MR. OLE OLSON COMING

Hendricks is to Bring Him Here

An Old Play, But one That is Always Welcome

Pathos, Humor, Wit and New Catchy Songs

Ben Hendricks, who brings to the Grand opera house next Friday night his quaint and artistic portraiture of the young Swedish immigrant, as he is known in the lumber camps of Wisconsin and Michigan, and in the grain fields of the Dakotas, has had a wide and varied stage experience for one who is yet young in years.
In Buffalo, his home, the fever first attacked him, and "Evangeline" that nursery of famous careers, saw his first appearance on the thespian carpet, or, perhaps, "grass mats;" and it is a goodly and honored company that graduated from the "Evangeline" burlesque—Nat Goodwin, W.H. Crane, Henry Dixey, Richard Golden, George Fortesque, George S. Knight—these and many others lent their talents to the famous old "heifer" extravaganza. It was as a Madral boy in "Evangeline" that Mr. Hendricks made his first essay as an actor and he attracted the notice of the Meech Brothers, then the managers of the Academy of Music, in Buffalo, and was retained by them as "stock boy" for several seasons, appearing at various times with Booth, Barrett, Jefferson, Salvini, Annie Pixley, and others. Later he made successes in the casts, "Mr. Barnes of New York," "The Prisoner of Zenda," "Too Much Johnson," (in the London production of which he took part with William Gillette), and many other plays. An apt student of dialects and racial characteristics, he soon made a name in dialect parts, and finally turned his attention, at the instance of the late Gus Heege, to Swedish comedy. He has starred in every Swedish play of any distinction that has been produced in this country. In "Ole Olson" he found the widest scope for his work, which is a blending of comedy and pathos; and it is as the rough but ready Ole that he is best known.

Oklahoma's Rapid Growth.
Oklahoma City, Okla., April 22.—Today Oklahoma entered upon its 15th year, it being on this date that the first installment of Indian lands was opened to white settlers. Added to the first small tract thrown open to settlement were the adjacent Indian lands opened from time to time until today the territory has an area equal to that of the state of Ohio. Today the territory has a population of 400,000 and the assessed valuation of property exceeds $50,000,000. When Oklahoma was born only one railroad traversed the territory; now there are nearly a dozen with many branches and extensions in progress of construction.

DROPSY

Do Your Ankles or Limbs Swell? Are Your Eyes Puffy? We are the Sole Agents for the Only Thing Known That Cures the Kidney Disease That Causes Dropsy, viz.: Fulton Compounds.

It is now well known that dropsy is not in itself a disease, but is nearly always a symptom of kidney disease that accompanies the chronic stages heretofore incurable. Recent up to the discovery of the Fulton Compounds, dropsy was incurable. It is now, however, curable in nearly nine-tenths of all cases. Here is an interesting recovery, to which we refer by permission.
Mrs. Peter Goybenik of 208 Fillmore street, San Francisco, became alarmingly dropsical. Her physician had finally to tap her every few days. She was tapped nearly forty times and grew worse from day to day. The physician finally told her husband that she had Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, that it was an inveterate chronic state and beyond medical aid. Her heart also gave her the usual trouble and she was in such a serious condition the relatives were sent for. They put her on Fulton's Compound. It stayed on the stomach the first thing that had done so for a week. The second week the dropsy declined a little and the improvement was then gradual till her recovery was complete. This case was examined and reported by the San Francisco Star and the Overland Monthly, and the genuineness of the case and the recovery were fully attested to their columns.
Mrs. Thomas Christ of 424 Twenty-seventh street, San Francisco, was also swollen with dropsy, as the result of chronic kidney disease to which she seventy-five pounds beyond her normal weight and had to be moved in sheets and was close to death's door although she had four physicians. She was put on the Fulton Compound. There was a marked improvement and in six months she was well, and permits this reference.
If you have dropsy don't despair. There is only one thing known that will cure the chronic kidney disease that is behind it and that is Fulton's Compound. The Royal Compound for Bright's and Kidney Disease, St. Louis, Mo., is sold by J. J. Fulton Co., 629 Washington street, San Francisco, sole proprietors. Use it for dropsy. We are the sole agents for this city.

When Kansas was Young.

