

Cut Glass For The Bride

The Barr Store is selling a great deal of Cut Glass for wedding gifts. Our showing this season we believe we are justified in calling really exquisite. It includes a great number of different pieces of the best Hawkes cut glass—the glass which experts have long considered the finest cut in America. Hawkes cut glass is marked by unusual clearness, sparkle and lustre and by remarkably artistic treatment of design and cutting. No other kind of cut glass is quite so striking in appearance—quite so rich and aristocratic in all ways—as a comparison with other kinds will amply corroborate. We have Hawkes glass in fruit bowls, water bottles, tumblers, vases, bon-bon boxes, butter plates, oil cruets and numerous other table pieces. Will you not take pains to see them before choosing a gift for the bride?

BOARD TO BUY BONDS

School Funds Invested in School Bonds

School Districts Applying to the State Board for Loans,
the New Law a Good One

Under legislative authority the State Land Board is now completing arrangements for the investment of the surplus in the various funds in the hands of the board, in school district bonds or warrants, and several districts in the state are preparing to place their bonds in the hands of the board. The legislative act in question, passed at the last session of the assembly, provides that school district officers, when ready to sell bonds, are required to notify the State Land Board of such issue, the board to have the refusal of the bonds at 5 per cent interest. In the case of the refusal of the board to purchase the bonds, the district officers are authorized to advertise and sell them to the highest bidder.

Under this act, school district No. 1, of Clatsop county (the Astoria district) has offered to the board bonds aggregating $35,000, and school district No. 2, of Wasco county, offers a similar issue of $2500. Blank bonds are now in the course of preparation, and as soon as printed, the arrangements for the sale and transfer of the bonds will be completed. The board proposes to have the districts use uniform bonds.

Under the act of 1901, placing the interest rate for bonds by the State Land Board at 6 per cent, one such school district bond was purchased. It was issued by a district in Harney county for $400. The bonds of the Clatsop and Wasco county districts mentioned above will be the first purchases of the board under the new act.

Hops Contracts Filed.

Hop contracts were filed as follows: John Bierward, of St. Paul, to Lester I. Dinger, 10,000 pounds at 15 cents.

Kennedy & Champoeg, to George A. La Vie, 15,000 pounds at 15 cents. Frank Briskay, of Champoeg, to Ehlman Hop & Malt Company, 12,000 pounds at 15 1/2 cents.

In Department No. 2 of the Marion county circuit court a complaint was on yesterday filed by Mrs. Sora Whorley asking for a divorce from her husband, A. H. Whorley, on the ground of desertion. The parties were married at Salem in 1887, and there are two boys, aged 11 and 15 years, the issue of the marriage, whose care and custody the plaintiff asks.

MONEY STILL IS COMING

For the Relief of the Heppner Flood Sufferers

Roseburg Knights of Pythias
Lodge Makes a Generous Response—Many Volunteers

A number of citizens from surrounding towns have very generously offered to go to the relief of Heppner, if their services were needed, one man writing from Brownsville, offering to work with carpenter tools.

Alpha Lodge, Knights of Pythias, of Roseburg, sent a generous remittance of $82.50 this morning to Grand Treasurer L. R. Stinson, at Salem, this morning, and this is only another evidence of the noble work of this order, that was first to the rescue with telegraphic donations.

Salem Men Returns.

Ed. C. Herren, the Salem hop buyer, was one of the first men to reach Heppner after the fearful disaster of last Sunday evening. Mr. Herren left this city Monday evening, and reached Heppner Tuesday morning. He found his brother's family safe, but does not try to describe the horrors of the scene.

When asked whether or not more help was needed, he said: "I telegraphed Mr. Stinson as soon as I arrived and had investigated, and when I telegraphed that help was needed badly there were plenty of people in the town, but few workers. Since then Baker City and Sumpter have sent men, and many have arrived from Portland, but the work is very hard, and men soon give out. I think help is still needed, for many are leaving. One sees hundreds of idle people, who refuse to work, and I saw Heppner people, who live on the hill above the flooded district, and who did not suffer from the flood, but they won't work."

"The work is very well organized now, and meal tickets are issued to the workers before each meal, good at any house or eating place in the city. The saloons are all closed, but every three hours the workers who want a drink are given one."

Mr. Herren states that the best help was given by a party of Elks from The Dalles. As soon as the news reached The Dalles Sunday night, a party of Elks drove to Heppner, a distance of 100 miles, and for three days and nights labored without rest. He thinks it will take several weeks to clean up the city, and as it is very hot, the quicker this is done the better.

A carload of quicklime is needed at once, as there are piles of dead stock, which are becoming very offensive under the action of the hot sun.

Since leaving here Mr. Herren had only four hours' sleep, and is very tired.

Men Were Needed.

