Has a Wife the Right to Visit the Same Places Her Husband Holds Forth In

Here is a little story told by the Coast Mail, perhaps not an uncommon one, yet full of pathos. It is reprinted, not to advertise the saloon, the woman or the parties in the case, but for the readers of The Journal to study on. It might be instructive if the Journal family of readers would express their opinion and the conclusions they arrive at from the story. It certainly has a moral, it may have many, but what?

Justice of the Peace Hyde's court was busy all yesterday afternoon with the case of the State of Oregon vs. E. E. Ferry, charged with assault and battery, the act constituting the alleged offense being the forcible ejection of Mrs. George Nelson from his saloon, the Blanco Bar, on Thursday evening. The defendant was given a jury trial, resulting in a verdict of "not guilty."

The jury was as follows: I. A. Hall, foreman; Nicholas Reichert, Marvin R. Brown, Wm. Nasburg, Alfred Matson and W. L. Condon. Deputy District Attorney Farrin conducted the prosecution, W. H. Douglas and C. A. Clark the defense.

The prosecuting witness, Mrs. George Nelson, told her story substantially as follows: Her husband, Frank Nelson, had been in the habit of going into the saloon, drinking and gambling, and she had been trying to keep him from doing so, and to keep him away from "those men," who, she thought, had a bad influence over him. On this occasion she met her husband at the back door of the saloon, as he was going in. She laid her hand on his arm, and tried to persuade him not to go in, but he insisted and she walked in through the card room, and into the barroom with him, and tried to get him to go out. He told her to keep away from him, or he would "land on" her. Emerson Ferry came from behind the bar, and ordered her out of the saloon. She told him she would go if her husband would go with her. Ferry took hold of her and threw her out through the swinging doors leading into the office of the hotel, using a great deal of violence, and creating so much disturbance that W. H. Short, proprietor of the hotel, came running to see what the racket was about. As she was being roughly handled by Ferry she called on her husband to protect her, but he made some reply indicating approval of Ferry's action. She also testified to a conversation with Wm. Creason, a handy man about the hotel, yesterday morning, in which he agreed with her that she had been thrown out in a "horribly violent" manner, and said he would so testify.

Wm. Creason was placed on the stand by the prosecution, and said there had been nothing rough or violent about the way she was put out. This was a fiasco for Ferry, but he was not allowed to impeach his own witness.

E. E. Ferry, defendant, gave his version of the affair. Said the lady had been making it unpleasant for every one about the house, and had broken up games in the saloon. Nelson was standing in front of the bar when the lady came in, and asked him to go out, which he refused to do, and threatened to strike her. Witness came around the bar and asked her to go out, but she refused to go unless her husband did. He then put her out as gently as possible, using as little force as necessary. Mr. Ferry said Nelson had not been in the habit of drinking in the saloon, and had never gambled there. Witness was not a partner in the hotel. Had loaned some money to W. H. Short, the proprietor.

Frank Nelson corroborated his wife up to the point where Ferry took hold of her to fire her out, then she tried to catch hold of him, and he started away and did not see the rest of it. Heard no sound of violence. He had not done any gambling in the saloon, and had not drunk anything, except when nagged into desperation by his wife. Had been drunk twice lately under such circumstances.

D. Griffith testified that Ferry put the lady out gently.

Walt Short testified that he overheard the conversation between Creason and Mrs. Nelson, but did not hear the former say the words attributed to him by the prosecuting witness.

There was much testimony brought out as to trouble between the lady and her husband, and much that was entirely irrelevant to the case. On the main point, as to whether the lady was creating such a disturbance in the saloon as would justify the proprietor in throwing her out, that seemed to be embodied in her husband's threat to strike her. As to the manner, gentle or otherwise, in which she was put out, it was the lady's word against the field, and the jury seems to have been ungallant enough to take the field.

As an addenda to the case, it may be mentioned that Nelson spent part of Thursday night in jail, after ginning up to the point of kicking down the door of the room occupied by his wife at the Blanco.

In Aid of Kishineff Jews.

New York, May 11.—It is expected that a large sum will be realized for the relief of the persecuted Jews of Kishineff (Bessarabia) by the united action of the leading Jewish merchants of New York in donating 2 per cent of their gross receipts today toward the cause. The method of contribution was adopted in response to an appeal issued by Prof. Richard Gottheil, son of the late Rabbi Gottheil, and president of the Federation of American Zionists.

The same movement is on foot all over the country, and it is anticipated that a fund sufficiently large to relieve the sufferings of the Kishineff Jews will be raised within the next week.

When Jennie Sings.

When the sun sinks back of Greenhorn

In a mass of golden shine
And the shadow turns to purple,
The green of fir and pine,
And twilight o'er the canyons deep
Her veil of violet flings,
'Tis then in flowing cadences
My dark-eyed Jennie sings.

At night, toward my cabin home
My weary feet I point,
With every muscle aching
And a pain in every joint,
But music flutters down the trail
And joy, and comfort brings
For care and sorrow fly away
When my sweet Jennie sings.

At morn around the puncher floor
I hear her busy feet
And when I open the bedroom door
She's always there to meet.
And then her morning's song pours forth
'Till all the canyon rings
And all the miners hustle out
When my sweet Jennie sings.

He-haw, He-haw, He-haw, she chirps—
The other birds are still—
The chipmunk hunts the hollow log,
The rabbit hits the bill,
The pine squirrel to his leafy bough
In trembling terror clings;
And Jennie, shuts her slumberous eyes,
And sings, and sings, and sings.

SOFTNESS OF SEALSKIN.

Is Rivalled by Human Hair Where Dandruff is Eradicated.

Sealskin is admired the world over for its softness and glossiness; and yet the human hair is equally as soft and glossy when healthy; and the radical cause of all hair trouble is dandruff, which is caused by a pestiferous parasite that saps the vitality of the hair at its root. Newbro's Herpicide is the only preparation that is fatal to the dandruff germ. Without dandruff no falling hair, but a luxuriant growth of glossy, soft hair is certain. Scour the scalp, won't cure dandruff. Kill the dandruff germ. Thousands of women owe their beautiful suits of hair to Newbro's Herpicide.

STOLE SISTER'S HUSBAND

Eugene Man Skips With His Wife's Sister

The Widow Now in Portland Seeking the False Couple

An interesting revelation of love has come to light. The principals of the affair are Mr. and Mrs. John Wickham and Miss Evaline Mellin, sister of Mrs. Wickham.

Mr. and Mrs. Wickham have been married ten years and happiness dwelled in the home while the husband worked for the Booth-Kelly company in the Springfield sawmill. The couple resided at Henderson station. Life was serene until the notion came into Mrs. Wickham's head to have her sister visit her from Florida. The idea was so strong that she forwarded the money for the sister to make the trip and it was accepted promptly. Miss Mellin arriving at the home about one month ago.

Cupid made a queer match when he made Mr. and Mrs. Wickham. She is about ten years her husband's senior and about fifty years of age. The sister was younger and more buxom. She had the charms of a more youthful nature and Mr. Wickham soon found that life without her could not be considered. In one short month the two were arranging for an elopement. The time arrived last Monday when the two took the early morning train for Portland, leaving the wondering wife at home.

Arriving at Portland, Mr. Wickham wrote to his wife telling her that he did not care for her and that he and her sister were going north together. She immediately started for Portland, leaving Eugene on Thursday's early train. While in the city she was very angry and declared that she would land both the elopers in the penitentiary.

She is now in Portland seeking for the couple. It is thought they have gone further north.
