

BALL GAME SUNDAY

Salem Sent 200 Enthusiasts Down to Portland.

Morris Again Saved Browns with a Safe Hit Which Brought in the odd run

The closing chapters in Sunday's matinee will live long in the minds of those who were fortunate to see them. Where the great mass of people came from is a mystery. But they came. Some walked. Some rode on the street cars, some drove in buggies, some came in automobiles. Some came early. Chief among the early arrivals was a delegation of 198 lovers of the game and admirers of Sam Morris from Salem. Some came late. They crowded into the grand stand until that structure—its weather-beaten timbers making a rude frame for the animated and beautifully colored picture within—resembled under its human weight. They overflowed into the grounds until a continuous line of people, standing, sitting and kneeling, surrounded the players. It was a gay crowd, gay in its coloring and in its mood, and polite and good-natured because it was so large.

This tribute from the people of Portland and the nearby towns was paid to Sam Morris, the Nez Perce Indian—a student of the Salem Industrial school, through whose veins courses the blood of chieftains. The outpouring was also a tribute to our national game, and to the Browns, because of the brilliant ball they have been playing during the past five weeks. And the beautiful part of the crowd was that it was made up of the best people in Portland. The governor of the state was there. So were bankers, merchants and professional men, and not a few of Portland's best church people. They came early, like the rest, and left supremely happy because Portland won the seventh straight game from Sacramento, and because they had spent a pleasant afternoon in the open air, watching 18 young men taking part in a game that has no equal in the outdoor sports of the world.

Ovation for Sam Morris.
When the curtain was rung up in the initial inning Sam Morris, the red man, who had sprung before the public in almost a single bound, was greeted with a sturdy round of applause. He was not quite as steady as on his previous appearance, and he issued a promissory note to Casey, that was cashed in when Ecku drove out his single. This was all for the undertakers, but it was a lead of one, and half of the big crowd wished Empire Levy had delayed presenting Manager Fisher with a funeral wreath tied with a bunch of crows. The Browns could do nothing with Casey until the fourth, when an error by Egan in handling Nadeau fiasco allowed the left fielder to get to second. Andy Anderson drove him home with a single, but a double play from Townsend to Sheehan closed the scene with a slam. A two-base hit by Hildebrand and a single by Townsend in Sacramento's half of this inning scored Hildebrand, and the undertakers still led until the Brown's half of the eighth. Cutter was again in perfect form, and was delivering a better article of ball than Morris, but he was not getting the royal support. He was more generous with his passes, but he had the good fortune not to have them count; the Browns really won at the bat. The Sacramentos were finding Morris all the time, but when they lifted the balls fell into waiting hands. Considering the ground rules, Morris was extremely fortunate. But at that time he was pitching superb ball, and only in the fourth and ninth innings did the hinges come in clusters.

The ninth inning opened with a tie, and the blanket of despair fluttered feebly when Blake flew out to right field, but it lifted and became trimmed with gold when Francis drove out his single. It became pure gold, assaying 99 fine, when Vigneaux singled and McLaughlin footed it just enough to allow Francis to prompt third. How the crowd yelled to Morris to "win his own game." It was a critical moment for this youth. It would have shattered the nerves of a diamond manager of tried experience. It showed Manager Vigneaux's faith in Morris' ability with the bat. The faith was just for a two-bagger had been driven out by him in the fifth inning, and his home run in the previous game justified it. Morris did not win the game by a clean hit, but it was one that nine times out of ten on the same sort of a play mixes things up. It did this time, and Townsend threw to catch Francis racing home with the winning run, threw badly, and another game was lost by Sacramento in the last inning, the score being Browns 4, Sacramento 2.

Will Enforce the Game Laws

J. W. Baker, the state game warden, was a visitor to this city Friday, says the Junction City Times. He will not appoint county wardens, as has been the custom heretofore, but will divide the state into districts, and will appoint a deputy for each district. Ilan county, he says, ranks first in the number of violations of the bird

Few are entirely free from it. It may develop so slowly as to cause little if any disturbance during the whole period of childhood. It may then produce irregularity of the stomach and bowels, dyspepsia, catarrh and marked tendency to consumption before manifesting itself in much extensive eruption or glandular swelling. It is best to be sure that you are quite free from it, and for its complete eradication you can rely on law. While many of the violations are committed by residents, he says the Portland hunters will go out on the overland and drop off at some small station, and will be out in the fields by sun-up, and will kill a buggy full of birds before other people are astir. They generally have a boy with them, and if they exceed the limit, "the boy killed them." Yamhill ranks second in the violation of this law, and like Linn county, has to bear the responsibility of the depredations of the Portland hunters.

