STRAW BERRY PRICES

Have Been Well Maintained to the Close of the Season

Record of Shipments at Hood River, and the Amount Handled by Salem Union

The last of the strawberry crop is bringing $1.50 to $1.75 per crate, and local berries are in great demand. The Salem market has been better than the Portland market this year; at present none are being shipped to Portland. Quite a lot of fine berries are still to come in, and some patches have many green ones on the vines, which, with rains or irrigation, should produce berries for a month.

The Union Picnic.

There was a good attendance at the Marion square picnic and fruit growers' reunion. A number of the growers took a picnic dinner together, and, in spite of a little rain down their backs, had a good time. A number of toasts were responded, and Jas. Kyle gave away some of the secrets of the commission business, that created a good deal of merriment among the growers. The effect of the Union has been to uphold prices, and all the growers have done better than if there had been no organized effort. There is a very large pack of cherries still to come to the cannery.

Humors

They take possession of the body, and are Lords of Misrule. They are attended by pimples, boils, the itching tetter, salt rheum, and other cutaneous eruptions; by feelings of weakness, languor, general debility and what not. They cause more suffering than anything else.

Health, Strength, Peace and Pleasure require their expulsion, and this is positively effected, according to thousands of grateful testimonials, by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Which radically and permanently drives them out and builds up the whole system.

New York Market Glutted.

It is possible to glut even the New York market with strawberries, and it was done one day this season. The Fruitman's Guide reports that on May 27th the receipts of strawberries in New York City amounted to 27,708 crates. The berries arrived soft and watery, and the market was "stuck." Most of the New Jersey stock sold at from 3 to 5 cents per quart, although
