

KICKED BY A HORSE

AND SUFFERED NEARLY FORTY YEARS BEFORE THE BONE HEALED

"AM I ALL RIGHT? OF COURSE I'M ALL RIGHT," SAID MR. A. COOPER, OF POLK COUNTY, WHEN ASKED ABOUT HIS LEG WHICH WAS HURT WHEN HE WAS A BOY. "I WAS KICKED BELOW THE KNEE BY A HORSE IN 1860 WHEN A MERE BOY, AND SUFFERED FOR YEARS. IT ACHED TERRIBLY AND SOON BROKE; THEN PIECES OF BONE COMMENCED COMING OUT AND CONTINUED FOR ABOUT A YEAR. THIS WAS FOLLOWED

BY AN ATTACK OF TYPHOID, WHICH LEFT ME IN BAD SHAPE, I WAS OBLIGED TO USE CRUTCHES FOR OVER TWO YEARS FROM THAT TIME UNTIL I WAS CURED ABOUT SIX YEARS AGO I ALWAYS USED TWO CANES. THE DOCTORS TOLD ME THERE WAS NO HOPE FOR A CURE UNLESS I HAD MY LEG SPLIT AND SCRAPED AND THE CORDS CUT. SOME ALSO ADVISED AMPUTATION, BUT I REFUSED, AND FINALLY DR. COOK, THE BOTANICAL SPECIALIST OF SALEM, TOOK MY CASE. I BEGAN TO IMPROVE AT ONCE, AND IN SIX MONTHS MY LEG WAS WELL. IN FACT I FEEL THAT DR. COOK SAVED MY LIMB, AND I WANT EVERYBODY TO KNOW IT, FOR IT WAS A WONDERFUL CURE. SOON AFTER TREATMENT THE BLACK FLESH BEGAN TO GROW OUT OVER THE BONE WITH A HEALTHY COLOR."

PULLING A TOOTH.

(Written by J. H. Fletcher, Jefferson, Ore.)

I once firmly believed that pulling a tooth wasn't half so painful as most people said it was. When I saw a fellow going around with his head tied up in a handkerchief, I felt inclined to laugh at him. I fancied he made a great ado about nothing. And when I heard a fellow howl in a dentist's office, as the operator tugged at the forceps, I said to myself: "What a booby." I actually longed to have a hollow tooth, so I could show my friends what a hero I was.

I hadn't long to wait. One of my molars became very hollow, and I concluded to have it taken out by a dentist. I could have saved it by filling, but I didn't want to. I thought I would like to enjoy the sensation of having it pulled, in order to show the world what true bravery meant, and how I could despise pain, if the operation should be attended by any.

One day while eating a piece of plum pie I tackled a stone, and in attempting to bite it in two my hollow tooth broke off close to the gum—never to crack stones any more. For some days the root of the broken tooth kept up a steady growling. One night it stopped growling, and began to rage and rave and fear around in a very unbecoming manner. It ruffled my temper so badly that I jumped out of bed, and for an hour or two walked the floor, clad only in a cotton undershirt. Do what I could with camphor and clove oil, brandy and tobacco juice, it still kept up a steady rumbling until daylight, and so got beat out of a good night's sleep.

When daylight came I was so put out with this stub of a tooth that I decided to have it pulled forthwith. I invited some of my friends to come over to the dentist's and witness my stoicism during the performance, and I therefore slammed the door shut after me and was off to the place where I expected to win fresh laurels as a stern and unbending philosopher.

When I reached the office the boss butcher, for such I must call him, was absent. But a great big fellow, who sat in the corner, kindly informed me that he was well up in the business, and would remove the offending member if I so desired. He said he never saw a tooth that he couldn't fetch if the handle of his instrument didn't break and I believed him. So I told him to go ahead and began to whistle "Johnny Come Up" in a most vigorous and careless manner. He then asked me if I would be kind enough to seat myself in a cushioned chair that stood nearby. I did so. Then he regulated that I open my countenance; I obeyed. Then with one hand he held my nose while in the other he held a kind of a do-funny instrument, which he used in fishing out the root of my mutilated tooth.

"After a long and ingenious search he seized another deadly looking instrument. It made me feel somewhat uneasy and so I requested "Will it hurt?" and he replied, "Oh no" and that made me feel so glad that I had come. But a change soon came over the spirit of my dream, and I am compelled to say that I never met such a honey-tongued, coldblooded murderer in my life. Why he took that instrument and in attempting to get hold of that root he jammed it in to my gums with all his might. I didn't holler for two reasons, first, because my friends were watching me and second because I couldn't. But the worst of it was, that after he got hold of the root he missed fire. This was too much for me and after I came to be remarked very pleasantly "it kind of hurt a little didn't it?" "A little," said I. This I meant for red-hot irony, but he didn't see the point. Then another husky looking chap came in from the back room and suggested that it might hurt some before the root was "abstracted." I wanted to kill him but I decided not to attempt it until I got a little more strength.

Once more the murderer went for me. There was fire in his eye and determination in his face. It was a

Those Pale Girls

How many pale girls there are! Girls who have the will, but not the power to bring out their vitality. Doctors call it anaemia, which means poor blood. They are thin, delicate and nervous. Their digestion is usually poor, the appetite not all that it should be and they do not even get all the nourishment that is in the food that they do eat. They linger between strength and weakness with no certainty as to what change a day will bring forth.

Scott's Emulsion is for all such girls. The hypophosphites combined with the cod liver oil will tone up the system, give the blood new life, improve the appetite and help digestion. Above all it gives nourishment.

Girls are more liable to anaemia than boys; this is because the blood of women contains fewer red corpuscles, more water and less albumen and salts than the blood of men. Scott's Emulsion seems to be the very thing to discount these differences. It helps all pale, thin girls when nothing else will.

war of physical force. It meant conquer or die. I never knew before what strength there was in a jawbone but could now understand why Sampson took the jawbone of an ass in the business of demolishing the Philistines.

But there was nothing small about the dentist. He put his whole strength, his whole energy, his very life into the business, but in spite of all his efforts, his second attempt was no more successful than the first. The chunky fellow said that the only remark he heard me make was "Oh Lord!" But I don't believe him for I am not in the habit of calling on strangers.

The operator now took a long rest. Poor fellow! I felt sorry for him, for he was very kind. As I couldn't well do anything else I rested too. After a time he proceeded to business again. I saw by his eye, which was red with fire, that there was going to be blood on the moon this time—that victory was already in the air. He straightened himself up to his full height, set his teeth on edge, and with an air of defiance which as much as said "I've played with you long enough old fellow, but I mean business now." It was a desperate struggle that followed. I have a faint recollection that he swooped down on me like a hawk upon a spring chicken or a hungry kingfisher after a trout. The hot iron dug into the flesh of my jaw and I tried to raise myself up the chunky fellow bounced into my lap and grasped my hands in his iron grip.
