DOCTOR EPLEY GOT EVEN

Editor Wanted Painless Dentistry

But Received an Old Fashioned Yank on the Jaw

Friday last ex-Governor Fletcher came to the city on business, the chief part of which was to have a disobedient tooth extracted. Some one asked him to what dentist he was going. He said he thought he would patronize Dr. Epley, for two reasons: The first was that if he got hold of a tooth it was sure to come out; the second was that he had heard that the doctor had a new process, which enabled him to draw a tooth without a particle of pain, and besides he believed that the doctor was just as gentle as the other fellows of quarter his size.

It was not long until the Santiam hero found himself in Dr. Epley's office. After exchanging the usual greetings, the governor said: "Doctor, I want you to pull a tooth for me, as I understand you can do so without pain." "That's what I can," said the doctor, "please be seated in this chair." The governor obeyed. "Open your mouth," said the dentist. Then taking him by the hair, he reached for his forceps. "Ain't you going to apply the battery first," said the ex-editor. "I guess not," replied the doctor. "Why not?" "Well," continued the doctor, "only a short time ago I read an article of yours in the Journal on 'Drawing a Tooth,' and in that article you were pretty hard on my profession. I have now got you where I want you. It's a long lane that has no turn in it. I'll draw your tooth, but not by the new painless process. You don't deserve it, and you'll have to suffer," saying which he applied the forceps to the offending molar, and in the twink of an eye held it up before the astonished editor, who again saw all the stars in the universe. "Well, that's one on me," said the knight of the quill. "It's all right, doctor. I deserved it. I am so thankful to you doctor that you did not pull out a sound one. Many a man would under the circumstances. All I have to say is that you made a mighty good job of it, although it stung like the dickens."

"All right, governor," replied the doctor. "We're square now. When you want a tooth drawn again I hereby promise you that I will apply my new painless process to it, and remove the offending member without your knowing it."

"Thank you," said the governor. "You're all right, doctor, for I shall certainly give you all my work in this line in the future. Good bye, old fellow. But see here, for heaven's sake, never say anything about this to anyone." "Never," said the doctor, and they parted the best of friends in the world.

Guarantees.

Having taken several trips in the last two weeks' nice weather, I came across parties who bought organs and sewing machines from 12 and 13 years ago. Thinking, as they had them over five years, they would have to pay to have them looked over and cleaned, and one was waiting for some one to come around that could do it. They were surprised when I cleaned them and placed everything in order, and did not charge them anything. To those who have bought of me, no matter when I consider it a special favor to me, if everything is not as it ought to be, to let me know, and I will attend to it willingly, as it is to my interest to see that all goods sold by me are in the best possible shape, nor am I afraid to make this sweeping statement, as I know the kind of goods I sold.

WOMAN'S DUTIES.

A woman who keeps her house in order and has the care of a family, has just as much responsibility as the man who provides the means to carry on the housekeeping. She is deserving of the more credit since the demands on her strength is greater. The everlasting sameness about her duties, and the confinement necessary to carry them out is very trying to the nervous system, this produces a strain on the mind that makes her irritable, cross, and dissatisfied, which is just as much a disease as rheumatism or catarrh. If nerves can be built up and made strong by medicine of some kind this feeling is changed to one of cheerfulness and pleasure in her duties. The medicine that makes strong steady nerves, and prevents disease by building up the entire system, is Dr. Gunn's Blood and Nerve Tonic, a tablet to take at meal time. Cures nervous prostration by making rich red blood, feeding the nerves, and making solid flesh at the rate of 1 to 2 1/2 lbs per week. This medicine is sold by druggists for 75c per box, or 3 boxes for $2.00, or sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. Write us about your case. Address Dr. Bosanko Co., Philadelphia, Pa. For sale at Dr. Stone's Drug Stores.
