The Weather.

The government forecast for tonight and Sunday is showers.

RETAIN PROF. TRAYER.

The news that Prof. Trayer has been offered a Portland principalship, at an increased salary over what he is getting as city superintendent of schools at Salem, need surprise no one.

For the work he has done in building up the Salem schools the past year, furnishing them with libraries and a piano free of expense, adding a tenth grade without expense, and introducing drawing and vocal music, he has received the least pay of any educator in Oregon.

The board of education saw fit to increase the salaries of all the principals under the city superintendent of schools, and the salaries of most of the teachers, but refused to increase the salary of the man who has accomplished most for the district.

A school board cannot always do exactly what is right by any individual, but it is very evident that the man whose salary was not raised can get more in other communities, and no one will blame him for accepting it.

SUSTAIN THE CARNIVAL.

It is the duty of every Salemite to get in and drill, and make the Mid-Summer Carnival a great success.

Business men should assist in the preparation of floats for the procession on Monday.

Let nothing be left undone to show the world that Salem is the live interior city of Oregon.

Citizens should cut out all other entertainments and undertakings for the coming week, and give every feature of the Carnival their undivided support.

Let next week mark a gala week in the history of the city. It is time to take a week off from dollar-chasing, and indulge in recreation, sight-seeing and hospitality.

The general committees and the sub-committees have all worked hard to make the Carnival a credit to the city, and deserve our hearty co-operation.

Let the music begin Monday morning. Let the merry go round. Let the beautiful maidens from the Orient display their charms, at 10 cents a charm, to ward music and under favorable auspices.

Let it be a week of relaxation and merriment. The Carnival season once a year is a good thing to encourage. Life at best is too dull and dreary in this gray, misty and shadowy land, and the Mid-Summer Carnival is a happy interruption.

HOW RUSSIA IS DEVOURING CHINA

(W. M. Ivins, Jr., in The World's Work.)

On looking at the map the first thing noticeable is the enormous extent of contiguous territory under the Russian flag, and the second is the great length of her land boundaries and the smallness of her coast line on open and navigable seas. The careful consideration of this boundary line will suggest the reasons for Russia's past history, present diplomatic and industrial policy, and future aims and aspirations.

More than a century and a half ago she had arrived on the Pacific, but because of the great distance and difficulty of travel, and also because of her inability to carry on trading by sea, she had not been able to advance far enough south to get control of a port on the open ocean.

But the necessity of such a possession has been constantly before the eyes of the governors of the Amur provinces on the Sea of Japan for the last fifty years, and they have done what they could by hook or crook to encroach on Chinese territory. Not only have they made the best use of the roving bands of Cossacks who could be backed up or left to their fate as seemed the most politic, but they have been so steadily at work advancing the Russian influence at the Chinese court that now it is preponderant.

Because of this court influence and also because of her marvelous diplomacy she has managed to work farther and farther south in the Province of Manchuria until now at least half of what was included in its original boundaries is under her flag. Those most intimate with Russian policy know, moreover, that through her Kalmuck sovereignty she has begun to establish a decisive influence at the court of the Llama of Tibet. This Far Eastern Pope has been gradually surrounded by a court not only of Russian sympathizers, but also to a great extent of Russian subjects. As a matter of fact, less than two years ago the man who, in Western parlance, corresponds to the Llama's Prime Minister was in St. Petersburg making his obeisance to the Czar and his ministers as a loyal subject of the Russian crown. Thus having an almost impregnable hold on the two most important of China's rulers, the Emperor and the Buddhist High Priest, she was able to make advances of a kind and in a manner impossible to any other nation.

ANOTHER PLEA FOR LIGHT

Salem Man Talks About Sounds in a Haunted House

Ed. Journal: I am not a transcendentalist, a believer in ghosts, nor think I am a whole livery stable, just because this story may sound a little "buggy." But I seek to give the facts. The plain, bare facts. Unvarnished facts. I relate this story as it will clear the mystery hanging over certain mysterious apparitions and midnight maraudings which have been taking place in a certain public building in Salem for several years. Many residents living close to this aforesaid building have been badly frightened on different occasions during the hours of night time, to see a moving light in the tower. The light moves slowly up and up, apparently as one would ascend a steep ladder, and then after moving along in circles for a time slowly descends again and disappears within. For a time several wide awake neighbors sat up and watched this gruesome spectacle, and shivered at the thought and apparition. The mystery could not be solved and the matter has dropped, until now at this late day, I come forward with the solution. Hearing of this strange affair, I determined to ferret it out. I watched from the outside several nights, saw the moving light, saw it ascend and then descend after going through the usual circular movements in the tower of the building. Realizing I must get within the tower to really arrive at the truth of the matter, I disguised myself one dark evening and slyly crept into the building when the coast was clear and slipped up into the attic next the belfry tower. Here I ate a few crackers, a box of sardines and picked my teeth. Then re-examined my weapons I carefully and cautiously crawled out of the attic, up through the hole in the floor of the tower. Here I mounted a dusty and steep ladder, until I reached the topmost landing. Secretly myself behind a large cobweb which was hanging across one of the corners, I awaited developments. In the darkness of the night I, of course, couldn't see much, but I could hear pretty good. So, it happened I could hear the faint strokes of the city clock as it chimed its sweet tones upon the balmy air denoting the hours as they slowly passed on into the past. For the hours to pass on into the past, sounds funny, but it is a fact, just the same. To describe in detail my experiences, feelings and thoughts would require, according to my latest figures, about 316 lanes of this paper with four columns in each issue. So, you must be content to hear only a brief summary of the whole story. How the footfalls of the belated pedestrian, as he wended his homeward way, fell upon my ear, whilst I was at least 150 feet higher than his feet, was another wonder I encountered during my midnight vigilance. Thoughts of home and mother flooded in but I couldn't see them on account of the darkness. As I mused I softly chanted that favorite to every boyish heart, "Just Previous to the Battle, Mother." So, time glided along and as I suddenly became aware something was gliding upon me, I looked without the tower window and could see naught but the lanky blackness. No moon cast a silver dollar like a heavenly empyrean to disclose any approaching object. Within the atmosphere grew oppressive. The creak and sway of the tall ladder reaching to the tower broke the silence. Something, or someone, was surely ascending. Immediately upon hearing this sound I saw the ray of light, which the neighborhood had so often watched, brightening and coming nearer. I now knew I was on the verge of a great discovery and that the mystery was soon to be revealed. I hastily wrote what I could and concealed it behind a rafter in case I failed to return. (I recovered this document afterwards and have it in my portfolio at present). Well, as most things have an end, this affair had one, too. The light grew brighter and the creaking and groaning of the ladder louder and suddenly the apparition which wrought such havoc with the minds of the neighboring ghosthunters, stood before me, revealed and in all his splendor. Of course, you have guessed by this time the tower was on the court house, but what was the apparition? It was the nightwatchman coming up with his lantern to wind the clock!

