AN ECONOMICAL LUXURY.

Is a good, wholesome, delicious beverage, like Salem beer. It's a luxury to taste—not to the pocketbook, for its price is extremely moderate, its excellence considered. The care as to quality of ingredients, care in making of this beer warrant a much higher price than others per case of a dozen bottles; yet that's the price of our beer.

Knute Erickson, the Swedish-American comedian, will open at the Grand opera house on Friday evening. He uses this season a new play, "The Man from Sweden," from the pen of Chas. Newman. This attraction is heralded as one of the best comedy drama productions of the year and Managers Broadhurst & Currie have spared no expense in the matter of care, scenic equipment and costumes. Mr. Erickson, who portrays the role of Carl Anderson is without an equal as a Swedish dialect comedian and in several scenes with which he has been supplied, gives ample promise of distinguishing himself in other lines. He has been surrounded by an excellent supporting company, among whom are Hector Dion, Chas. Malles, Fred L. Powers, W. S. Cetti, Mark Thomson, Harry Leddy, Fred Beichert, Wm. Wallace, The Novelty Comedy Four, Marie Steers, Lillian Maynard, Sophia Howell and Little Beatrice. Seats on sale at Boxoffice Friday at 9 a. m. Prices 75c, 50c, 35c.

ANDREW CARNEGIE LIBRARY

Objected to By a Laboring Man

Wants Something Besides Books to Eat

Ed. Journal: I notice that the Statesman is urging the people of Salem to apply to Andrew Carnegie for a library for the city. For one, I do not want any of the old oppressor's books. And I trust the friends of labor have too much manhood and self-respect to accept anything of this nature from his hands. The suggestion of the Statesman is too contemptible and humiliating for a moments consideration. Like John A. Rockefeller and his donations to a Baptist college Andrew Carnegie, the crusher of labor and scourge of the poor, seeks to appease the wrath of God and avert the vengeance of the oppressed by establishing libraries among the people with the money he wrung from the sweat and toll of his employes. We want none of his blood money in the form of public libraries.

As the old oppressor nears the end of his grasping and avaricious career, he, no doubt, desires to prevent his infamy by establishing libraries among the people. By this means he hopes to be classed among the world's benefactors. But the effort will be vain. Wherever one of his library buildings can be seen the children of the laboring people for generations to come will point the finger of scorn at it and exclaim, "There stands a monument of the 19th century tyrant, erected by the sweat and toll, the blood and tears of unpaid labor." This is the kind of immortality Andrew Carnegie is sure to receive.

If Andrew Carnegie wishes his name to escape the execration of mankind, let him send out some of his ill-gotten plunder to feed those he has impoverished, to clothe those he has left naked. Let him, if he will, take away the tears from the cheek of unpaid labor, for to the helpless arms of the laboring poor he owes all that he has. The people cannot eat books, they would scarcely care to swallow volumes blistered with a widow's tears and red with the blood of famished children. Literature is now brought down within the reach of the poor and they need none of Carnegie's "filthy lucre" to store their minds with useful knowledge. I trust the labor unions and the laboring people will scout any such proposition. For my part, I would as soon accept a gift from the devil. Brother laborers what you say. ORWELL.

Convict White Believed Dead

Sheriff Lee, of the state penitentiary, left his morning for Toledo, Lincoln county, where he goes to identify a burglar who was killed at Eddyville, and who is believed to be E. J. White, the Coos county burglar, who eloped from the state penitentiary about three weeks ago. The following message was received by Mr. Lee last night from Sheriff J. H. Ross, of Lincoln county: "Burglar killed at Eddyville who must be White. Will you send man to identify him?" Sheriff Ross has for a number of days been in pursuit of a man answering the description of White, and he believes he has finally landed the escaped convict.
