WOMAN.

By Charles Hanson Towne.

You say that you are but a woman—you who are so very wonderful to me.

You tell me there is little you can do. Little indeed that all the world can see. There are no battles on the open plain. That you can fight, as I, a man, can fight. But who shall say your life is lived in vain.

If all my darkened days you have kept light?

Oh, little woman-heart, be glad, be glad.

That you are what God made you? Well I know.

How you have served me when the day was sad.

And made me better—yes, and kept me so!

Be very glad that you, in your white place.

Your little home, with folded hands can be.

A silent influence to whose source I trace.

The little good there ever was in me.

To be a woman! Is there any more?

That you have need to be from day to day?

How wonderful to have your heart, your store.

Of purity and goodness, and to say "One that I love is nobler since I came."

One that loves me is better for my sake?

A woman! Oh, there is no greater name.

That ever on mortal tongue shall wake!

At the Wild West show Thursday evening there were counted several dozen of young misses whose pretty contour of face was spoiled and tortured by a double-lash jaw movement, kept up during the whole performance. It is natural for the gentle bosom to be continually chewing her cud, but for the American girl to put herself on the same level is hardly becoming to womanly dignity.

Lady Florence Dixie, the poet, novelist, explorer and champion of woman suffrage, has written a letter to President Roosevelt on "Child Labor in America." In this letter she says that "while the millionaires are strutting and puffing about in fine linen and in an insufferable atmosphere of snobbish pomposity, thousands of mere nites are toiling hard all day and some all night, in mills and commercial shambles of the poor wherein the millionaires hatch their golden hordes." She asks the president to put down child slavery as Lincoln put down negro slavery. This appeal, coming from a class of the British nobility, who foster and thrive on just such conditions as described, must have struck the president as rather anomalous. Lady Dixie no doubt has despaired of finding a Lincoln in her own country.

Mr. Balfour, the new English premier, is a woman suffragist. Lord Salisbury, the retiring premier, was also a woman suffragist, and when the House of Lords amended the London government bill in 1899 to strike out woman suffrage, the premier was very indignant and declared the House of Lords was unfit to be trusted with the legislative business of the country.

The pugle questions which agitate the mind across the ocean are not so different from those in our own dear native land, and the question of equal suffrage is the straw which shows which way the wind blows.

Mrs. Lillian Cole Bethel has been engaged by the Baker City Woman's Club to give a course of parliamentary law drills in October.

A woman in Salem who hates men, calls every widow she knows a benefactress, because she has put at least one man under ground.

Mother Mary Katherine, founder and head of the Order of the Blessed Sacrament, formerly Miss Mary Katherine Drexel of Philadelphia, has furnished the money to secure control of the splendid hot springs at Cascade, near Hot Springs, S. D., and will erect at that place a large school where only Indian and negro children will be educated. The benefactress is the daughter of the former partner of Geo. W. Childs, and was prominent in Eastern society.

Mushroom clubs are being organized in the East. The purpose is to inquire into the distinguishing features of the fungi as to wholesomeness, edibility and its poisonous qualities.

"The difference between my husband's club and mine," said the pretty woman in the turquoise-colored toque, looking at her watch, "is that mine lasts from 2 to 6, and his from 6 to 2."

Women who abuse men advertise themselves social failures, remarks Max O'Rell. The woman who says that she never enjoyed the society of man is a woman who stupidly confesses that she had enough personal charms to attract the attention of men. After all, the knowledge of man possessed by women is very limited. When a woman asserts that man is incapable of true love and fidelity, it simply means that she never was able to inspire such love in any man, or that she had the misfortune of being jilted. Those things happen, and are personal experiences, nothing more. It is an undeniable truth that women who are beautiful speak well of men. If I were a woman, ever so homely, ever so neglected, a woman even, who had never put a word of love whispered into my ear I would not be such a fool as to admit it. I would speak well of man, and be a diplomatist.

Mothers of Gifted Men.

Raleigh said that he owed his politeness and deportment to his mother.

Chopin's mother, like himself, was very delicate.

Goethe pays several tributes in his writings to the character of his mother.

Gounod's mother was fond of painting and music.

Sydney Smith's mother was a very fair conversationalist and was very quick at repartee.

Schumann's mother was gifted with musical ability.

Haydn dedicated one of his most important instrumental compositions to his mother.

Charles Darwin's mother had a decided taste for all branches of natural history.

Gibbs's mother was passionately fond of reading and encouraged her son to follow her example.

Spahr's mother was an excellent judge of music, but no musician.

Wordsworth's mother had a character as peculiar as that of her gifted son.

Susan B. Anthony is writing a history of the woman's suffrage movement in this country.

American women are becoming more common in their ways and are nursing their own babies, just like an empress or a queen. The latest example of this sort is thus mentioned by a New York newspaper: "Following the example of the late Queen Victoria, of the Empress Frederick, of the present German Kaiserin, and of many other royal and imperial ladies in Europe, Mrs. John Jacob Astor is nursing her baby daughter herself."

It is always an open question as to whether or not mothers should select husbands for their daughters. Of course there is much to say on both sides.

The mother looks at the lover with unbiased views. Hers is no great, romantic love dream. She stands as a guardian to her daughter, watching her interests and always wary of undesirable suitors.

