WOMAN'S DUTIES.

A woman who keeps her house in order and has the care of a family, has just as much responsibility as the man who provides the means to carry on the housekeeping. She is deserving of the more credit since the demands on her strength is greater. The everlasting sameness about her duties, and the confinement necessary to carry them out is very trying to the nervous system, this produces a strain on the mind that makes her irritable, cross, and dissatisfied, which is just as much a disease as rheumatism or catarrh. If nerves can be built up and made strong by medicine of some kind this feeling is changed to one of cheerfulness and pleasure in her duties. The medicine that makes strong steady nerves, and prevents disease by building up the entire system, is Dr. Gunn's Blood and Nerve Tonic, a tablet to take at meal time. Cures nervous prostration by making rich red blood, feeding the nerves, and making solid flesh at the rate of 1 to 2 lbs per week. This medicine is sold by druggists for 75c per box, or 3 boxes for $2.00, or sent by mail, post-paid, on receipt of price. Write us about your case. Address Dr. Bosanko Co., Philadelphia, Pa. ROBBED OF HALF HER LANDS

Oregon Shackled and Delivered to Her Enemies

Powerful Arraignment of the Department and Public Plunderers Made by W. W. Cardwell

In the last issue of the Roseburg Plaindealer, the following scathing denunciation of the land department and of congress and of the public plunderers, in the shape of military wagon roads, railroads and grafters, appears. It was written by W. W. Cardwell and completely covers the case:

If ever a state was cursed with "governmental recognition" that state is Oregon. Oregon has been recognized to such an extent that over one-half of the entire state has been given away by the government to one purpose or another. The policy of the government has always seemed to be to get rid of all lands in Oregon in the easiest way and in the largest tracts possible. The state has always been and still is the prey of corporations aided and abetted by the federal government. It seems as though any corporation desiring the acquisition of territory has only to mention Oregon and the government is willing to rush at the opportunity to give said corporation all it asks and more.

The total area of Oregon is approximately 63,000,000 acres of land. Of this nearly one-half has been given away—absolutely presented to corporations and individuals for the mere asking. These presents are distributed about as follows:

What They Have Grafted.
Oregon & California R. R. Co., 3,744,000 acres; Roseburg & Coos Bay Military Wagon Road Co., 184,320 acres; Oregon Central Military Wagon Road Co., 1,175,000 acres; Coast & Yaquina Bay Military Wagon Road Co., 134,400; Willamette Valley & Cascade Mountain Military Wagon Road Co., 1,198,080 acres; Dalles Military Wagon Road Co., 1,059,840 acres; Cascade Forest Reserve, 8,500,000 acres; Mount Wagner Forest Reserve, 25,040 acres; alleged swamp lands, 2,000,000 acres; Northern Pacific lien lands, 1,000,000 acres; school lands in lieu of forest reserve lands, 2,000,000 acres; school lands in lieu of school sections falling within forest reserve, 500,000; making a total of 26,520,720 acres. Deduct from the whole area of the state (63,208,000 acres) about 10,900,000 acres for lakes and rivers and it leaves the land area of Oregon about 52,308,000 acres. Of this one-half has been given away. But the school lands and the swamp lands were sold. Yes, sold for the meager sum of $1.25 per acre. One dollar and twenty-five cents is the top price ever received for an acre of public land in Oregon outside the railroad grant and that was paid only for school and swamp lands by monied concerns, either in company or individual, for speculative purposes.

Warlike Oregon Roads.
The so-called Military Wagon Roads were a gigantic steal, and everyone who was advised of the facts, both in Washington, D. C., and in Oregon, knew it. The excuse offered for presenting these different road companies with the tract of land above enumerated, was that the company was to construct a "Military Wagon Road." What was the use of a "Military Wagon Road," or how a "Military Wagon Road" was to differ from any other wagon road has kept the settlers of Eastern Oregon guessing ever since. There was certainly no necessity for a "Military Road," and it is equally certain that none was ever built or attempted to be built. The road companies' teams came east of the mountains and traveled for days in the roads that the settlers had been using for years; traveled all day along a well used highway and making camp at night without disturbing a stick or stone on the route.

But of course they were building roads? And as soon as the "Military Road" teams passed over the road it became "military," as well as a road—notwithstanding the fact that the settlers had driven over the same road for years, and the Indians had used the same as trails for years before the settlers came.

Built 30 Miles a Day.
The whole thing amounted to this: The government gave to the road companies a tract of land equal to a strip five miles wide the entire length of the road and contiguous and parallel to it. In order to get all they could for the road construction (?) the teams would leave the old road, upon entering a beautiful, fertile valley, and follow the trend of the valley, regardless of course or direction, to its end; always keeping about the center, in order to get each odd numbered section within the ten mile limit. And they got it—some of the finest land ever seen shown on maps. There are five of these "military wagon roads" in Oregon and their total holdings are 3,751,680 acres of land; sufficient land for 23,519 families with a hundred and sixty acres each—or, counting five persons to a family, capable of supporting a population of 117,595 persons. The Cascade Forest Reserve is another steal of more land, not so far reaching in its effects, as the land is not so well adapted to the habitation of man. Here the prime motive was to allow the railroads to trade poor lands for good—roads through the best land in the state. The result was created that the railroad might lose a lot of poor land to which it had no right, for an equal amount of better land to which it had a less right.

