Buttonholes are the bane of a bachelor's (married man's, as well) existence. No wonder the blankety-blanks are forthcoming. Don't worry, don't fume, don't swear. Simply let us do the laundering, and the collar bands will remain intact until the end of the chapter. We are thinking of offering a prize for buttonholes despoiled here.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MISS GENEVIEVE WILSON.

"The Heroine of Manila" Is Now a Health Inspector.

Miss Genevieve Wilson, society girl, army nurse, ministering angel to stricken soldiers in the far east, is health inspector for the civic sanitation of the Oranges, that wealthy residential section of New Jersey.

A woman of many titles is Miss Wilson, not bestowed by the government or incorporated institutions, but conferred on her by her admirers in the various sections of the world in which she has lived and worked. She is one of Virginia's fair daughters. Her father was a Confederate officer, and none had better claim to the title of "southern belle" than she.

She held her court among the young men and women of Virginia until she determined to forego the pleasures of the ballroom for the arduous duties of a hospital nurse. To fit herself for the

MISS GENEVIEVE WILSON.

Caring for the sick of all nationalities she went abroad and mastered the German, Italian and French languages. Returning to America, she took up her course in St. Luke's hospital, Denver, where she won from admiring doctors the title of "Little Wonder." At the outbreak of the Spanish war she volunteered with the Red Cross and went immediately to Chickamauga. Her next step was to enter the service of the United States government as army nurse.

For one year she was stationed in the Philippines, and her brave deeds among the wounded soldiers there won the title of "the Heroine of Manila." Next she was sent to Nagasaki, where grateful patients named her "Angel." Seven months she spent in the land of the mikado, and when she was ordered home again she had made the circle of the globe.

Her last government appointment was at Fort Bayard, N. J., which position she relinquished to go to the Oranges.

New Jersey is determined to decrease the death list from contagious diseases, and Miss Wilson's specific work is to carry out the plans of the Civic Sanitation Association. Philadelphia Press.

The Art of Dressing.

Women generally do not do justice to pretty gowns because they have not learned how to put on their things smartly or even neatly. They have acquired the art of dress, but not the still more subtle art of dressing. Patience does hard in what has been termed our "great democracy." Even if money is abundant there is a rooted feeling that "true piety" can only be expressed by dowdiness. Dowdiness is a disease and a deadly one. It has its chief seat in the head (inside and outside) and in the neck, and is also the result of our too faithful fondness for old and shabby clothes.

To escape it one must avoid the Scylla of an untidy, unfashionably dressed head and the Charybdis of a badly arranged neck. A smart woman has all her gowns made at home, and yet she is never a dowdy. And why? Because she knows how to put them on. Her hair is well done, her neck smartly swathed, and her veils, gloves, shoes and boots are always fresh and perfect of their kind. Dowdies are born, not made. An undue humility has much to answer for. The typical "woman of no importance" soon goes to pieces on the rock of dowdiness. A few gowns, but many accessories, are an antidote to this dread disease.

False Ambition.

Ambition is an excellent thing, but unless its object is higher than to fit one merely for society then it is another name for foolish pride. No one can happily shine in society whose character is not of the right sort. Otherwise the shine soon wears off, showing the poor material beneath it. There are some women who enter into some kind of philanthropic work simply for the sake of the notoriety it will give them and not for the love of it. The highest ambition of some mothers is to have their daughters brilliant belles of society who will capture rich husbands. If their expectations are not realized, they become hopelessly disappointed. If the daughters had been trained in those gentle virtues that were overlooked for more showy accomplishments, they would undoubtedly have proved themselves more charming and agreeable companions. Unless a girl has a pure, noble and delightful character, then all her other accomplishments must fail to bring success.

Mending Embroideries.

A word as to mending embroideries. You should have with your pieces some narrow strips of fine cambric for mending edgings. Hem a strip neatly just below the scallops and also to the facing of the garment, gathering at the latter place, if the embroidery is gathered. Then, if the slit is just at the point where the edging joins the garment, it will be easy to hem the edge of the garment to the re-enforced embroidery, taking pains to distribute the gathers. If the break is farther up in the work, a neat darn must be put in. When you have your embroidery thus protected, it will wear as long as the fabric itself—a desirable thing, for nothing is more slovenly than to see a garment minus half its trimming or with the edging caught to it in such a manner as to lose half its width. In sections are mended in the same way, being careful to have your strip of cambric wide enough to reach both sides of the insertion.

