SALEM HONORS THE DEAD
 Appropriate Services, and a General Attendance Here
 The Weather was Perfect, and Graves Were Covered With Vases of Fragrant Blossoms

Last Saturday, Memorial day, was ideal in every respect, clear, bright and warm. Nature giving her best in honor of the dead.
 Friday evening, and early Saturday morning, those having loved ones began to make their way to the different cemeteries with offerings of flowers and floral decorations, and by noon Saturday the cemeteries had been transformed into beds of beautiful flowers.

Memorial day originated as an occasion on which a grateful nation could honor her soldier dead, but it has now become a memorial day for all who have friends and loved ones in the great beyond.

During the morning a large number of people arrived from points out of town, and by noon the cemeteries were filled with those doing honor to their dead.
 At 1 o'clock in the afternoon the procession was formed in front of the Journal office, on Commercial street, with T. Holmerson as grand marshal and L. D. Henry, R. H. Leabo and J. L. Stockton, his aides. The procession was formed in the following order: Grand marshal and aides, Salem Military band, Company F, Fourth Regiment, Oregon National Guard; G. A. R. veterans; seven little girls dressed in snowy white, carrying a banner on which was inscribed "The Unknown Dead;" members of the Woman's Relief Corps.

The procession started on its line of march at 1:30 o'clock, going north on Commercial street to Court, east on Court to Liberty, north on Liberty to Chemeketa, west on Chemeketa to Commercial, thence south on Commercial to the Willamette, where cars were in waiting to carry the veterans to City View cemetery, the band and militia continuing the journey on foot.

Company F and the band continued the march to the cemetery, where they were met by the G. A. R. veterans, 100 strong, and the Woman's Relief Corps, and slowly moved toward the G. A. R. lot in City View cemetery, the band playing a funeral dirge.

A large arch had been erected in front of the soldiers' burial ground, draped with evergreens and bunting, and at the top was a large picture of Abraham Lincoln, while at the right and left were pictures of Grant and Sherman. Underneath was a miniature ship, full rigged, indicative of the navy, and the honor due the sailors as well as the soldiers. The entire procession filed to the inner walk surrounding the flag pole, from which the flag floated at half-mast.

Commander Kieffman here took charge of the ceremonies. The adjutant read general order No. 7, from the headquarters at Portland. Commander Kieffman then delivered his address on the duty of the day, followed by the reading by Dr. T. C. Smith of the famous address delivered by President Lincoln on the field of Gettysburg, on the occasion of the dedication of the battle ground, November 19, 1863.

At the conclusion of the reading the commander delivered his final address, then the old soldiers filed slowly by, each one dropping a small bouquet of flowers beneath the flag, repeating slowly and distinctly the regiment to which he belonged, and the name of the dead veteran to whom he wished to dedicate the tribute.

A squad from Company F then fired three volleys, and E. Kleppins, of the Salem band, stepped forward and blew "taps."
 The Military band played a selection, and the Woman's Relief Corps came forward for their touching tribute to the unknown dead. They were assisted by the seven little girls carrying a banner upon which was inscribed "The Unknown Dead." After the ladies had deposited their bouquets, the children sang very sweetly, "America, the Pride of the World," and they also deposited their flowers.

The Evening Exercises.
 In the evening the Salem Military band gave a concert at the corner of Court and Commercial streets, which drew a large crowd of appreciative listeners.

Immediately after supper the G. A. R. gathered at their hall in the Turner building, and marched to the armory, where the program of the evening was rendered. A large audience had gathered, and the patriotic exercises were much enjoyed. The Stalwart Quartet, consisting of Messrs. H. C. Espy, Jacob Wenger, Clay Baker and Charles Roth, rendered several of the old patriotic selections in their usual pleasing manner. The following was the program:

Invocation—Chaplain A. W. Drager.
 Song—"Cover Them With Flowers," by Stalwart Quartet.
 Recitation—"The Masked Salute," by Miss Marie Hutchins.
 Vocal solo—Miss Vera Byars.
 Address—H. A. Ketchum, D. D.
 Song—"When the Roll is Called Up Yonder," by the Stalwart Quartet.
 Song—"Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," by Stalwart Quartet.