Some old-timers got together in the office of the Marysville News the other day and swapped stories about the pioneer days of Marshall county. Two of the stories told by O. E. Gould now of Blue Rapids, had to do with the loose methods of matrimony which prevailed when Kansas society was in its formative stage. Over on Buck Snort creek two homesteaders lived side by side. They were friends and their wives were also chummy. By and by it became observable to each of the husbands that his own wife had a penchant for the other man. At the same time it was observed by the wives that each of the husbands enjoyed the society of the other man's wife rather more than the society of his own. So the four got together one day and amicably agreed to trade spouses, each of the husbands taking the other man's wife to his domicile when the deal had been completed. Mr. Gould said the newly mated pairs dwelt happily for many years on friendly terms with each other.
Mr. Gould told another story along the same line, reported by the News as follows:
"Alexander ——— and his wife lived in the Buck Snort neighborhood. They got along fairly well together until Luther ——— came into the neighborhood. Alexander's wife loved Luther better than she did Alexander, and agreed to get a divorce from him and marry Luther. Alexander objected and threatened to fight the divorce proceedings. Luther compromised with Alexander by giving him a calf in exchange for the wife and a consent to the divorce. The divorce was procured and Luther and the woman were married by Justice Gould. The wife here referred to was a sister of one of the Buck Snort husbands who had traded wives."—Kansas City Journal.

Catholic Archbishop's Meeting.
Washington, D. C., April 22.—The Catholic Archbishops of the United States and a number of the prominent clergy are assembled in the city to attend the annual meetings of the board of trustees of the Catholic University and of the Archbishops. Among the well known prelates in attendance are Archbishop Farley of New York, Quigley of Chicago, Riordan of San Francisco, Ireland of St. Paul, and Keane of Dubuque.

The meeting of the university trustees will be made notable by the installation tomorrow of the new rector Mgr. Denis F. O'Connell, and the laying of the corner stone of the new Paulist house of studies, which is to be a training school for Catholic mission priests. There are several questions before the archbishops that will make their present meeting one of unusual importance. Foremost among these is the demand from Rome for American missionaries in the Philippines and in Porto Rico, and a question hardly second to it is Italian spiritual care, the number of Italian Catholics coming to America at this time breaking all records. Another subject to receive attention is that of socialism, whose rapid strides in some parts of the country has attracted the attention of the Roman Catholic church authorities.

McNary in Jail.
Contrary to expectations, Tom McNary was taken down to St. Paul and sentenced by the justice there to pay a fine of $200, in default of paying which fine he was sent to the county jail for 100 days.

It was the intention of the Salem authorities to commit him to the asylum, the only proper place for the detention of an inebriate who is not otherwise a criminal. It is to be hoped that may still be done.

STORY OF SEEDLESS ORANGES

There was a Woman in the Case

First Were Brought From Brazil 30 Years Ago

Considered a Freak Until Tibbetts got Them

The story of the cultivation of the seedless orange in the United States may properly begin with the time when, over a third of a century ago, Mrs. Nellie Desmond, of Syracuse, N. Y., returned from a visit to her brother in a rubber camp along the Amazon, near Bahia, Brazil. She brought with her to this country, as curiosities, several little seedless oranges which grew upon a clump of freak orange trees near her brother's camp. The commissioner of agriculture of our government, at that time, Mr. Horace Capron, heard of Mrs. Desmond's curios, and after some correspondence with her, instructed the United States consul at Bahia to procure some of the small orange trees and send them to the agricultural department at Washington. This was done and there, in the experimental garden, they remained for several years, and whence three were sent to an orange planter in Florida. These were never heard from.
It is just thirty years ago, that Luther C. Tibbetts, hearing that fertile government land might be had free in Southern California by actual settlement upon it, removed from Maine and took up a quarter section in that part which is now the city of Riverside.

Tibbetts Got Three Years.
Among the plants and trees which Mr. Tibbetts secured from the department of agriculture—and he fared well in this regard because of the relationship which his wife bore to General Butler, then a member of congress—were the three remaining seedless orange trees from Bahia. Mr. Tibbetts was to report occasionally how his trees and plants fared in the new and untried horticultural field.

