WHO GAVE POISON

Murdered Woman's Mother Refuses to Answer Questions

Examination Shows Deaths Were Caused by Corrosive Sublimate and Murder Was the Object

Seattle, July 21.—This morning, at the coroner's inquest of Mrs. Mull, and her infant daughter, who were supposed to have been poisoned a week ago, Mrs. Crippen, mother of the dead woman, refused to answer questions as to what medicines had been administered and by whom, on the ground that her answers might incriminate herself. The autopsy shows the deaths were caused by corrosive sublimate. The jury brought in a verdict of poisoned by persons unknown, and arrests are expected to follow.

Were Not Invited Same Old Yacht Rot

Oyster Bay, July 21.—President Roosevelt was surprised to see in a morning paper that the Prince and Princess of Wales had accepted his invitation to pay America a visit. He says no invitation has been extended, although he would be pleased to entertain the British heir apparent.

Same Old Collision

Gault, Ont., July 21.—A rear-end collision occurred on the Canadian Pacific early this morning between two freights on the west end of the long bridge over Grand river, and two cars were thrown into the river. Four bodies have been recovered, and one other is believed to be in the wreckage at the bottom of the river.

Keep Him on Ice

Jackson, Ky., July 21.—Captain Ewen arrived on the early train this morning, concealed in an ice chest, and remained in an express car in the yards until the crowd left, and then went home unaccompanied. He sent word to the guard, which speedily formed around his house. He will testify before the grand jury today, and will leave on the afternoon train.

Will Not Attend the Funeral. Washington, July 21.—The state department announces that the United States won't be officially represented at the pope's funeral. Members of the legation will probably attend, but in their individual capacities.

LARGE HAIL STONES

Chicago Visited by Sudden Summer Shower

Hail Stones as Big as Plums, Set Horses Running Away and Cause all Kinds of Havoc

Chicago, July 21.—There was a phenomenal hail storm today at noon. Stones from the size of a pea to three ounces in weight fell, and the damage was heavy. Horses ran in all directions, smashing into windows. The storm was without warning. Several were injured in the parks, where they were too far from shelter. The entire telephone service was disconnected during the storm. In many parts of the city live trolley wires were broken, endangering the lives of pedestrians. Throughout the storm there was a heavy downpour of rain, accompanied by high wind and constant lightning.

Same Old Yacht Rot

Highlands, July 21.—Dense fog this morning. It was Lipton's intention, owing to the pope's death, to keep the yachts at anchor several days, but his American friends advised him this was uncalculated for, considering the short time left in which to try-out the challenger. The wind freshened to 11 knots. Shamrock I went over at 11:40:44, the challenger followed at 11:41:21. In the run to the outer mark she easily caught and passed the old boat. The course is 40 miles.

Highlands, July 21.—Shamrock III finished the first time around, a distance of 20 miles, 32 seconds ahead of the old boat.

She is a Scrapper

Cleveland, July 21.—Thirteen-year-old Annie Bromley last night robbed a neighbor of $600 worth of diamonds and $30 in money. She fought with a home-made sling-shot when accused, and escaped. The girl's mother was arrested for receiving stolen property, the police having found it in her possession.

Lost Both of His Legs

Redding, Cal., July 21.—Horace Bushnell, who had both legs cut off by the cars last night, died this morning. He had been drinking, and fell on the track and went to sleep.

KING VISITS IRELAND

Is Given an Enthusiastic Irish Reception

Is Personally Well Liked by the Irish People Who Count Him as a Friend

Dublin, July 21.—The arrival of their Majesties at Kingstown today, and their subsequent state entry into Dublin was made the occasion for brilliant ceremony. Particularly interesting was the ceremony at the city limits, where an ancient gate and castle towers had been reproduced. On the city side of the gate were lord mayor and council in their scord robes, the mace-bearers in blue and silver, and several hundreds of representative citizens of Dublin, who were provided with seats on stands. Several crack regiments lined the road as a guard of honor, while behind them were cordons of police and militia. Thousands of spectators eagerly awaited the coming of the king and queen. Always personally popular with the Irish, King Edward was to receive a warm welcome on the occasion of this, his first visit to the Emerald Isle since he ascended the throne. Shortly before the arrival of the royal party the pursuit-at-arms, wearing a gorgeous cape of royal heraldry, galloped up to the lord mayor, and asked permission for the entrance of the king and queen. Gravely and in quaintly worded terms of courtesy the lord mayor granted the request. Back galloped the pursuit-at-arms, the gate banged behind him, the whole scene being a counterpart of a sixteenth century play.

