Mr. Sigmond expects to be able to catch up with the work and succeed in recording the instruments as they may be presented. LEGISLATIVE HALLS ARE ABANDONED

Usual Quiet Is Restored at Capital

Legislators to Attend Tongue Funeral

In the governor's office today an unusual quiet for the first time since the legislative and Governor Chamberlain and his secretary are beginning to push the routine work of the office. The press of candidates and their friends has let up a little, and although it is understood that no appointments of any significance will be made until after the session of the legislature has adjourned, his knowledge, in the goodness of his heart, is spring abundance to all corners. Everyone is pleased with the uniform courtesy with which petitions for places are being received, and it is predicted by the governor's friends that, notwithstanding all the party and other pressure being brought to bear, the list of appointments, when they come will command the highest respect.

Matters about the capital building are exceptionally quiet today, as most of the members of the legislature have either gone home or to Portland, where they will proceed tomorrow to Hillsboro to attend the Tongue funeral.

Mrs. Shelton, of Portland, spouse together to Governor Chamberlain, has assumed her duties, succeeding to the position vacated by Miss Mabel Davy of this city who served in the same capacity under the former governor.

The interior of the state house and the various departments never appeared more tidy and inviting than they do at this season, and this is due largely to the active force of janitors that has charge of the building. The most scrutinizing visitor cannot detect a particle of dust or disorder anywhere, which attests at least one excellent housekeeping quality of Jacobus-Chief Newton.

The state printer's office is flooded with bills and a large force of typewriters is disposing of the work with dispatch. State Printer Whitney has the work well in hand with a fully and well organized force and by the time the house re-convenes Monday morning will have his desks pretty well cleaned up and ready for another avalanche of bills that is certain to follow a three days' cessation in the continuous sessions of the state's legislators.

Funeral Was Held Today

Funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. George V. Griswold were held at the family home, corner of Fourteenth and Lee streets, at 10 o'clock this morning. Many of the friends and neighbors of the deceased were present to pay a final tribute to the memory of the departed, who will be missed by many friends without the family circle. There were many floral tributes. The services were conducted by the Rev. H. A. Ketchum of the first Presbyterian church, of this city, and burial took place in the City View cemetery. The pallbearers were...
