WANTS SQUARE GIRLS

Dr. Matthews Lecture at the S. O. Chautauqua
Says They Should be Intelligent, Industrious, Independent and Inspired

As a prelude to the address of the evening by Dr. M. A. Matthews, of Seattle, Miss Stella M. Case gave readings and Prof. L. M. Glen sang two solos. The audience was enthusiastic over both numbers, and both Miss Case and Prof. Glen were compelled to respond to vociferous encores.
 Dr. Matthews was then introduced and his subject announced as "The Girl Four Square." The speaker stands 6 feet and 4 inches high, and when unlimbered for action some of his auditors were fearful that his head would become entangled in the tennis net above him. He made a picturesque appearance. He began his lecture with some humorous comparisons between himself and Prof. Glen, the latter being exceedingly rotund and rather short. His style of speaking is direct and forceful, his sentences are clear and epigrammatic. Plunging into his subject he said that there are more things thundering at the foundation of the home in this country than at anything else. The domestic problem confronts us, is vital and must be solved, and all problems are included in that. The government, the church and heaven or hell depends on that. During the past 20 years there had been 500,000 divorces in this country. Of the divorces 93 per cent could have been avoided, the speaker believed, if the other 7 per cent unavoidable. The boys think there is a better chance beyond the front yard gate, and parental discipline seems to be taking a prolonged rest. The boys and girls went to school and took elocution lessons and learned to debate questions with their parents. The old man was at a disadvantage. The girls must be built foursquare, and that would be the solution of the problem. In the make-up of such a girl there must be four P's, the first one being that she must be intelligent.—The average woman has more sense than the average man, for she has plus intuition. She ought to know everything if she has an old gossiping husband. Man is the gossip, but woman is the repeater, and she is a six-shooter, too. To be intelligent a woman should study all national problems and economic questions. There should be no secrets between husband and wife, and she should be able to take up his business in stress of misfortune. It is man's business to make the fortune, but woman is the treasurer. Scientific cookery came in for attention. There are more fortunes wrecked in the frying pan than anywhere else. Poor cooking made more criminals than the rum traffic. The mother should be intelligent on national problems, because the father is too busy to study them, and the mother must indoctrinate the children. Do you know what makes an American citizen? An insatiate love for money. The speaker believed in co-operation.

Industrious was the second I mentioned. He did not believe by industry a competition between man and woman in the field of art, science or business. A girl should not work for less salary than the boy, if she was doing the same work. The girl must make the home, and have corresponding ideas, and understand she is a co-partner with her husband. The speaker paid an eloquent tribute to the working-girl. He would turn the angle into the nightingale, and have it sing the sweetest songs over the bed of the working-girl. In the third place a girl must be independent along lines of reform. The country needs reform in dress. The speaker did not feel like telling missionaries to China to preach to the Chinese about pinching their feet, when they themselves are pinched, only in a different place. The time is coming in this country when there will be a chair in the schools for child study. The greatest curse to the country is the double standard, and he believes that woman herself was responsible for this.

Fourth a woman should be inspired. Inspiration is a woman's mission; it is her mission to make a home. Homes are not built, but are made, and the corner stone in such a home are absolute confidence, perfect love, faith and economy. It should contain all amusements, entertainments, etc., and the parlors should be opened to the children. The speaker closed with a beautiful peroration to the mother.—Ashland Tidings.

breathes, is on earth, but his powerful intelligence has departed forever. Yesterday Rampolla announced that most extensive powers had been conferred upon him. By whom? The Sacred College? It has no powers while the pontiff breathes. The Pope alone is capable of delegating such powers, but in order to do so he must be in a position to act with intelligence, and Dr. Rosconi, an eminent physician, bears witness to the fact that Pope Leo is adorable, but his speech is that of a child.
 "What are the powers conferred on Rampolla? They are evidently spiritual. It is not known how far they extend. The eminent secretary of state is about to renew his entourage by cutting down the inconspicuous trees and planting insignificant bushes in their place. To assume such a responsibility, to risk such a danger, is an act of courageous devotion to the church, because if the new plenipotentiary does not come to an understanding with the camerlengo, all the plantation will be torn up on the morrow of the Pope's death. History furnishes no precedent for the delegation of powers in articulo mortis."

Doctors Get a Roasting

Paris, July 21.—The Matin's correspondent at Rome sends what he describes as an authentic version of the Pope's end, received from the lips of M. de Navanne, counselor of the French embassy at the Vatican, who was present at the last moment. The only persons at the bedside, on account of the smallness of the room and the stifling atmosphere, were the Pope's valet, Counta, his two nephews, Dr. Lagnon and the domestic prelate, Count Camillo Pecci, who was overcome by emotion and heat that he was soon obliged to go out.
 At 2 o'clock the major domo opened the door, saying:
 "This is the end."
 All the cardinals entered and knelt around the bedside. In the throne-room the Pope's battle against suffocation could be heard. Count Camillo Pecci said to M. de Navanne:
 "I regret that the already unbearable air of the sick room has been made worse by the premature presence of all these officials. But the doctors understood nothing. He almost survived in spite of them, and would certainly have lived if, whatever they say to the contrary, the first diagnosis had not been an irreparable error."
 After the death of Pope Leo, Cardinal Oreglia, who is reputed to be so hard and unfeeling, came out of the bedroom sobbing.

