Markley's Preliminary Examination Friday

Coroner's Jury Charges Him With Murder

John F. Markley was arraigned before Justice O'Donald on the charge of murder in the first degree. He pleaded not guilty, and Friday morning, at 11 o'clock, was the hour fixed for the preliminary examination.

The complaint charging Markley with the crime was sworn to by Frank Osborne, justice of the peace of Champeau district. The information charges Markley with murder committed on June 25th, when he "feloniously, purposely and of deliberate and premeditated malice, kill said J. D. Fain, by then and there unlawfully, feloniously and purposely shooting the said J. D. Fain with a firearm, to wit, a shotgun."

Coroner's Jury Accuses Markley.
Coroner D. P. Lane and Deputy Prosecuting Attorney John H. McNary conducted an inquest over Fain's remains Wednesday afternoon. A jury was empaneled, consisting of J. E. Eldridge, E. A. Vandamme, W. R. McKay, Patrick Geelan, G. A. Eberhard, and J. B. Burris. After hearing the testimony of a dozen witnesses, the jury returned a verdict finding that Fain came to his death from a gunshot wound at the hands of John F. Markley.

The testimony at the inquest showed that Markley had threatened Fain's life, that Fain, in going to his barn, was obliged to pass through an enclosure at the rear of Markley's store building, that he was shot to a reasonable certainty by Markley from the back door of the store, as smoke was seen passing away in the air from the doorway immediately after the report of the gun.

Several witnesses testified that Fain had told them that Markley had told him about six weeks ago, that he would give him (Fain) just 35 hours to execute to him (Markley) a deed to the land upon which the store was standing. Residing away in the air from Justice of the Peace Frank Osborne says he was among the persons Fain told of Markley's threat, and that he advised Fain to have Markley placed under bonds to keep the peace. Fain, however, said that he did not wish to take that action, since he was preparing to leave Champeau, and for the further reason that he did not think Markley was a dangerous man, and would carry out his threats.

Feeling Against Markley.
The public feeling against Markley in the north end of the county is intense. Residing away in the air from Justice of the Peace Frank Osborne says he was among the persons Fain told of Markley's threat, and that he advised Fain to have Markley placed under bonds to keep the peace. Fain, however, said that he did not wish to take that action, since he was preparing to leave Champeau, and for the further reason that he did not think Markley was a dangerous man, and would carry out his threats.

Charged With Murder.
A criminal information, charging Markley with murder in the first degree, has been lodged against the accused by Deputy Prosecuting Attorney McNary spent Wednesday morning at the scene of the shooting collecting testimony and evidence to be used in the prosecution of the charge against Markley.

Will Be Buried at Champeau.
The remains of Fain will be buried at Champeau, after funeral services conducted in that town. Before returning to Salem Wednesday evening, Coroner Lane gave instructions concerning the burial of the murdered man.

An Injustice Done.
The people of Champeau feel that an injustice has been done them in the published reports of the tragedy, in representing that a mob of any kind was formed, or was even dreamed of. They admit that their indignation was greatly aroused, but disclaim any intention of calculating to take the law in their own hands and do any violence to the suspected murderer.

Local News Items.
Phoebe A. Tolman has brought suit against Mary A. and Harvey L. Wright to recover $300 and accrued interest, $50 attorney's fees and costs and disbursements. The action is claimed to be due on a promissory note. The foreclosure of a mortgage on Woodburn city property is also asked. B. P. Morcom is attorney for the plaintiff.

Mrs. H. A. Mills and Charles Durrell, of Hubbard, have contracted to Lillenthal Bros. of New York, 6000 pounds of 1902 hops, at 14 cents per pound.

A Strange Character.
A curious character has just died at Union, Oregon, and will probably be given St. Peter's invitation to enter the gates of the New Jerusalem, and accept a crown and harp. He is Abner Robbins, aged 63 years, who was one of the wealthiest and probably the most eccentric character in Eastern Oregon. He owned a railroad, was admitted to a pass on it, and it is said, had never ridden on it, preferring a cayuse to his steam horse. He also possessed a residence, which his family occupied, but the greater portion of his time was spent in a cabin near Drowsey. He had three large general stores in Eastern Oregon, filled with clothing, yet he only wore overalls, a cheap cotton shirt, a pair of cowskin boots and an old wool hat. He owned a $10,000 flouring mill at Drowsey, but had never been inside of it, although he passed by it almost daily. With every reasonable luxury on earth at his command, a splendid home and a devoted wife always pleading for him to come and remain at home, he preferred a rude cabin in the alkali desert, a board bed and bacon and beans, and the companionship of cowboys and sheep-herders.

