer, President of New York City Council.

W. J. Furnish, Republican candidate for governor, carried the state by 13,204 votes in 1900 as presidential elector. In Lane county he received the next highest vote of any candidate for presidential elector, Fullerton led with 2521. Furnish had 2513 and Till Ford 2475.
