SOME PROGNOSTICATIONS By Miss Linn Wardell.

The year 1904 will be a very disastrous one, fires in hotels, theaters, and public places will occasion great loss of life; train wrecks will be more frequent and severe, and will be followed by a more systematic working plan in railroad circles; conditions seeming to indicate great improvements which will lessen the liability of such disasters.

The next war will be declared to uphold the Monroe doctrine. We want no more islands. Although strikes will not be so frequent and prolonged, there will be trouble between labor and capital, also great agitation in the religious world. Conditions finally culminating in the greatest war the world has ever witnessed. From this, America especially, will arise a regenerated nation. A new era will have begun in which mankind will reach a point of perfection never known before. Social questions will be settled equitably. It will no longer seem a mockery to see the Goddess of Liberty in our Halls of Justice. Disease will be a crime, for then man will have learned sufficient about the Laws of Nature and of Life not to err. Arbitration must prevail between labor and capital. Congress will take the matter up and then the country will not suffer, in the future as it has in the past, from strikes.

There will be an immense find of gold on American territory that will make the Klondike discovery sink into insignificance.

Theodore Roosevelt will be renominated and elected president of the United States by an overwhelming majority.
