Blood

On The Brain—Lost Self Control.

Lived in Misery For Ten Years.

Dr. Miles' Nervine and Heart Cure Cured.

The reason Dr. Miles' Remedies cure such a large percentage of cases is because they are formulated to, and actually do, go at once to the root of the disease. Doctors often make the mistake of treating the symptoms, a method which must always fail. Dr. Miles' Nervine restores health, strength and vitality to the nerves. Dr. Miles' Heart Cure enriches the blood and improves the circulation so that the patient speedily regains health.
"I feel it is a pleasure as well as duty to inform my friends the means I used to regain my health. I have been troubled a great deal with nervousness and headache; I began to observe enlargement of the neck until it became so bad I felt it severely, especially blood on the brain. The least excitement gave me dreadful pain and I would lose all control of myself. I lived in this misery for about ten years; consulted many doctors, but secured no relief whatever. I commenced the use of Dr. Miles' Nervine and a few days later began the use of Dr. Miles' Heart Cure and within a week I felt very good. The second week my friends told me I was looking very much better. This encouraged me and I continued the use of the two remedies until now I am well enough to do my own household work without any trouble whatever. I consider my health good, the cure permanent and I can do any kind of work."—MRS. CHARLOTTE ELG, Idaho Falls, Idaho.

HEROIC OREGON YOUTH

Ran Double Header Over Tottering Bridge

Women, Especially the Old Maids and Grass Widows Fell on His Neck and Wept

Editor Journal: One can never tell from whence a true hero may spring. They spring up like the mushroom in the darkness of hidden and mysterious opportunity and behold! when the sunlight of human consciousness dawns, we find their names inscribed upon the pages of history. From every walk of life we see the hero exemplified and honored. Taught by esthetic novelists to search for the hero in the field of battle, the deck of the battleship, the locomotive cab, the flames and the drowning waves, we are prone to forget that in our midst lives greater heroes than the world has ever yet known. We need but the circumstance to bring out the qualities of which we sing and which we all hold dear. An ordinary creature in civil life needs but the circumstance to make him an undying hero. But few can return to the common walks once they taste of the sweets of fame and suck the nectar from the blossoms of applause. The greater hero is he who can, after hibernating with those fickle gods of fate, turn quietly to his oldtime walks and return to his obscurity. Again, heroes need avenues for proclaiming of their virtues and deeds. The newspapers of today furnish such channels and as arule allow no talented hero to escape. Therefore it becomes the privilege of all to enjoy the works and self sacrificing deeds of the hero, which naturally leads us to a case in point:
On a recent expedition to the wilds and tangles of California, a circumstance occurred which proves beyond doubt the above reflections concerning the uncertainty surrounding the birthplace of a hero. The event becomes more interesting when we learn the hero is a local character of Salem, and a citizen whose heroic qualities have ever taxed his unostentatiousness. The story can be told in a few words. A heavy passenger train was held by the dispatcher at a station some thirty miles from a bridge which had been weakened by a fresher. Repairs were being made while the train waited. Speculation was rife as to the safety of crossing, among the passengers. Fear was also augmented by the fact that the bridge was 120 feet high. Finally orders were received to go ahead. Reaching the bridge a stop was made and an examination followed. Being a double header, the train carried two engine crews and as things are very liable to happen at such times, of course the crews had to disagree in regard to the simple matter of crossing the bridge. Some wanted to go ahead; others wanted more braces under before doing so. So the war waged. The passengers gathered around, took sides and the fire department was called out to put out the air, that is the hot air. Finally, after considerable delay, a young man, athletic in build, worked his way through the crowd, and with an artistic leap, showing unmistakable evidences of fancy work in a gymnast, mounted the tender of one of the engines. Crying in a loud voice to be heard, this young man, volunteered to draw the train over the questionable bridge at the risk of his own life. He first asked that the women and children be removed from the train and taken to the woods near by—a place of safety—and from which place they could see very plainly the attempt at crossing. This point, however, was not being considered by our volunteer at that time, because safety was paramount, and not a dress parade. After much urging the tracks were cleared, the passengers safely landed, and steam was piled on, and our hero sprang lightly upon the coupling pin holding the two engines, and seizing a throttle in each hand, slowly and carefully moved the heavy train upon the bridge. With bated breath and blanched faces the onlookers gazed. Slowly but surely the train was upon the dizzy heights of the trestle. For a moment it seemed that the weight caused the newly repaired trestle to settle, imitating very much the appearance of falling, and those already holding their breaths held on tighter and seeing in their now thoroughly awakened imaginations the falling bridge, the falling train, hearing the crash and the shriek of the whistle and above all the farewell wave of the hero as he disappeared in the vortex of the heap of wreckage below. But no! the attempt was successful. The bridge was safe! The hero was given a rally from the banks which resounded throughout that part of the United States. Becoming enthusiastic, with the wild cheering in his ears, our hero seized one of the green flags from the engine pilot and waved it aloft, swept that train backward and forward many times across, and across again, that dizzy height, with the yawning chasm below. At this juncture the passengers knew no bounds and in their delirium appointed a committee to express their thanks to the hero of the day. This committee promptly dragged the hero from his now exalted position and turned him over to the joy-weeping women and men and maidens. Such a business! It reminded one of Hobson's first visit tour of the land. Weeping was mingled with shouts for joy. Engineers, with stony faces, were seen creeping over the bridge and casting their overalls into the gulf below, ready to return to the less hazardous walks of life, after having been so courageously outdone by this tall unostentatious athlete. It was with great difficulty a crew could be secured to pilot the train into the end of the division, so anxious were the men to quit after witnessing the downfall of their heroic pride and the making of a true hero under their very eyes. Some may wonder why this affair has not appeared before in print that the world might join in the well earned hosannas. But, it is said the power of money can buy almost anything. Money running short, many rich and rare specimens, culled from the sun-beaten brows of the towering Sielklyon mountains, of placer fame, were sacrificed to keep the affair from reaching the babbling public. Nuggets, colors, and all went into the general sacrifice. But, the news will come! And with the outing of news, comes into the world another hero and from the best state in the Union, old Oregon. You are anxious to know the name of this hero. Anxious as all are to have you know, yet the penalty of forfeiture of friendship hangs over its being divulged, hence the name must go into the great and unknown future as a secret, among the chosen few.

