TRACY IN THE EAST

Notorious Outlaw Receives Much Attention

One Fellow Impersonates Tracy By Writing Letter

Tracy has received much attention throughout the East in his varied escapades since leaving the penitentiary June 9th. The writer is in receipt of a letter from Massachusetts, in which the author says the name of Tracy and his daring deeds are known in every hamlet and town in all the Eastern states.

The outlaw receives much attention through the press of the East. The New York Herald of recent date contained some humorous illustrations descriptive of the search for the criminal, and the following letter from the facetious reporter:

To the Editor of the New York Herald: Things has been all-fired dull since the posse ran out of ammunition. I never knew before that posse was another name for photographers. When I started out to be a bad man I used to shoot the posse just for the fun of seeing them kick.

I begged the pardon of every son of a gun that came down the pike after that, and asked if they had anything against me. They said they must reply in the negative, which I took to mean that I have squared myself.