Mushroom Pincushion.

As a rival to the radish, tomato, apple and tiny pumpkin, which, fashioned of silk, appear on lady's dressing table as pincushions, the mushroom has made its debut. This is the quaintest and most captivating of all these reproductions and if it is skillfully made looks as if truly a woodland trophy. It is composed of cream colored silk, the top or umbrella stuffed with cotton to make it suitable to stick pins into. The mushroom is tinted skillfully in water colors, a shade of brownish yellow being used. The base of the pincushion consists of several tiny cushions of silk to suggest the fungus growth from which the mushroom springs. The "umbrella" is supported on a slender stalk of wire, covered with white silk.

A Clever Suggestion.

A hose attachment supplying two or three inches of small rubber pipe to the kitchen sink faucet and ending in a common spray nozzle will be found a great assistance to cleanly dishwashing. The force of the stream penetrates corners and seams of tinware not easily reached by the usual methods and does it so well that the most indifferent maid will welcome the service. It is in the corners and seams of cooking utensils that bits of food sometimes remain to decompose and perhaps produce ptomaine poisoning.

A Hint to Home Dressmakers.

A little mother, whose home duties are numerous and onerous as well, saves herself much time by a pleasant bit of thought which all mothers with growing daughters are sure to appreciate. In making her little girl's dresses she takes a large tuck in the under side of the hem, and when the small girl is crawling up to the knees, instead of ripping out the hem and going to all the trouble of putting it in again, she has only to cut the stitches in the tuck and the little tuck is lengthened.

Shrunken Finings.

It is possible to wash flannels without shrinking them, but the average laundress does not know the process. Therefore it is worth while to know how to restore shrunken garments to their original size or something like it. Try laying the article to be restored on the ironing board and lay on it a piece of cheesecloth which has been wrung out of cold water. Press with a hot iron until the cheesecloth is perfectly dry. The garment will show a marked improvement.

A Door Stop.

Much damage may be done to a wall paper or even to the wall itself by the banging of a door handle or key against it. An easy device for preventing this, and a homemade one, is to take an empty spool, to pad the top with some wadding and to cover it all with some material as nearly matching the carpet in color as possible, then pass a brass headed nail through the spool and drive it into the floor a few inches from the wall or where you wish the door to stop.

Bedroom Windows.

Every bedroom window should be provided with a dark green shade to keep out the early morning sunlight. It need not be a heavy holland shade, which keeps out air as well as light. Side curtains of dark cheesecloth hung from a rod underneath the white shade are soft and thin enough to draw out of sight against the window frame and are effective in creating a dim, religious light, conducive to slumber.

Cooking a Steak.

There is a right and wrong way to cook beefsteak. The wrong way is to put it in a cold pan and cook it for some time on one side, thus permitting the juice to escape. The right way is to put it in a pan containing a little boiling fat and to turn it at the end of a minute or so, thus sealing both sides and retaining all juice.

A Dangerous Practice.

A common and dangerous practice is to throw outer garments on the bed. Considering that they come in contact with all sorts of undesirable objects, this is inimical to daintiness if to nothing else. Clothing worn during the day should be removed from the bedroom at night.

Inflamed, weak and sore eyes, pimples and catarrh may all be "passed on" by the use of the family towel. The individual towel is a hygienic necessity.

There are now twenty-nine women of title in England who were American girls, including four duchesses and two countesses.

For cleaning lamp chimneys use a soap made by tying a sponge on a snop stick.

The disorderly girl will make a disorderly woman.

WHAT TIME PROVES.

This thing of being sick and looking for a cure is a mighty serious business. People are not given to joking even at the first symptom of the approach of the grim destroyer. They do not want to be the subjects of experiment, but want medicine that has been the test of years behind it. A medicine that has been made and used for 20 years gives assurance of its worth, and can be taken with a faith that they have the very best cure the world affords. All this can be said about Dr. Gunn's Improved Liver Pills as a remedy for sick-headache, dyspepsia and indigestion, it begins right at the source of the trouble and removes the cause. We will send a sample box of these pills free, or a full box on receipt of 25c. Sold by all druggists for 25c per box, or address Dr. Bosanko Co., Philadelphia, Pa.