MORALE: An illuminated clock tower saves lantern oil and is a sure extirminator for supposed ghosts.

RESURGAM.

THE STAMP OF TRUTH.

Salem Residents Know It Well.

There is the stamp of truth on a statement endorsed by people we know by our friends and neighbors. The following experience of a citizen is but one case of scores right here at home:

Charles Beadle, veteran of the civil war, member of Co. I, N. Y. Infantry, residing at 423 West Sixth street, Eugene, Ore., says: "I was afflicted with kidney complaint for a great many years. I might say, ever since I came out of the service in the sixties. I never knew the moment when any over exertion of the contraction of a cold would bring on an attack, and on more than one occasion I have been so bad that I was almost helpless. The last severe attack I had was about six months ago when the lameness across the small of my back set in in dead earnest and felt as though there was a heavy weight over each kidney. There was a weakness of the bladder and kidneys and the secretions were not under proper control. Some of the numerous remedies I used gave temporary relief but that was all. Learning about Doan's Kidney Pills I got a box. I felt their beneficial results after a few doses. I shall always keep them on hand to have in case of need. I met one of my old comrades, Mr. Stowell, who was complaining of his back and kidneys. I told him to get Doan's Kidney Pills. He took my advice and a day or so after I asked him about the pills. He said they were the finest thing he had ever used and that they straightened him up in a hurry." Plenty more proof like this from Salem people. Call at Dr. Stone's drug store and ask what his customers report.

Lifeblood Ebbing Away

It is stated that 75 per cent of the increasing number of Irish immigrants now arriving in the United States are women, and 60 per cent of these are between 17 and 25. We can well afford to welcome these desirable accessions to our population, but it is a sad thing for Ireland when the colleens, though dearly loving her, desert her in shiploads. The girl of 20, strong and healthful enough to emigrate to a distant country is in any land the potential mother of the next generation, and she of all persons in the population can least be spared.

Recent parliamentary reports have told in detailed figures the poignant story of the depopulation of Ireland in the nineteenth century. In that period the population was reduced one-half. It is still dwindling rapidly. It decreased 5.23 per cent in the ten years from 1891 to 1901. In the twentieth century to complete the direful work of the nineteenth?

The work of depopulation in Ireland was wrought primarily by English legislation for the island, which to a great extent deprived it of its manufacturing industries and then impoverished its agricultural. In the pending land purchase bill England proposes to make amends, but if such amends are to be made effectively they must be made quickly. In the departure in unprecedented numbers of its young women the very lifeblood of the nation is ebbing away.

Some Very Silly Negroes

At a meeting of the colored people held in Chicago Tuesday night to protest against the lynching of the negro, David T. Wyatt, at Belleville, Ill., recently, Rev. C. H. Thomas, one of the speakers, advised his hearers that they should, if the hanging and burning of colored men is not stopped by the regular authorities, sell their coats and buy guns with which to defend themselves.

Other speakers expressed similar sentiments, and before the meeting had adjourned the negroes present were worked up to a high pitch of excitement.

Mrs. Ida Wells Barnett informed the men present that they must organize to fight their own battles, saying that they could never expect the white men to fight for them until they had shown themselves capable of fighting for themselves.

DR. J. F. COOK

Has come to the conclusion that all profession of the healing art outside of the vegetable kingdom is a failure. When your system is run out without pure blood. You will only find vitality in the vegetable kingdom. Poisonous drugs nor doctors' knives nor thunder and lightning will not remove the cause, but lay the foundation for all kinds of disease. Those poisons go into your bones, and kill the life of them and create all kinds of diseases, cancerous tumors, consumption, dropsy, bone diseases, etc. You must bear in mind that his medicine is not a poisonous tonic, nor a stimulant, nor temporary relief which you get from poisonous drugs, where the results are sure death sooner or later. Do not blame the medicine, when it takes an effect and stirs up the poisons of disease in the system. You must not expect to be cured in a few days, for your sickness or disease has been a long time coming on, and it will take a long time to get it out of your system. It will take months or a year to build a new body from the bones up. This is what the people do not understand. They are used to being humbugged. His medicines are composed of Nature's Herbs—what the human system requires. When the animals get sick they will help themselves to those herbs, for they have the instinct, and the people have not, so we have to make a study of it. It has been a life study with Dr. Cook. Do not get weary; this life is too short and too sweet to worry out of this world.