Then from the ramparts of the gate came a fanfare of trumpets. The royal party was in sight. Out upon a scarlet cloth stepped Lord Mayor Harrington and the members of the municipal corporation, the same who had refused to vote the king an address of welcome. Their robes glowed in the sunshine and their hands and maces flashed brilliantly. The gate was swung open and in rode the advance guard of the royal cortege. A squad of life guards preceded the royal carriage and their brilliant uniforms evoked loud applause from the spectators. The first carriage contained the home secretary and other members of the king's party, accompanied by mounted oquerries. Finally, amid almost perfect silence, save for the echo of cheers and cries of "God save the king," from outside the city limits came the royal couple. During the five minutes when the king was occupied with the ceremonies at the gate there was scarcely a hll in the loud cheering of the crowd. Frequently his majesty nodded. In fact, he scarcely ceased nodding during the entire nine-mile drive through the streets of Dublin to the castle.

The royal yacht was sighted off Kingstown at 8:30. A heavy rain is falling. The crowds began to gather four hours before the arrival of the royal barge, which touched the shore at 11 o'clock. It was a coincidence that at that instant the sun broke through the clouds. There was great enthusiasm. The king has canceled the gala performance at the Theatre Royal, Friday as a mark of respect to the Pope.

The king, replying to an address of welcome, presented by Atkinson, paid tribute to Leo. He referred to the great kindness shown by the English people, and concluded his address by alluding to the fact that his visit occurred at a time when the hopes for a better era for Ireland were bright, and it was his earnest prayer that these hopes would be fulfilled.

The only jarring notes in the king's reception were that there was no ceremony of handing him the keys of the city, and the city hall was undecorated.

The Citadel of Buddhism

Lhasa, the sacred city of Tibet, is built on Mount Potala, near the mouth of the river Indus. Tradition says it had its beginnings in the seventeenth century; but until recent years almost nothing was known of the city and its people, save that foreigners were rigidly excluded from within its walls. To Usho Narzumof, a Kalmuk pilgrim, who twice cleverly managed to elude the vigilance of the guards, the world is indebted for pictures of this forbidden city, and for much valuable information concerning it. The story of many futile efforts to accomplish similar ends of Usho Narzumof's final success will be told in the August Century by J. Deniker, member of the Societe de Geographie, Paris. The illustrations will be from photographs by Narzumof.

WORLD MOVES ALONG

Death of the Pope Causes But a Ripple

Oreglia is Virtually Pope Until Leo's Successor is Elected and Crowned

Rome, July 21.—The cardinals assembled in the consistory chapel this morning and took the customary oath of secrecy. Among the items of business to be transacted today is the election of a secretary of the conclave, to succeed Volpini, who died a week ago. Previous to today's assembling, the cardinals visited the remains of the Pope. The scene was impressive, the body lying on a couch in the insignia of a cardinal, and with a crucifix clasped in the fingers. Penitentiaries are constantly chanting a requiem, and soldiers are guarding the body. The face is greatly sunken since yesterday. Oreglia has viewed the body and signed the final death certificate.

The official certificate of the Pope's death was filed today with the mayor of Rome by Laponni, who gave the cause as complications with pneumonia. Telegrams of sympathy are pouring into the Vatican. Among them is one from the Kaiser, who expresses his sincere sympathy in the grievous loss the Catholic church sustains. The pontiff's body was embalmed at 2 o'clock this afternoon, under Laponni's supervision. The remains will probably lie in state in the chapel of the Holy Sacrament tonight. At noon the official notice of the Cardinal Vicar was posted on all the doors of all the churches of Rome. The orders are that the funeral services will be held at St. Peter's, and as soon as possible the corpse will be placed there, according to custom. Second, tonight all the bells will toll between 8 and 9 o'clock. Third, mass and solemn prayers will be said in all the churches when the body is placed in St. Peter's. Fourth, all priests shall pray for the repose of his soul. Fifth, a repetition of the prayer propounded aligendo until the new Pope is elected. Today, outside of the Vatican, few signs of mourning are visible. The bronze doors of the Vatican have not been reopened.

Rome, July 21.—While guards and watching monks were being stationed around the dead Pope events of momentous importance to Catholic Christendom were occurring. The death of Pope Leo meant the passing of the supreme power into the hands of the Sacred College of Cardinals as its temporary custodian during the interregnum.

The perfect administrative machinery of the church provided against the slightest interruption of the governing authority. As the senior member of the Sacred College, Cardinal Oreglia, to whom the Pope solemnly confided the interests of the church, has now become the exponent of the cardinals until Pope Leo's successor has been elected. This has brought forth Cardinal Oreglia as the striking personality of the hour.

The cardinal is the exact antithesis of Pope Leo, having none of the late pontiff's sympathy and benevolent characteristics. He comes from a noble Piedmontese stock, and his nobility is shown in his haughty and austere bearing. He was not popular among his colleagues or the Romans, and his brusque manner has earned him the title of "the Piedmontese bear." He is tall and robust and his 74 years are shown by the whiteness of his hair. His face has the tawny hue of old parchment, and is deeply lined. Despite his austerity, the cardinal's learning and piety are universally recognized. This is the man who for the time being is practically Pope. It was he who issued the orders to clear the Vatican of intruders, and brought tranquility out of the confusion immediately following Pope Leo's death.

