MUCH WANTED MAN. His Specialty Is Uttering Forged Checks.

Philip W. Watkins Visited Portland.

Hunted by police detectives and Pinkerton operatives throughout the Pacific coast states, Philip W. Watkins, wanted for passing worthless checks, accompanied by his bride, is being driven from city to city. A few days ago he passed through Portland, says the Telegram. Watkins, formerly a society man, well known in many Eastern cities, the son of a banker and the relative of millionaires, is now traveling through the country moored by hotel men and acquaintances who cashed his worthless checks for hundreds of dollars. With him is his wife, the daughter of a wealthy citizen of Omaha, who married him on an hour's notice. Much has been said of the man and his marriage recently in the press dispatches.

After evading the officers of California cities, Watkins came to Portland, registered at the Hotel Portland, occupied the afternoon in sight-seeing, and paying his bills, departed. Apprehended that the man was wanted, the local police were searching for Watkins, every detective carrying a description of the wily manipulator of checks. While the sleuths were watching the hotels Watkins boldly whirled around town in a carriage and was gone before the officers were aware that he had ever visited Portland. This was 10 days ago, and some of the officers do not yet know that he was here. Watkins probably knew that the detectives were on his trail, and therefore he did not linger long enough to sniff any of his checks upon trusting citizens. Even though he may have known or suspected that the officers were wanted to intercept him and hold him for the authorities elsewhere, the knowledge apparently did not deter the much-wanted man from enjoying himself. After registering at the Perkins Watkins engaged a fashionable drag and, with his bride and a stranger, whose identity has not yet been discovered, he rode about the city for an entire afternoon, boarding an evening train. The gauntlet of guards being successfully evaded, Watkins resumed his journey. His present whereabouts are unknown. It was reported by a friend that Watkins was heading for Mount Angel, Marion county, after his sudden departure. It is the opinion of the acquaintances that the young man will emerge from his present trying situation with flying colors, for the reason that Watkins has wealthy relatives—millionaires, in fact—who will, in all probability, take up the checks which are now said to be not worth the paper upon which they have been written.

Watkins has sometimes represented himself to be the New England agent of the famous Nicholson Fire Works, of Providence, R. I., on a salary of $4000 a year. He is 6 feet, 2 inches in height, is smooth shaven, has blonde hair, is very athletic in appearance, is well educated, and conducts himself like the gentleman of the thoroughbred type, has always, so far as is known, gone by his rightful name, and is particularly distinguished for his expressed disregard of the value of money, and a tendency to borrow it at every opportunity. He is said to be strictly temperate in every way. Few men care to carve out for themselves a career such as Watkins is saddled with. Whereas it may be brilliant, and even spectacular at times, the transgressor's way invariably has the same ending. Rogues check operators are quite common in Portland, as well as elsewhere, or at least one such swindler may generally be counted on fleeing some resident on an average of once a month. Watkins, however, is no ordinary check handler. When he operates it is for hundreds, where the everyday plebeian cheap type makes out a "bum" check for $5. Watkins is an artist in his line, and his ability in keeping clear of the numerous nets spread for him by the authorities is corroborative evidence that the erstwhile society swell is a rather smooth individual. Into the motoric career of Watkins has entered a chapter of romance. To enthrall the interest a love story is essential, and this was supplied by a madcap, runaway marriage, one, indeed, made in haste, for Watkins, after an acquaintance of a few hours on a train, induced Miss Shonfeld, an Omaha society belle, to elope with him. The alliance of Watkins has not met with commendation from the paternal home of the bride, for Henry Shonfeld, father of Mrs. Watkins, is quoted as saying he will kill the husband if he meets him. Watkins was heading westward when he met Miss Maud Shonfeld in a coach on the train. After riding together several hours, he plucked so cleverly or was such a hypocrite that the girl consented to be his wife. She had been a prominent light in Omaha society, and a half dozen eligible and wealthy young aristocrats had sued for her hand in vain, but she succumbed to the art of love-making as given a practical demonstration by Watkins, her chance acquaintance on a train. Well-bred, modest and pretty,

