Mrs. Fairbanks tells how neglect of warning symptoms will soon prostrate a woman. She thinks woman's safeguard is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Ignorance and neglect are the cause of untold female suffering, not only with the laws of health but with the chance of a cure. I did not heed the warnings of headaches, organic pains and general weariness, until I was well nigh prostrated. I knew I had to do something. Happily I did the right thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound faithfully according to directions, and was rewarded in a few weeks to find that my aches and pains disappeared, and I again felt the glow of health through my body. Since I have been well I have been more careful. I have also advised a number of my sick friends to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they have never had reason to be sorry. Yours very truly, Mrs. MARY FAIRBANKS, 318 South 7th St., Minneapolis, Minn." "A Black Heifer"
 Is the name of the play to be presented at the Opera House this evening. It is a brand new play, and has never before been seen here. It is by Mr. Hal Reed, author of "Human Hearts," and other great successes. The comedy predominates, and at the same time the undercurrent of pathos makes the play a most beautiful story, and one long to be remembered. Little Verna has one of the principal parts, and it is useless to say that she makes the most of her opportunity. The play is on the "Old Homestead" order, and the characters are of the quaint old kind, and there are really some of the funniest situations in "A Black Heifer" that was ever put into one piece.

The Play Last Night.
 Last night the Allen Stock Company presented "A Fair Rebel" to a good house. The fair rebel proved a very charming and delightful rebel, and Russell Reed a splendid "Yank." The play is full of life, and the audience showed its appreciation by hearty applause. The special features were exceptionally good, and the songs by Frank Walsh, who has a remarkably deep and pure bass voice, were alone worth the price of admission. Little Verna Felton has won a warm place in the hearts of Salem's people, and when she comes again, which we hope will be in the near future, she will get a hearty welcome. She was encored, as usual, last night, and got an unusually fine supply of roses. The orchestra deserves especial mention, and each of its numbers was responded to by a call for more. The play tonight is "A Black Heifer," which closes the company's engagement here. The company deserves and should have a crowded farewell benefit.

The man with the big violin You'll know by his rotundity; And Walsh has got a basso voice Unusual for profundity. The leading lady plays her part With vigor and intensity, And little Verna makes you laugh. For that is her propensity.
