The Weather.

Tonight and Friday, partly cloudy.
It is a coincidence that the eloquent young divine, Rev. Norman Bartlett, who delivered a sensational lecture entitled "To Hell in a Pullman," should die in that kind of a car a few days ago.

Society girls in the East are working so hard in the seaside resorts, to amuse themselves, that they have to go home to rest. It is what Teddy would call strenuous play.

Safe blowers in Seattle robbed a brewery of $700. Hold-ups and burglaries are bad enough, but when it comes to interfering with the beer supply, the people will get their Dutch up.

To Improve the Umpqua

Roseburg, Or., July 29.—A most important step was taken here Monday toward the development of the lumbering industry of this portion of the state. This was the granting of a franchise to the Oregon Boom & Timber Company for improving the North Umpqua river for floating logs and timber.

The contract provides that the work shall be completed within two years. It is also agreed that the company shall erect and operate a sawmill of 100,000 daily capacity at Winchester, where the main line of the Southern Pacific railroad crosses the North Umpqua river. Other parties also expect to erect woodworking plants there as soon as facilities for securing timber are assured.

The franchise provides that the stream shall be cleared of obstructions as far east as the Cascade for at least a distance of 20 miles, thus making available vast bodies of very fine timber, which are now practically inaccessible. Operations will begin as soon as preliminary details can be arranged.

Two Thousand Umbrellas.

Fully two thousand umbrellas lost by their owners in elevated railroad trains are awaiting identification in the "lost and found" office of the Manhattan Railway Company. About half of the number were taken in by the "L" guards in the recent period of rainy weather. James Carlton, clerk in charge of the department, has been working overtime to ascertain the rightful claimants, but the collection is still larger than he cares to handle.

"Umbrellas of various kinds and the last three weeks," said he yesterday, "I wish the people who own them would take them away. They make certain of the real owners. There are hundreds of claimants, but very few of them have any right to the umbrellas, and when they find they are unable to identify the property they claim any one in the collection which happens to please their eyes. I refuse to let them have them, and they proceed to tell me what they think of me. Women can excel men at this game."—New York Press.

If an explanation of disease is not so obscure and involved that it is mysterious to all but the initiated, many seem to think it beneath their great learning to countenance. The cause of disease, when Osteopathically considered, is often very simple. Drs. Schoettle, Barr & Barr, Osteopaths, Grand Opera House, Salem, Or.

Man's Friend, the King Snake.
The most relentless exterminator of reptiles is a member of the family itself—the beautiful yellow and black king snake, the friend of man and the avowed enemy of anything that creeps or crawls, regardless of size or poison fang. The native of our own South, the king snake is between five and eight feet long and no thicker round than a man's thumb. Built in every muscle and bone for speed and tremendous constricting power, there is not another snake on earth that can withstand his assault. He is immune to the poison of the cobra and of the rattlesnake, and the strength of a thirty-foot python has no terrors for him. Within five minutes from the opening of the fight, the king snake could kill the biggest python that ever lived. Ferocious as the little constrictor is toward his own kind, toward man he is friendly and rarely tries to attack when met alone. McClure's Magazine.

A Ministers Mistake.
A city minister was recently handed a notice to be read from his pulpit. Accompanying it was a clipping from a newspaper bearing upon the matter. The clergyman started to read the extract and found that it began: "Take Kemp's Balsam, the best Cough Cure." This was hardly what he had expected, and, after a moment's hesitation, he turned it over and found on the other side the matter intended for reading.

Wierd Story From Burmah.
A story comes from Burmah of a six-year-old Burmese boy in the Pegu district, who is believed by the simple villagers around him to be the reincarnation of the late Mr. A. H. Tucker, district superintendent of police, who was killed by Dacoits in 1894. The child has been taken to various places where Mr. Tucker was stationed, and the Burmese declare that he remembers all the incidents of his previous existence. At the place of the murder he trembled and gave particulars of the deed, they say, and nothing will persuade him that the spirit of the late Mr. Tucker has not returned to earth in the shape of the boy. Such reincarnation is generally believed in Burmah, and numerous alleged examples of it are on record. The reincarnated ones are called "Wu zas."—Exchange.