When it comes to killing deer unlawfully, none of the counties in the state can approach Jackson and Josephine. There they are slaughtered for their hides, in season and out of season, and shipped into California.

A special effort will be made to apprehend them, and the warden has an arrangement by which he expects to arrest and punish the guilty parties.

Mr. Baker is very enthusiastic in his work, and we apprehend will make a very successful officer.—Eugene Guard.

County Court Sustained

Judge Boise rendered his decision late Saturday afternoon in the matter of the appeal of the executor of the W. F. West estate from the order of the county court removing him from his trust, and ordering him to file his account, made on petition of Anna E. West, et al.

The circuit court affirms Judge Scott in the removal, the order to file his final account and in awarding the petitioners their costs against the executor personally in the trial court, but holds that the amount for which the executor can be charged cannot be determined in this proceeding; that that matter must be tried out after the filing of the account, and was not before the court at this time, and remands the case to the county court for further proceedings, in accordance with the opinion. Tilton Ford, W. M. Kaiser and W. T. Slater conducted the appeal for the appellant, and F. A. Turner and C. M. Inman appeared for the respondents and petitioners.

Two Convicts Show up

Sacramento, Aug. 10.—The sheriff's posse has just returned from Fair Oaks, where it went in search for two men, one armed with a rifle, and both with revolvers, whom they held up two boys and demanded ammunition. The boys identified the pictures of Fahey and Davis. Supervisor Brooks passed two men last night near Antelope similarly armed.

AFTER LARGE GAME

Astoria Boys Do Great Execution With a Small Rifle

Two Horses two Heifers and one Bull Make Part of an Afternoon Bag

Lorenz Pilkington, the 11-year-old son of City Physician Pilkington, and Harry Hoefler, the 10-year-old son of H. R. Hoefler, in imitation of President Roosevelt, started out on Thursday on a hunt after big game, and were eminently successful. Young Pilkington, without the knowledge of his parents, went to Spexarth's store and purchased a .22-calibre rifle and some cartridges, and then securing young Hoefler as a companion, went out on the Lewis and Clark. Their aim was true and their rifle deadly, but the extent of their slaughter cannot yet be told, as it is believed that the returns are not all in. In the pasture of Louis Wilson they shot and killed two horses, and it is known that they shot a bull belonging to J. W. Reith, but he is still alive, and may get over his injuries. A couple of heifers are missing from Reith's herd, and it is believed these were shot also, but it is not definitely known. The boys did not appear to realize the damage that they were doing, but were under the impression that the rifle was intended to kill animals with, and they rather liked the sport. There was a reckoning this morning when Sheriff Linville discovered who had shot the horses, and Mr. Wilson wanted to be recompensed for his loss. An arbitration committee, consisting of Sheriff Linville and J. V. Burns, was selected to fix the loss and assess it against Dr. Pilkington and H. R. Hoefler, who agreed to abide by the result. The value of the horses was fixed at $250, and of this amount Dr. Pilkington paid $160, and Mr. Hoefler $90. The former was assessed the greater amount, because his boy was the older, and was the owner of the rifle.

Some Rough Sidewalks.

John Young has half a set of artificial teeth awaiting a claimant. He found them under an old sidewalk which he was tearing away to give place to a new one. Sidewalks in this city have been notoriously bad, and the discovery of these teeth emphasizes the fact that some of them are bad. It is supposed that this walk was so rough that the teeth of some lady were shaken out as she passed over it on a wheel. Another theory is that she might have fallen or lost her teeth as a result of seasickness, occasioned by following the undulating outlines of the walk—Corvallis Times.

Shooting Accident.

About 10 a. m. today Ray Cox, of Rose slough, had the misfortune to receive a charge from a 44 Winchester rifle in his right hand, the ball tearing his hand so that it was necessary to amputate the member at the wrist. The rifle was sitting up against a log, when his dog accidentally knocked it over, and, in his attempt to catch the gun, received the charge. Mr. Cox stood the operation well, though having lost considerable blood from the necessary long wait for a physician.—Coast Mail.

A Sawdust Fire.

The Salem fire department was called to the foot of State street Saturday evening to extinguish a small blaze in a pile of sawdust. A stream of water soon put out what little fire there was. Later in the evening the department made another test of the Sibley engine, a stream being thrown from the cistern at the corner of High and Court streets, and the council committee on fire and water was present to observe the working of the new boiler.

When the new city board of health is organized, it is to be hoped it will not take the same kind of a high dive for a starter that the state board indulged in.