PUT IT IN THE WALKS

Names of the Streets Should be in the Sidewalks

Lady Also Suggests That We Harvest Our Hay and Lay-by Other Crops

Editor Journal: The oncoming Mid-Summer Carnival, the continuous performance of Shield's Park Theater, and the Glorious Fourth of July which is to be celebrated, and the State Fair, soon to follow, all point to the necessity and expediency of numbering and naming our streets that strangers may be enabled to locate our various places of amusement without the trouble now incident. A few enterprising citizens have had the names of the street or streets abutting chiseled into the cement walks, which will be a permanent and convenient method for strangers to locate themselves in case they get lost. I took occasion to see how many streets are named for pedestrians, recently, and found very few. This matter should be attended to before our great rush to the carnival. Then after we have numbered and named our streets, it would be well to mow down some of the grass so we can find the signs. At a distance Salem looks like a big field of grass with some buildings sticking over the tops. If Salem would try and keep the "grass-back" instead of the "moss-back" she would be on the road to progress, for clean streets indicate live citizens. Let us have our streets properly named before the strangers arrive. Carve the names into the cement walks. Get our "hay-seed" council to harvest the timothy growing around about our thoroughfares and Salem will be ready for her gala day clothes. MRS. NUMB BURR.

KODOL

Digests What You Eat

Weak Hearts

Are due to indigestion. Ninety-nine of every one hundred people who have heart trouble can remember when it was simple indigestion. It is a scientific fact that all cases of heart disease, not organic, are not only traceable to, but are the direct result of indigestion. All food taken into the stomach which fails of perfect digestion ferments and swells the stomach, puffing it up against the heart. This interferes with the action of the heart, and in the course of time that delicate but vital organ becomes diseased.

Kodol

Digests What You Eat
Mrs. Loring Nichols of Pen Yan, N. Y., writes: After eating, my food would distress me by making my heart palpitate and I would become very weak. Finally I got a bottle of Kodol and it gave me immediate relief. After using a few bottles I am cured.

Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders, and gives the heart a full, free and untrammelled action.
Bottles only, $1.00. Size holding 2 1/2 times the total size, which sells for 50c.