Rome, July 21.—The congregation of cardinals, at its session today, elected Mgr. Merry Del-Val secretary of the conclave. This is supposed to be a victory for Oreglia.

Rome, July 21.—The Daily Tribune today prints an interview with Cardinal Svampa, in which he says previous political enmities among the cardinals no longer exist, therefore concord in the selection of a pope may easily be obtained. The conclave will be short. The new Pope will introduce something new and original in his policy toward the question of temporal power, which will differ from the program of his predecessor. The interview is thought to have great significance, as indicating the far-reaching policy of the Holy See.

Paris, July 21.—The exceptional character of the action of the Pope, in delegating part of his powers to Cardinal Rampolla, attracted considerable attention in Paris, and was strongly emphasized by an unnamed but well-informed cardinal, a non-resident of Rome, in an interview published by the Eclair, as follows: "His (the Pope's) body, which still

PEACOCK MAY NOT HANG

Strong Influence Being Brought to Bear

Governor Will Take up the Petitions Next Tuesday and Finally Dispose of Them

A letter was this morning received in the governor's office from Mayor J. M. Start, of Independence, supplementing the petition recently filed for the commutation of the death sentence of Wm P. Peacock, now at the penitentiary awaiting execution, to imprisonment for life. Mr. Start says he is well acquainted with the circumstances leading up to the tragedy, and he urges commutation, as he does not think the death sentence should be imposed in this case.

A letter has also been received from a party living near the scene of the tragedy, urging that no action be taken, as he fears that in the future some sympathetic governor might be induced to pardon Peacock and again "burn him loose in the community." Peacock was raised in North Salem, in the family of John Kerr, long since deceased, and he attended school there, many of the schoolmates of the unfortunate man being now residents of Salem. He was then known as Willie Kerr, bearing the name of his foster father, who was very fond of the little hunchback, and treated him with the same consideration manifested toward Mr. Kerr's own son, Alex. S. Kerr, who on May 18th, last, fell the victim of Peacock's rife. Peacock, in the days he attended school in Salem, manifested an aversion to his fellows, being very sensitive on account of his deformity. He was always known as a good boy, attending strictly to his own affairs, and troubling no one.

When John Kerr, the lad's benefactor died, it was found that he had provided for the welfare of the cripple, by leaving the latter $1500 with which to begin the battle of life, pity for the poor hunchback having evidently been the motive for this generous provision for Peacock's future.

This seems to have caused some feeling on the part of Alex. Kerr, the son of the cripple's benefactor, as Alex thought that the money left by his father should have come to him, as the rightful heir, and should not have gone to Peacock, and, according to those familiar with the circumstances, young Kerr, at that time, began a series of persecutions of the hunchback, that are said to have continued in a degree until the matter culminated in the violent death of Kerr at the hands of his crippled foster brother, last May. Peacock, brooding over the matter, became impressed with the fact, (for fact he thought it was) that Alex. Kerr, his foster brother, was seeking an opportunity to do him bodily harm, and this grew into the belief, in his partially diseased mind, that Kerr was the head or an organized conspiracy against his life. The governor today notified parties interested that he would take up the petition Tuesday, the 28th, and will settle the matter at that time.

Dynamited the Safes

Passaic, Ohio, July 21.—Burglars last night blew the Carlton Hill post office safe, and got away with $800. The same night the safe in the West Melton office, near by, was blown open and $300 secured.

Legislature Adjourns

Washington, July 21.—Squiers cables the state department that the Cuban legislature has adjourned sine die, without acting on the permanent treaty with the United States. The postal treaties were confirmed.

Bank Robber and Murderer

Union, Mo., July 21.—The Collins bank robber murder case will be put in the hands of the jury this evening.

The Crops are all Right

Washington, July 21.—The crop report last week shows conditions on the Pacific coast are favorable. Minnesota spring wheat conditions are unfavorable.

Wyoming Sheriff Has Company of Militia to Aid Him

Kansas and Wyoming Getting Almost as Disreputable as the Blue Bloods of Kentucky

Cheyenne, Wyo., July 21.—Sheriff Fenton left Thermopolis this morning with Jim McCloud, the alleged murderer, who will be placed in jail at Basin. He was escorted by a company of militia cavalymen and 40 picked deputies, as it is reported he will be waylaid in the hills, and have to fight his way through. The cattlemen are said to be under the leadership of the notorious Tom O'Day.

Thomas Mullen, of Massachusetts, arrived in the city today, and is visiting his uncle, Alderman Thomas Burrows.
