CALLING A HALT.

Mr. Cannon, Ill.'s made a very effective speech in the house on Tuesday. It was not a long speech, but it was filled with facts and figures and common sense. It recommended the Republicans in congress to call a halt upon reckless expenditures of public money, and pointed out that they were in a fair way to appropriate nearly $2,000,000 for 1921 in excess of the revenues for that year, even though they should make no allowance of $50,000,000 for the sinking fund. The treasury is in splendid condition, but merely because one has money is no reason why his spending should be recklessly or extravagantly, and that is what congress threatens.

The appropriations for 1921 will probably amount to nearly $700,000,000, and yet no provision has been made for the sinking fund, for an international canal or a Pacific cable. There is not the least occasion for alarm, but there is reason for prudent economy. Mr. Cannon's remark had such an effect upon his colleagues that, on his motion, the enacting clause was stricken from the bill transferring the administration of the forest reserves to the department of agriculture. The purpose was to establish game preserves, and Mr. Cannon pointed out that the bill would lead to an expensive and unnecessary establishment.

The Republicans are beginning to realize that they are on trial, and that they may lose the house at the November election if they do not curb some of the expectations of their constituents. MEMORY'S PRANKS. Why Do We Remember Certain Things and Forget Others? The vagaries of memory are some of the most interesting of those connected with the human mind and body. Why do we forget certain things and remember others? Myriads of these irregularities are as yet unaccounted for. Perhaps not even the cleverest metaphysician will ever account for them.

Professor James recalls us how something which we have tried in vain to recall will afterward, when we have given up the attempt, "sauter into the mind," as Emerson says, as if by magic, as if it had never been forgotten.

Arthur Lygones experiences will revive after years of oblivion, often as the result of some cerebral disease or accident. Such a case is the one quoted by Coleridge of a young woman in Germany who could neither read nor write, but who was said to be possessed of a devil because, in a fever, she was heard reciting in Latin, Greek and in obscure national dialect of Hebrew. Whole pages of her talks were written down and were found to consist of sentences intelligible in themselves, but not having the slightest connection with one another. To say that she was possessed of a devil was the easiest way of accounting for the matter.

At last the mystery was cleared up by a physician, who traced back the girl's history until he learned that at the age of nine she was taken to live at the house of an old pastor, a great Hebrew scholar, and that she remained there until the pastor's death. It had been for years the old man's custom to walk up and down a passage near the kitchen and read to himself in a loud voice.

His words were examined, and among them many of the passages taken down at the young woman's bedside were identified. The theory of demoniacal possession was abandoned.—Youth's Companion.

Hericpicide is used to Cure Dandruff. E. H. Lyons, New York, N. Y., says "I have used Hericpicide for many years and find it refreshing."

Dr. J. H. Bush, Toledo, Ohio, writes: "Newbury's Hericpicide has given better satisfaction than anything I ever used."

Mrs. Borley, of Chadron, Neb., says of Hericpicide: "It cleaned my head of dandruff and stopped my hair from falling out. It is the best remedy for dandruff I ever used, and I have used a great many."

R. S. Coleman, Ann Arbor, Mich., says: "I have used two bottles of Hericpicide and derived benefits therefrom."

Pioneer Minister Resigns. Rev. P. S. Knight, the pioneer Congregational minister of Oregon, who has for the past three years served as pastor of the Corvallis church, closed his work there last week. For the reason that he does not care to travel back and forth continuously. During the time of his pastorate he has gone from Salem to Corvallis every week, aside from filling several side appointments, and the other day he figured out that he had traveled on these trips nearly 12,000 miles, or about half way round the globe. Mr. Knight has always had a preference for serving rural or pioneer congregations—missionary work, as it were.

The Chicago Tribune, Republican, has concluded that it may be possible for the United States to learn something from New Zealand. New Zealand has in its protective tariff law a provision that in a case where evidence is forthcoming that a particular duty is leading to the formation of trusts, it may be suspended. The Tribune says:

Nobody, except a stockholder in a trust can question the abstract justice of such a provision. Protection is de facto fostered by trusts and struggling industries and to keep them on their feet until they can walk alone. When a trust in the generally accepted meaning of the word, is formed the protection which has been given the industry controlled by the trust is situated. If the United States made the New Zealand amendment a part of every tariff law the tariff on goods, the domestic production of which is controlled by trusts, could be suspended without awakening the fear of the general revision of the tariff. Today, for example, the average man believes that the tariff on steel is an injustice because it frequently enables the United States steel corporation to exact unreasonably high prices from domestic consumers. But he also feels that he would rather put up with the injustice for awhile longer than have business conditions upset by the wholesale overhauling of the Dingley law which would follow an attempt to modify the steel schedule. However, if the New Zealand amendment were already an integral part of the Dingley law the steel man would advise its immediate application to the steel tariffs. Since history began, young and old nations have learned from the few ones—may be possible for the United States to learn something from New Zealand.

Whether President Roosevelt was playing to the satisfaction of a true American when he sent that message to congress the other day insisting upon reciprocal relations with Cuba is certainly voiced the sentiment of a very large majority of American people. He is right in demanding that justice be done the Cuban people, by restoring to them opportunities for expanding their trade with this country. America can indeed afford to be magnanimous toward them. Cuba is our infant republic struggling for independence. Her people have been used by war. America came to her aid and made the formation of the