MRS. TOLLE SUICIDES AT ASYLUM
 Sets Fire to Her Clothing, and Burned to Death

Mrs. T. G. Tolle, a patient at the state insane asylum, committed suicide Saturday morning by setting fire to her clothing. By some means unknown to the asylum authorities she had procured a box of matches. She secreted herself in the linen-room of the ward in which she was confined, and set fire to the bottom of her dress.

With a determination which would have been almost impossible to a person of sane mind, she endured the pain without making the slightest outcry. The first intimation of what was going on was the appearance of smoke through the transom over the door. Other patients gave the alarm, and when Mrs. Tolle was found she was so badly burned that she expired in a short time.

Mrs. Tolle was 31 years old, and was committed to the asylum from Marion county a year ago. She was known to be of a suicidal disposition, and was confined in a ward where extraordinary restraint is exercised. Several times before she has attempted suicide, but the efforts have been frustrated by the vigilance of the attendants.

Coroner Clough held an inquest Saturday afternoon. The jury rendered a verdict in accordance with the facts stated above, and exonerated the asylum authorities from all blame in the matter. Superintendent Callaway said that he has been unable to learn so that he can say positively how the patient secured the matches. It is one of the rules of the institution that matches be kept locked in attendant's room, and that no patient be allowed in such rooms.

Early this morning Mrs. Tolle was permitted to enter an attendant's room, while the attendant was there, and it is probable that the matches were taken at that time.

Dalrymple's

Just after the address of Rev. H. A. Ketchum, the Stalwart Quartet sang, by request, "When the Roll is Called Up Yonder." Instead of the number on the program, but they were compelled to answer to an encore, and did so with "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground." Commander Kieffman presided at the meeting and announced the several numbers. At the close of the regular program he requested the audience to rise and join in singing "America," led by the Stalwart Quartet.

MOTOR CARS FOR DESERT

An Ideal Place for Using the Big Automobiles
 Experiments Show One Carried 40 Men Over the Ground at the Rate of Five Miles an Hour

Brooklyn Eagle.
 When you are writing about the camel, the proper thing to do is to call him the ship of the desert and quote a verse or two of Kipling's "Gunga" Call him a ship while you can, for the time is coming when you can't with any likelihood of folks knowing what you mean, for the motor truck is going to displace him as a peripatetic freighter on the sandy wastes. You may, however, quote from "Gunga" indefinitely, or until armies give up using camels for transport service in the east, which is likely to be a long while yet. Two ingenious English inventors, George Winter and John Ellis, have constructed a devil-wagon for desert travel that appears to have the camel beat to a finish. The great difficulty was, of course, to design a wheel that would not sink deep into the sand beneath the weight of the carriage and the cargo. Messrs. Winter and Ellis have made such a wheel, however, and it has proven equal to every test to which it has yet been subjected. It is a broad, flat tire, with a flange in the center to throw up the sand on either side and so make a bed for the flat part of the wheel. With the wheel problem solved, the Winter-Ellis carts will carry forty men across the desert at the rate of five miles an hour—not very fast going, but still quicker in the long run, beside being more economical than camel-traveling. Winter and Ellis have been experimenting under the direct authorization of the European government.

Talent and Instrument

The good people of Salem will have an opportunity next Thursday evening, at the Grand Opera House, to see and hear two of the finest concert grand pianos ever brought West. They are two of the grand Knabes, and have been brought to the city from the Portland house of the Allen & Gilbert-Raymaker Co., especially for the use of Mrs. Etta Anders-Willman, at her annual commencement exercises. They will be used by herself and pupils on that occasion, and will give all lovers of good music a rare opportunity to have a taste of the best instrumental music. Mrs. Willman numbers among her pupils some of the best musical talent in Oregon, and, without a doubt, this event will be one of the most pleasurable ever had in the city.
 The program will include some magnificent numbers, both vocal and instrumental, and the entire concert, for it will be nothing short of that, will be free to the public. The patrons of the conservatory will occupy boxes upon this occasion, and the entire public is invited to be present. No admission fee will be charged.