The daughter, on the other hand, has her own views on the subject.

She does not care whether he has money or what his faults may be. She likes his appearance, his conduct seems perfect—in fact, she is desperately in love. And with a girl in this condition most arguments are useless. Then it is the duty of the mother to step in with tactful diplomacy.

A mother should talk quietly to her daughter in love. It is not necessary for her to say, "I forbid your marrying this man." Any girl with spirit would immediately make up her mind that she would marry the man of her choice. Many girls have rushed into regrettable marriages simply on account of the treatment.

She should argue the points for and against sympathetically, but decisively. Then perhaps the young girl's eyes will open to the truth that there are other ingredients in the structure of marriage besides love.

TOIL AND SAVE.

Russel Sage is still struggling away trying to accumulate a few more dollars.

He has now more than he could spend in his way of living in a thousand years.

But what signifies that? Money making is his rest, his recreation, his hobby, his hope, his Heaven.

The spending of it is of little importance to him, in fact such a thought is foreign to his life.

When he was young he contracted the habit of toiling and saving. It proved profitable and he kept at it.

Now he is old, infirm, physically fat, with a mind active, yet he keeps right on toiling and saving as he did when a boy.

Dollars can do him no good now. He has passed the period when the world has little for him that money can buy, but little that can bring happiness or contentment of peace.

Careless toil and penny and avarice and greed and persecution have brought to Russel Sage wealth but they have not brought him wisdom save that wisdom that aided him in getting more dollars.

In a few short years he will have gone and a scramble for all that he has accumulated will be begun. He may tie it up in wills, provisions and codicils as he wishes, he cannot prevent it.

And it will not do much good. Its opportunities in this direction are very limited while its opportunities to wrong, injure and inflict sorrow and suffering are boundless.

It is well to toil and save. It is incumbent on all to do so but it is equally incumbent on us to know that there is a time to stop toiling and stop saving.

CONGRESSMAN CROWLEY

Uses Pe-ru-na in His Family For Catarrhal and Nervous Affections.

CONGRESSMAN J. B. CROWLEY.

Hon. Joseph B. Crowley, Congressman from Illinois, writes from Robinson, Ill., the following praise for the great catarrhal tonic, Pe-ru-na. Congressman Crowley says:

"After giving Pe-ru-na a fair trial I can cheerfully recommend my remedy to anyone suffering with coughs, colds and la grippe, and all catarrhal complaints."

"Mrs. Crowley has taken a number of bottles of Pe-ru-na on account of nervous troubles. It has proven a strong tonic and lasting cure. I can cheerfully recommend it."—J. B. CROWLEY.

No other remedy invented by man has ever received as much praise from men of high station as Pe-ru-na. Over forty members of Congress have tried it and recommended it as suffering humanity. They use it themselves to guard against the effects of the intense strain of public life; to ward off the ill effects of the changeable climate of Washington. They keep it in their homes for family use. They recommend it to their neighbors, and they do not hesitate in public print to declare their appreciation and endorsement of this greatest of modern remedies.

bottle of Pe-ru-na he seems like a different man."—Romulus Z. Linney.

Congressman A. T. Goodwyn, Robinson Springs, Ala., writes: "I have now used one bottle of Pe-ru-na and am a well man today."—A. T. Goodwyn.

U. S. Senator W. N. Roach from Louisiana, N. D., writes: "I have used Pe-ru-na as a tonic. It has greatly helped me in strength, vigor and appetite."

Congressman H. W. Ogden from Benton, La., writes: "I can conscientiously recommend your Pe-ru-na."—H. W. Ogden.

Congressman H. W. Smith from Murphyboro, Ill., writes: "I have taken one bottle of Pe-ru-na for my catarrh and I feel very much benefited."—Geo. W. Smith.

Congressman David Meekison from Napoleon, O., writes: "I have used several bottles of Pe-ru-na and feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head."—David Meekison.

Senator Mallory, of Pensacola, Fla., writes: "I have used your excellent remedy, Pe-ru-na, and have recommended it both as a tonic and a safe catarrh remedy."—Stephen R. Mallory.

Senator M. C. Butler, ex-Governor of South Carolina, writes: "I can recommend Pe-ru-na for dyspepsia and stomach trouble."—M. C. Butler.

Senator W. V. Sullivan from Oxford, Miss., writes: "I take pleasure in recommending your great national catarrh cure, Pe-ru-na, as the best I have ever tried."—W. V. Sullivan.

Senator J. M. Thurston from Omaha, Neb., writes: "Pe-ru-na entirely relieved me of a very irritating cough."—J. M. Thurston.

Congressman H. G. Worthington from Nevada, writes: "I have taken one bottle of Pe-ru-na and it has benefited me immensely."—H. G. Worthington.

Congressman Howard from Ft. Payne, Ala., writes: "I have taken Pe-ru-na for la grippe, and I take pleasure in recommending Pe-ru-na as an excellent remedy."—M. W. Howard.

Congressman Willis Brewer from Haynesville, Ala., writes: "I have used one bottle of Pe-ru-na for lassitude, and I take pleasure in recommending it."—Willis Brewer.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Pe-ru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.