Miss Shonfeld did not appear like a girl to contract a runaway match. Since his advent to the Pacific slope, Watkins has thrust himself into exclusive society, passed, it is said, worthless checks, and left fashionable caravansaries in Santa Monica, Los Angeles, Oakland and San Francisco without the formality of liquidating rather heavy indebtedness. In Portland, however, he paid for everything he ordered, is described as having the polish of a French count, the appearance of a man to whom dollars are like cigarettes, the nerve of a book agent and a resemblance—in countenance—to William Jennings Bryan. His cyclone tour has been brilliant, for he has certainly attracted attention from the time of his hasty marriage to his disposal of divers checks written for high denominations. One of the people desiring a settlement with Watkins is J. Wesley Wright, of San Francisco, who endorsed a check of the former for $400 on the Amesbury National bank, Mass. E. H. Husey, captain of the track team of Berkeley college, also advanced $400 on a check made out by Mr. Watkins. After the hurried marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Watkins met the Berkeley athletic team between Ogden and San Francisco, as the collegians were returning from the East, Watkins said his wife was the niece of Thomas W. Lawson, the multi-millionaire copper king, and that he was in Lawson's employ, as well as being a half owner with Lawson in the Croesus horsehoe factory in Boston. After alleging that he was worth any sum Watkins confessed he was short of cash, owing to an oversight on the part of his banker. He needed $400, Husey supplied it. In the case of Wright, Watkins told him that $1500 had been given by Lawson to defray the cost of the bride's trousseau, and the bride's parents insisted on paying half of the expenses until the husband received an advance of salary. Declaring it was difficult to secure identification in a strange city, he had Wright endorse a check for $400. Wright, knowing Watkins' family well, was surprised a few days later to learn by telegraph that Watkins had no funds at the Amesbury bank, and never had an account there. Watkins' relatives were notified and Edwin B. Goodell, Watkins' uncle, replied: "If Philip Watkins is arrested, write me, his uncle." Since then nothing has been heard from the relatives.

Remove Into New Quarters. On September 1st, the Salem Abstract & Land Company will remove its office to the First National Bank building, at the corner of Commercial and Chelmsketa streets. In its present quarters this company is crowded, and its new home will have the use of one of the largest and best vaults in the city in which to keep its records. On moving into the new quarters, Mr. Waters will install an innovation in Salem in a safe deposit system. He will have ample vault room to accommodate his own business, and afford to others a safe place for depositing their valuable papers.

Examination of Teachers. The regular quarterly meeting of applicants for teachers' certificates in Marion county is being conducted in this city by County School Superintendent E. T. Moore, assisted by Prof. W. A. Mize and Prof. L. A. Wiley, principals of the Gervais and Jefferson schools, respectively. A class of 80 young people are taking the examination, which will not be concluded until Saturday afternoon. Of the 80, 55 are trying for county certificates and the remaining 25 are taking the examination for state certificates.

TIMBER DEALERS DIFFER.

Horace McKinley Sues Wisconsin Capitalists.

Charges Fraudulent Transfer of Partnership Land.