Breath

Revived by Artificial Respiration.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure Cured Wife.

Fainting spells are a sure indication of a weak heart. The heart cannot do the work required of it and stops beating. If it ceases for more than a minute death ensues. Weak hearts must have aid from the outside, such as Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, which can give, if the brain and from there to her heart. She had two very bad fainting spells, when the pain in her heart was most intense and her breath stopped. The second time we had to resort to artificial respiration to revive her.

We were advised to give Dr. Miles' Heart Cure a trial and I bought a bottle and began giving it as directed. We found the doses were too strong, so I gave her half-doses three times a day, and she began to improve. After she had taken two bottles the pains were all gone and she was feeling like a new woman. She continued the Heart Cure in small doses for several months and is now enjoying better health than for the past six years.—M. J. Thompson, Dept. County Clerk, Klamath P. O., Cal.

Don't Have to Undress.
Three learned supreme court justices sitting in appellate term in New York have decided that there are "no rules of etiquette that require a man, while eating in a so-called quick-lunch restaurant, to take off his overcoat and hat."

This decision was the outcome of an appeal taken from the judgment of the municipal court for $4.40 in favor of Lewis Harris, who alleged his overcoat was stolen while eating in a luncheon. The court ruled that he had not used proper care in hanging up his coat.

Use Trib for tobacco.

Wanted.

We would like to ask through the columns of your paper, if there is any person who has used Green's August Flower for the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia and liver troubles that has not been cured—and we also mean their results, such as sour stomach, fermentation of food, habitual costiveness, nervous dyspepsia, headache, despondent feelings, sleepless nights—in fact, any trouble connected with the stomach or liver? This medicine has been sold for many years in all civilized countries, and we wish to correspond with you, and send you one of our books free of cost. If you never tried August Flower, try a 25-cent bottle first. We have never known of its failing. If so, something more serious in the matter with you. The 25-cent size has just been introduced this year. Regular size 75-cent. Dr. Stone's drug stores.

Left His Purse.

President Loubet had a strange experience last week at the distribution of prizes for meritorious conduct. After the ceremony a collection was taken, and one of the collectors, Mlle. Conscience, mounted the platform and approached the president of the republic, from whom she requested a contribution. M. Loubet felt in his pockets and found that he had forgotten his purse, and then M. Combarren leaned forward and tendered his purse to the president, who placed a louis in the bag amid applause.

In the Feud Country.

"The people generally cannot understand the positive density of the residents of the Kentucky feud districts," said Representative Roddenberry, of Illinois, at the Congressional last night. "I recently spent several weeks in the Breathitt county region and had an opportunity to study conditions. Life is held very cheaply by the mountaineers. A farmer living near one of the small towns had a quarrel with the storekeeper. It ended by the storekeeper ordering the rustic never to speak to him again. The farmer went home and returned to the town several weeks later, probably having forgotten all about his quarrel. He spoke to the storekeeper and was promptly shot dead. I supposed that that would mean an arrest or a feud, or something of that sort, and was very much surprised to learn that the matter passed unnoticed. It will probably be heard from later, when the farmer's boys get big enough to go after the storekeeper and his family."

"We stopped one day and asked a woman, apparently about thirty years of age, if there was not a store down a certain road. She answered that she had heard so, but that she had never been down that road more than a mile. I asked her how long she had lived in that neighborhood, and she replied that she was born in the house and had never been out of the neighborhood. The schools are few and far between, and poor excuses at that. There will be no betterment of conditions until the state takes a hand, builds schools, sends good teachers there and protects them. The people are good-natured, as a rule and never bother a stranger, if he attends to his own affairs. Among themselves, however, they think less of a human life than they do of that of a horse."—Washington Post.

What Joseph W. Folk, of St. Louis, Has Really Done.