Was Held up and Robbed

Herbert Nutter, an employe of the House Furnishing Co., reported to the police last evening that at 11 o'clock Sunday evening he was held up and robbed on Liberty street near the Stensleff meat market, by two men, who stepped out of the shadow, and went through his pockets, securing $12.50. Chief of Police Gibson has investigated the case, but can find no clue to the perpetrators of the robbery.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

California's Famous Sculptor in City Hospital

It May be Said—"He Asked for Bread and Ye Gave Him a Stone"

Discouraged and ill in body and mind, Marion Wells, sculptor, artist, litterateur, and member of the Bohemian club, turned his face to the city and county hospital today.
 This morning he lay waiting for the ambulance in his room at 1433 Stockton street, with his bundle of clothes on the bed at his side. His wife, who posed for the Liberty on the city hall dome, waited with him until the men brought the stretcher and took him away, and she was the only friend to bid him Godspeed.
 It was strangely sad and beyond belief that the man whose work is perhaps better known than that of any other California sculptor, should be compelled to appeal to the charity of the city almost in the prime of his manhood. His friends have been legion, but he has not trusted to them, and they have not sought him out; so he lay ill alone for four months until his money was gone and his wife was forced to seek work to care for their two children. Then he proudly asked the city's help rather than ask of those who had forgotten him.
 "Yes, I have registered at the county hospital. I am waiting now for the ambulance," he said with quiet dignity this morning. "I hope there won't be much of a crowd to stare at me," he added, "but there will. I—" and then his mind wandered a little, and his wife tried to hush him through her tears.
 Mrs. Wells has cared faithfully for her husband during his four months' illness until she was forced to leave him and work to give him food. Now she earns a dollar a day as house-keeper at a lodging house at 533 Broadway. She has paid the rent of her husband's room, but she could not give him the care he needed in his helpless condition.
 "It was the only thing to do," she said this morning. "I must work every day, and he cannot be left alone, so he must go where he will have care and good food. It is terrible, but what else could we do, and they tell me my husband will be well cared for there."

Marion Wells has for many years been one of the most prominent of San Francisco's sculptors, and the fact that he has been reduced to want will be a sad shock to those who know his work. His Liberty on the city hall dome is famous, and the tall, graceful figure poised high on the globe is that of his wife, who is grief-stricken over the misfortune that has come to them.
 Among the other well-known works of the sculptor is the statue of Marshall, the discoverer of gold in California, for which it is said the state now owes him $1,700 a strange coincidence when the sculptor has turned penniless to the city for help.
 The carving and modeling which have made the Hibiscus bank building one of the most artistic in the city was done by Wells, and the interior decoration and carving of St. Ignace's church was the work of his hands, and a number of other public buildings in this city have been made beautiful by the sculptor whose work is done.

He decorated the arches of the famous quadrangle at Stanford university and did some of the work on the Memorial chapel at Palo Alto, which is considered among the best he has accomplished. Wells is a Knight Templar and he is a life member of the Bohemian club, where his good fellowship won many friends in his prosperous days. Several years ago the sculptor owned valuable property in this city and in Berkeley, where he established his studio. For two years he has been failing and unable to accomplish much in his art. His property has vanished, and there is nothing left to show for the work that is scattered over the city. Wells is the son of General Marion Wells, a confederate general, who was killed in the civil war, and who was a slave owner in Louisiana. The sculptor was sent to Philadelphia to college and studied art there. He is a linguist and his papers written for the Bohemian club jinks have shown literary worth. He came to California thirty-two years ago and was one of the little coterie of artists and writers who were the first to make the Bohemian club famous.

RUBBER TIRES

Did you ever observe what a disappointing thing it is, after admiring a fine turnout at a distance, to notice as it comes nearer the noise of the steel tires crunching on the gravel, till the occupants, if there are two of them, can hardly communicate with each other without yelling in the ear, or using the sign language?
 This, fortunately, is becoming the exception more than the rule, for we are selling more and more rubber tires all the time, and yet there are quite a number of customers who do not really appreciate the comfort and convenience of a rubber tire, over the steel.
 It's noiseless.
 It's durable.
 It saves the wheel.
 It takes off the jar.
 It's a nerve tonic, for you can really enjoy the drive.
 Come and see us about tires. We can show you price lists for the various sizes, and you will find they are not as high as you thought.