He planted the orange trees along side of his cabin, and this marks the epoch of the first horticultural efforts in that region of the state. One of the tiny trees was chewed up by a cow, but Tibbetts watched carefully, watered and cultivated the remaining ones, and in 1877, five years later, each tree bore two oranges—the first seedless, or "navel" oranges ever grown outside of the Amazon swamps—and two of which, after having ripened were cut open in the presence of a little company of orange growers at Riverside. The next year the harvest of the two trees increased twenty fold, and, from that time, the name and fame of Tibbetts seedless oranges spread throughout Southern California, though for the most part the growers believed the seedless fruit to be a short-lived curiosity.
He Budded the Grove.
Mr. Tibbetts, however, had full faith in his new variety, and budded an entire grove to the seedless, and, after a year or so, sent samples and buds to the fruit growers and horticulturists throughout the southern part of the state. In 1886, the "Lucky" Baldwin grove of seventy-five acres was planted in the "navel" fruit, and was the first recognition of its commercial superiority. By 1888, over 5000 acres of sheep and cattle range had been turned into navel orange groves. The enormous price paid for the fruit set the growers wild, and by two years later 800,000 trees had been planted, and incredibly large profits were made. The most remarkable real estate boom in the history of our country was the result; land which had gone begging ten years before at $20 an acre, sold readily at $800 and $1000 an acre when its adaptability to navel orange production was shown. Towns sprang up in a night, almost the railroads taking some 12,000 people monthly to that section. Everybody talked navel orange production and the immense profits in the business, and large fortunes were made in a few years. A dozen communities of from 6000 to 10,000 inhabitants have grown up from barren tracts because of the expansion of the orange trade brought about by the cultivation of the navel orange—called "navel" because of the resemblance of the blossom end of the fruit to the human navel.
Crop Worth Millions.
The two parent trees of Tibbetts' stand there still, with a fence about them—the trees which revolutionized the orange markets of the world—and many a millionaire and an army of less wealthy though independently rich people owe their fortunes to these two trees and to Tibbetts' generosity. Today the railroads are earning almost $5,000,000 annually in freight charges on seedless oranges, and some $57,000,000 has been invested in the industry. Nineteen-twentieths of the entire orange production of both California and Florida are seedless navels.

Full instructions about preparation of soil, growing of plants, planting the crop, cultivation, fertilization, picking and packing the crop, shipping and markets treated fully in separate chapters.

And what has been Tibbetts' share in this great increase of wealth production? He became involved in litigation concerning the irrigation of his property, and that consumed his entire assets and several years of his life. He mortgaged his grove in order to secure funds to enable him to travel with his invalid wife; the mortgage was foreclosed and his property taken. Today he is a homeless, white-haired public charge; and every day he may look out of his window of the county poor house and see vast orange groves and magnificent mansions—the groves of his own county receiving an annual profit of $3,000,000—and reflect on the part he has taken in the creation of all this wealth, and beauty, and luxury, none of which was evident when, thirty years ago, he set out his little seedless fruit trees alongside his cabin in the lonely, unbailed Riverside valley.

Separate Schools in Kansas.
Kansas, the great state over whose admission so much trouble was caused in ante-bellum days and which was the home of the thousands of negroes who sought safety when they escaped from slavery, has practically commenced a color and race reform. On Thursday of last week the supreme court of that state decided that the Topeka board of education can maintain separate schools for white and negro children and can compel the negro children to attend the negro schools. A colored man had taken his son to the white school and the pupil was refused admittance. Mandamus proceedings were then brought against the board to compel them to admit the negro. The supreme court held that the negro pupil must attend the negro school.

HAIR NATURALLY ABUNDANT.
When it is Free of Dandruff, it Grows Luxuriantly.

Hair preparations and dandruff cures, as a rule, are sticky or irritating affairs that do no earthly good. Hair, when not diseased, grows naturally luxuriantly. Dandruff is the cause of nine-tenths of all hair trouble, and dandruff is caused by a germ. The only way to cure dandruff is to kill the germ; and, so far, the only hair preparation that will positively destroy the germ is Newbro's Herpicide—absolutely harmless, free from grease, sediment, dye matter or dangerous drugs. It allays itching instantly; makes hair glossy and soft as silk. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect"—dandruff.