Contributions are still coming in for the relief of the Heppner flood sufferers. The Salem man who returned from Heppner last night reiterates The Journal's position, that men are needed there as much as money and provisions to clear away the debris. Baker City and Sumpter sent delegations of their most efficient miners, and a relief expedition of 25 or 30 men from Salem, started right off promptly after the great calamity happened, would have been of great service. But there was so much excitement and uncertainty that no action was taken. Mayor Bishop, of Salem, in reply to the urgent demand for men on June 18th, wired: "Shall we send them, and how many?" To this came no reply, but the railroad officials seemed reluctant to take the responsibility of sending in men, and had advice to the contrary from Heppner direct. The great heat at Heppner made it impossible for those who did work to hold out very long, and for that reason relief parties of workers were needed.

SHIELDS PARK PROGRAM

Second Performance Drew a Good Crowd

George Jones is a Whirlwind Dancer and the bar Performers Cannot be Excelled

A fair-sized audience attended Shield's Park last night to witness the second performance of the Shield's Vaudeville Co., and from the applause each number received, showed that the entertainment was greatly appreciated. Norwood Bros., the expert horizontal bar performers, did their work with ease, which plainly showed that they were old hands at the business. Oscar Norton, the young California Indian tenor, who is well known in Salem, handled the illustrated songs with great success. George Jones again captured the audience with his talk, and the audience would not let him off until he had done his famous buck and wing dance. Lyndon & Wrenn, in their amusing sketch, and Mann & Franks, the coster singers, again made good. The polycope, with its interesting pictures, closed the show. During the warm weather Shield's Park will certainly be a winner, as everything is cooly arranged to make its patrons comfortable. There will be a performance every night, weather permitting. Next week there will be an entire change of bill, new people and new views on the polycope. Each week the bill will grow in excellence.

Harold Scovill, who has been attending school in Portland, returned to his home in this city yesterday.

MARRIED.

At Mehama, Saturday morning, June 14, 1903, at 10 o'clock a. m., Bertha M., youngest daughter of F. U. Hull, to Amos H. Barker, of Portland. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's father in the presence of a select company of relatives and friends. Rev. Geo. F. Round officiating. The presents were numerous and beautiful, and after a dainty wedding repast the young couple took carriage for Turner, on their way to Portland, their future home.

TOUT-HANDSAKER.—June 17, 1903, at the home of the bride's parents, Miss Constance Handsaker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Handsaker, to Otis B. Tout, Rev. J. B. Tout, of Centralia, officiating. The bride is well and popularly known in Eugene, while the groom has been associated with the Guard for some time as reporter. The couple left for California points, and after three weeks in the land of orange blossoms will return to Eugene to reside.

Miss Handsaker is well known at Salem, where she has a host of friends.

POSSIBLE SHOWERS FRIDAY

But Saturday will be Fair for the Fruit Growers

Hood River Crop Suffered
Severely from the Drouth
Later Berries
Coming

The government weather forecast man at Portland would realize how important his weather forecasts are to the fruit growers of the Willamette valley, if he could see the way they reach for the earliest copy of the Salem Journal, to see what the weather forecast is for tomorrow.

The probabilities, as announced by Prof. Beales, of Portland, are showers Friday night, and Saturday fair. Light clouds are in the sky today. The wind has been veering to east and south.

Strawberry Supply.

The crop is now very heavy for the cannery, and shipments are falling off, only very choice berries being worth expressing to Portland, although some shipments are going to points south of Salem. The rains came after that hot spell and made the season a very unsatisfactory one for shipping.

The cannery is getting a very large crop of berries for canning purposes, and the increased acreage is beginning to make itself felt. It is more than likely that the cannery plant will have to double its capacity, or another cannery will have to be built at Salem to handle the products.

Hood River Berries.

(Glacier, June 18th.)

The total shipment of strawberries up to and including Tuesday night amounts to 67,309 crates; 10,000 crates more than the total shipment for the season of 1902.

The rains the fore part of the week lowered the shipments somewhat, but they will begin to increase again to night, and are expected to continue heavy for a week or more before the season begins to near the end.

The season is ended for White Salmon, and the lower end of Hood River valley, and the exodus of pickers has begun. In the foothills the season is at its best, and a fine quality of fruit is coming in. The hot weather, beginning June 5th, and continuing for five days, did more damage, it is feared, than was first estimated. Reports from shipments made then show the fruit to have arrived in poor condition, which makes more of a demoralized market than anything else. The demand continues good for first-class berries, and it is expected that the prices will again advance in a few days. The rain Monday damaged some over-ripe fruit, but, as a whole, was a great benefit to late patches.

New Variety of Strawberries.

A new variety, very fine and large, closely resembling the Magoon, was received from Salem yesterday in some quantity. It was originated by Colonel Hofer, of Salem, and is named the "Paris." A very large and beautiful plant of another new variety, growing in a pot and loaded with berries of all sizes, about 100 in all, was also exhibited on Front street yesterday. It is called the "Oregon," and was originated by Mr. Hofstadter, of Woodlawn, at Salem, some three years ago. The ripe berries are very large, and look much like the Magoon, which has not been surpassed yet. The plant was a marvel for size and appearance, as is generally the case with seedlings.—Oregonian, June 17th.

The Paris strawberry was first brought to our attention by A. Rich, who resides in this city, and who introduced the plant from France about ten years ago. It was named after Dr. Morier, a celebrated French horticulturist.