A Base for Lieu Lands.

And again they come, and again they ask for more. They have despoiled Eastern Oregon and robbed it most outrageously of its best lands, with wagon roads; they have cut the heart out of the center of the state, with the Cascade Forest Reserve, and now they come and ask for all the southwest corner of the state, for another forest reserve. The fallacy of a forest reserve in that portion of Oregon is too apparent to require discussion. It can't be for the protection of the water supply—for there are no water courses of any consequence there; and such streams as do have their source in that country flow west into the Pacific ocean. It can't be that the interior department fears a scarcity of water in the Pacific. The water supply is a secondary consideration when the real motive is given. It is the same "old game of grab." The timber is small in most parts of the proposed reserve and the land is mainly granite mountains, unfit for settlement for cultivation or even for the capacity of a railroad corporation. The only thing to be done with it is to use it as a base for lieu selections of good lands in the timber belts. If the railroad can make such a trade through the Hon. Secretary of the Interior it is safe to say the trade will be made.

Hermann Sat Down on it.

This matter came up when Hon. Binger Hermann was commissioner of the general land office and he promptly turned it down. Why? Because he knew the facts. He knew the land was not of a quality suitable for settlement. He knew it was not even a decent bear pasture; and that the forest reserve move was made in the interest of lieu land grabbers; he knew that the state had been repeatedly robbed and that this was another attempted burglary of the same nature and he gently but firmly sat down on the whole matter. What is the result? Commissioner Richards had no sooner warmed his seat in Hermann's chair than the reserve came looming up again. Mr. Hermann tells us that his resignation followed as a result of "inharmony" with Secretary Hitchcock in regard to the "public land policy." We are justified therefore in believing that the present commissioner does harmonize with the secretary, and that together they are determined to force another forest reserve upon us whether or no, and so far as we know "the public land policy" of Mr. Hitchcock and Mr. Richards may contemplate taking what is left of the state for game parks, lion hunts and forest reserves.

Oregon Legitimate Plunder.

If they get another cut or two out of Oregon there will hardly be enough left to quarrel about anyway and if there are any Indians left we may be able to persuade them to take it back. There is the Northern Pacific Mount Rainer Forest Reserve Grant. The most flagrant and barefaced robbery of the people perhaps ever perpetrated. Mount Rainer is in the state of Washington. It is a bit of beautiful scenery with its everlasting snows, deep gorges and ice filled canyons; but as a timber claim or wheat field it is a natural failure. The N. P. land grant extended far up its rocky slopes and as the land was no good the N. P. did not want it. It was, however, good trading stock and in the easiest simplest way imaginable the N. P. had a bill passed by our federal congress creating the "Mount Rainer Forest Reserve" and giving the Northern Pacific Railroad lien script which might be laid on any lands, in any state, surveyed or unsurveyed, into which the N. P. railroad ran. The N. P. has a little jerk water road 40 miles long running from Kalama to Portland in Oregon, and on the strength of this 40 miles of road they were issued script of the Rainer reserve sufficient to enter 300,000 acres of the best timber in Southern Oregon. Much if not all this land so taken by the N. P. Company is unsurveyed, and while most of it is heavily timbered, the soil is of such a character that it will prove abundantly productive as soon as the timber is removed.

The N. P.'s Share.

The land thus stolen by the Northern Pacific railroad, through the mechanism of congress, is sufficient to maintain a population of 89,375 persons counting 160 acres to the family. This same land, presented to the N. P. Co., contains a mineral wealth sufficient to build, equip and operate the N. P. railroad for one thousand years, and at the same time support a mining population of 100,000 men. It is such work as this—such a prodigious land policy—such a wholesale robbery of both the present and future generations that makes tramps, thieves and anarchists. Secretary Hitchcock, Commissioner Richards, President Roosevelt, nor even congress has any right moral or legal, to give this land away. It is not theirs to give. The land is a heritage of the citizen, of all the people and each is entitled under the laws to select for himself 160 acres and there build a home for his family. He has an in-born right to the shade of his own vine and fig tree, and no hiring of any corporation should despoil him of that right.

The figures in this article are approximately correct although not accurate. The results were obtained by counting the townships and making computations. I had no sectionized map at hand.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

A Ministers Mistake.

A city minister was recently handed a notice to be read from his pulpit. Accompanying it was a clipping from a newspaper bearing upon the matter. The clergyman started to read the extract and found that it began: "Take Kemp's Balsam, the best Cough Cure." This was hardly what he expected, and, after a moment's hesitation, he turned it over and found on the other side the matter intended for reading.