Horace McKinley, the well-known timber cruiser, who has made Salem his headquarters for several years, has brought an action in equity against George L. and Clyde Lloyd and Willis H. Gilbert, Wisconsin capitalists. He asks to have established his interest in about 4000 acres of land in Marion county that was purchased for $23,100. O'Day & Tarpley, of Portland, are attorneys for McKinley. The plaintiff alleges that early in the year 1901 he entered into a contract with the Lloyds by which he was to locate desirable timber lands that could be purchased at a reasonable price. The money for making the purchases was to be advanced by the Lloyds, the plaintiff to pay all the expenses of making the location. The title to the land was to be vested in the Lloyds, or one of them, and should be held in trust as to his interest. While the land was held primarily to be re-sold, still the plaintiff claims that he had an option on the purchase of a half interest in the property at any time upon the payment of one-half of the purchase price, and interest at the rate of 8 per cent. It was further agreed that in the event the lands were not sold, one-half of the property was to be conveyed to plaintiff, but if the parties could not agree upon a division of the property, then the land was to be divided in such manner as the parties could mutually agree upon. In case the lands were re-sold then the proceeds of the sale were to be divided as follows: The Lloyds were first to receive the purchase price, together with an interest charge of 8 per cent, then the expense claim of the plaintiff was to be allowed, and the remainder was to be divided share and share alike between the Lloyds and the plaintiff. Plaintiff further alleges that under the terms of the contract, he secured an option to 4120 acres of land which, defendants agreeing and consenting, was purchased at $5 and $6 an acre. The total purchase price being $22,150. In cruising and locating this land plaintiff claims to have spent over $800. He afterwards received an offer for the sale of the same lands at $5 an acre, but the Lloyds would not agree to a sale at that price. The title to the land derived from the state of Oregon, the certificates of sale being held by S. A. D. Pater, who assigned the certificates to Lloyd at the time of the purchase. Plaintiff claims that the lands at the time they were purchased were worth $7.50 an acre, and that they are now worth $15 an acre. Plaintiff further alleges that the defendants, Lloyd, for the purpose of defrauding him of his interest in the property, did, on March 2, 1902, transfer and assign the certificates to one Willis H. Gilbert, who surrendered them to the state and received therefor deeds to the property, and that the deeds have not yet been filed for record, but are being held for the purpose of concealing the transaction.

The purpose of the action is to establish plaintiff's interest to the property in dispute. Plaintiff asks for a decree of the court decreeing him to be the owner of an undivided one-half interest in the lands, subject to the payment of one-half of the purchase price of the lands and 8 per cent interest, as provided for in the alleged contract, and that the whole of said lands be subject to the plaintiff's lien for the said sum, and that the defendant, W. H. Gilbert, be decreed to hold the said lands in trust for the plaintiff, to the extent of his interest therein. In his complaint plaintiff further alleges that he has repeatedly demanded from the defendants Lloyd a written contract setting forth the terms of the agreement under which they were operating, and that the same was refused.

BISHOP HANDY SAYS.

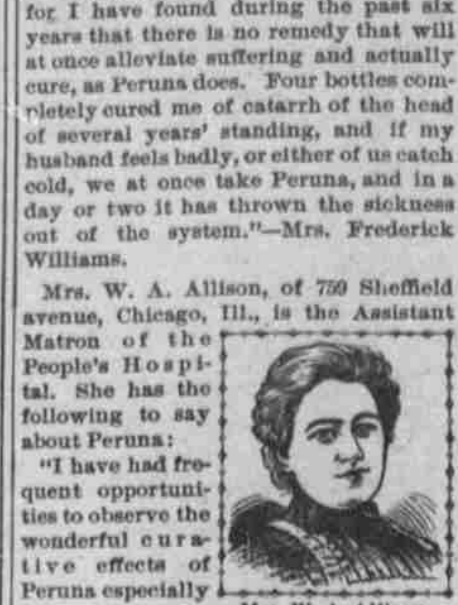

"I take great pleasure in acknowledging the curative effects of Peruna. At the solicitation of a friend I used your remedy and cheerfully recommend your Peruna to all who want a good tonic and a safe cure for catarrh."—JAMES A. HANDY.

Truulent members of the clergy are giving Peruna their unqualified endorsement. These men find Peruna especially adapted to preserve them from catarrh of the vocal organs which has always been the bane of public speakers, and general catarrhal debility incident to the sedentary life of the clergyman. Among the recent utterances of noted clergymen on the curative virtues of Peruna is the above one from Bishop James A. Handy, D. D., of Baltimore.