Baptists Enjoy Boat Ride and Picnic Dinner

Threatening weather did not deter the members of the First Baptist Sunday School, of this city, from a participation in a river steamer excursion and picnic today. The members of the school and their friends, some 200 strong, armed with baskets of large proportions, and all bountifully supplied with the good things that constitute a picnic dinner, left at 10 o'clock this morning by steamboat Rind for Walden's Island, about nine miles north of Salem, where the day was passed in delightful out-door recreation. The picnic party will arrive home about 6 o'clock this evening on the steamer Pomona.

The picnic was given under the supervision of Messrs. H. S. Gile, W. T. Jenks and E. M. Hurd, officers of the Sunday School.

STEAMER SINKS

Water is Low in the Willamette

The river steamer Gray Eagle sank about 1:30 o'clock last night in the Willamette river, near Oregon City, by coming into collision with a quantity of logs. She was proceeding to Portland to take an excursion party up the river this morning when the accident took place near the rapids, and she sank, but the crew of eight men were saved. She is a steamer of 133 tons, and was chartered to carry passengers between Portland and Oregon City because of the strike of trolley car employees.

Low Water in Willamette.
Independence, June 25.—The Willamette river has fallen to such a low stage that it will be impossible for the boats to go further up the river than Independence. Saturday evening the Pomona stuck on the Santiam bar, and it was 5:00 o'clock Sunday morning before the boat was able to run into Corvallis. It was a source of much disappointment to Willamette river steamboat patrons that the light-draft boat being built by the Grangers was destroyed in the recent fire at Portland.

A NEW STRAWBERRY.
Lately Brought Out by a Portland Man.

A new strawberry lately brought out by a Portland man is attracting much attention from the local growers, says the Walla Walla Statesman. So much is claimed for the new variety that it is being introduced in the Walla Walla valley a valuable acquisition to the berry crop might be the result.

Mr. Magoon has been experimenting for the past three months with the new berry which he has named the Black Diamond and it has now reached such a degree of development that he feels warranted in calling it a success.

The berry is dark in color—dark-er, Mr. Magoon says, than any he has ever seen and it has a most delicious flavor. It is somewhat smaller than the Magoon, and it is so firm that Mr. Magoon feels sure that it will be successful as a shipper. He has half an acre of the Black Diamond on his place at Gravel Hill, but the crop this year will not be sufficient for him to place any quantity on the market. However, he says the Black Diamond is a terrific grower, and as fruitful, he thinks, as the Clark Seedling—and he looks for great results in the matter of quality. Mr. Magoon has this year about three acres in berries. The season has been backward, and the crop comparatively small, due to the rains that prevented perfect pollination.

The Aspen Tunnel.
One of the most difficult pieces of engineering on record was successfully completed with the recent opening of the great Aspen tunnel on the Wyoming division of the Union Pacific railroad. The geographical formation through which the "tube" was cut is of an arborescent nature, chiefly, in the first stages of the work unusually hard rock was encountered, then shale, and finally a curious formation that has been named by the excavators "slacking ground" and right there the real difficulties of the work began. The ground, says a writer in the Engineering and Mining Journal, was very much of the nature of an old-fashioned pot of asphaltum. As soon as air was admitted to the tunnel it swelled after the manner of quicklime. Irresistibly, it was at first thought that Oregon pine beams 12 inches square would suffice; but these were literally smashed into kindling wood. Then 18 by 6 inch steel girders were tried; they were bent like wire by the enormous pressure. The action was so sudden that the men had often to run for their lives, the effect being almost like an explosion, the ground swelling and almost closing the tunnel. Considerable trouble was also caused by the occurrence of oil and water in the shaft. An explosion of the former caused the death of three men in 1890. The greatest depth of the tunnel below the surface is 455 feet, and its highest point is 7296 feet above sea level.