But, as for the remedy for the evils of the lobby, a beginning has been made, and the credit is Joseph W. Folk's. It is not so much that he has convicted hoodler after hoodler in his city, and has been the main instrument in upsetting the state lobby, though that is much. His great accomplishment has been the sentiment which he has created throughout Missouri. Three years ago bribe-giving was a crime on the statute books, but the blood of good people was not stirred by it. Today a legislator conferring in private with a recognized lobbyist risks his whole political future. Right here is real hope for reform. If a citizen wants to influence legislation, he must do his work in public. Secret hearings, evening chats in the lobby, private personal solicitation—all these must go. The public once for all must distrust any measure supported by a secret lobby.

And one other suggestion made by the grand jury richly deserves adoption. Every franchise proved to have been secured through bribery should, by that proof alone, be rendered null and void. Fraudulent franchises are, after all, merely a fine name for stolen goods, and the receiver of them must have no more protection under the law than the second-hand dealer who, with his eyes wide open, buys the burglar's booty at a fraction of its real value. —From an article on "The Missouri Lobby" in Leslie's Monthly for August.

Planting False Teeth.

A Moscow dentist appears to have solved the problem of supplying the human mouth with false teeth which will grow into the gums as firmly as natural ones. At the root of the false teeth holes are made. Holes are also made in the jaw itself. The tooth is then placed in the cavity. In a short time a soft, graduated growth finds its way from the patient's jaw into the tooth. This growth gradually hardens and holds the tooth in its position. It is stated that it does not matter whether the cavity into which the tooth is to be placed is one from which a natural tooth has been recently drawn or whether it has been healed for some years.—London Tit-Bits.

A NATURAL RESULT.

It is very reasonable to suppose if the foundation of a structure was removed that the building itself is bound to come down. This same principle can be applied to disease. Take a medicine into the system that will remove the cause of sickness, and the illness leaves of itself. Dyspepsia, indigestion, sick-headache and biliousness have their foundation in stomach disorders. Remove this weakness and the other symptoms are no more. There is one cure for all this that all druggists sell for 25c per box. It is called Dr. Gunn's Improved Liver Pills. They get right at the beginning of these diseases and make the cure by taking away the cause of it. We will send a small box free by mail, or a large box on receipt of 25c. A Freak Tree in Indiana.

A freak of nature has been found by workmen who were cutting timber a Benham. The tract belongs to Isaac F. King, and the freak is the intergrowth of two kinds of timber.

A young, thrifty poplar tree, some 15 inches in diameter, has, as viewed from a short distance, apparently what is an elm limb nearly half its own girth growing from its trunk about eight feet from the ground. A careful examination of the base of the tree reveals elm roots and the body of elm springs directly from the body of the poplar.

A slight ridge in the poplar trunk, which winds from the elm roots to the point from which the elm leaves it, shows how much more vigorous its growth has been than that of its companion tree, and for some feet the poplar has completely swallowed the elm. About twenty feet higher the two seem to have become attached again and in time may form another combine. The poplar has attained a height of about 100 feet, and the elm is somewhat shorter. Just how it is possible for the elm tree to thrive, in spite of the fact that it has been encased by the poplar for many years, is not clear.—Indianapolis News.

Letters from Women

Cured by the use of Kodol are received daily. Their troubles nearly all begin with indigestion or other stomach disorder.

If the food you eat fails to give strength to your body, it is because the juices secreted by the stomach and digestive organs are inadequate to transform the nutrient properties of the food into blood. That is indigestion. The system is deprived of the amount of nourishment required to keep up the strength, and the result is that one or more of the delicate organs gradually grows weak, and then weaker, until finally it is diseased. Here a great mistake is made. That of treating the diseased organ. The best doctors in the land make this very mistake. Why should they? It is so easy to see that the trouble is not there.

Kodol Cures

This famous remedy puts the stomach and digestive organs in a healthy condition so that rich, red blood is sent coursing through the veins and arteries of every muscle, tissue and fiber throughout every organ of the entire body, and by Nature's law of health, full strength and vigor is soon restored to each.

Kodol cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach disorders.

I have taken Kodol for nearly two months after each meal and it is the only remedy that gave relief from the terrible pains I endured. After a time I would take it but once a day, and now, while I keep a bottle handy, I seldom need it, as it has cured me.