WILL CELEBRATE

Outline of Salem's Coming Demonstration

Day Will Be One of Continuous Entertainment

The details of Salem's grand Independence day celebration have not been completed, but from the outline of the program it is assured that the demonstration will be complete, from both a patriotic and entertaining point of view.

The day will be initiated with the customary morning salute, to be fired on Willson's avenue, at 9:30 the street procession will be formed, and, after covering the line of march, that is yet to be decided upon, the citizens will convene at Marion square about 10:30 o'clock, where an interesting exercise of an appropriate character will be given. The oration of the day will be delivered by the Hon. Wm. Colvig, of Jacksonville; Miss Maud Zeeb of Salem, will read the Declaration of Independence; Rev. P. S. Knight, the pioneer Congregational minister, will act as chaplain; the five bands will play national airs in unison, and patriotic songs will be given by a chorus of 50 voices.

This will conclude the program for the forenoon. Immediately after dinner a shooting match will be held on the river front, for which a purse of $75 has been offered. The balloon ascension will follow, and a series of vaudeville performances, including plantation songs, etc., will be given by the colored jubilee singers, on platforms constructed at points on the main streets, where the greatest number of spectators can be accommodated. The Tice sisters and Christian, the expert skater, will follow in some interesting exhibitions. A program of street sports, including several novelty races, will be duplicated on the two principal streets. The winners will receive prizes that have been contributed by Salem's business men.

The real entertaining features of the day's demonstration are reserved for the evening. These will be singing by a large chorus from a barge in the river, and Christian, the skater, will give his wonderful electrical act. The celebration will conclude with the most elaborate and grandest display of fireworks from the river bar that has ever been seen in Western Oregon.

Another attraction for the day, in addition to the regular celebration program, is the match game of baseball scheduled for the afternoon at the state fair grounds between the University of California and the Chemawa Indian school team.

Five bands will be in attendance, and there will be an abundance of music. The bands engaged are: Salem Military band, Chemawa Indian band, State Reform school, Monmouth and Bala Hayseed bands. The last named organization has a surprise in store for the celebrators, and will give a novel program on the streets. The initial part of their program will be of a burlesque nature, and will conclude with some fine solos and selections, showing the talent of the performers.

The Militant Cowboy.
(Tacoma Ledger.)
From New Mexico comes a story of a familiar cast; it strikes the senses like the return of an old friend. It relates the details of a spirited encounter of cowboys. One cowboy in the bunch is known as Bud. When a man in the cow country is a "bud" he is always handy with a gun. Bud had driven his cattle through a spring, rolling the same, and likewise the tempers of other punchers. Eight of these laid for him near the purring brooklet, but his one companion who turned loose and killed five of them on the spot; to be accurate, on the five spots. To all doubters, the fact may be stated as a clincher that the spring is there yet. That three of Bud's opponents got away was probably due to the circumstance that when he had sent five across the divide he had to stop to load, while they neglected to stop for anything. The correspondence is to be congratulated, and yet with a stroke or two more he might have finished Bud, thus removing a public menace, only less deadly than the bacillus of tuberculosis.

Once when this story was going its rounds it had the eight cowboys shot in a cabin at the beginning. Some careless shooter shot the lights out, and in the awful darkness the destruction went on. Everybody was engaged in killing everybody else, or in doing a farewell stunt himself. When the sun peeped into the cabin it saw a spectacle so gruesome that it slumped back below the horizon, and had to take a fresh start. The room was jammed with deceased cowboys, each with a beaute expression on his rigid face, the joy of the conqueror. Each had been variously peppered, but knew that the pepper from his own bow had seasoned his fellows. But the old story halled from Arizona. Evidently the eight cowboys have shifted to a new range.

The manner in which rich Americans today to imperialism is displayed in the recent subscription of $25,000 by J. Pierpont Morgan to the coronation fund. Richard Croker has also given $800 for a first-class seat in royal American citizenry. To most loyal Americans citizens the coronation display is a very disagreeable sight. From an American standpoint there is nothing pleasing about it.

An eastern city official who has just been indicted for bribery, cries out "Do not send me to prison. Think of my family!" It is strange how the culprit never think of their families until they are caught in a tight place like that.

"Plenty of sheep costing $3@4.50" says the Chicago Livestock World, are now wanted at $2@3.25. The luxuries have started meat on the down grade.
