CONCERNING SALMON.

A splendid run of salmon has just passed Astoria, flooding the canneries and compelling the boats and seines to be idle, because their catches could not be handled. Another run is now in the river, and still another, said to be the greatest of all, is at the bar and on its way in. This is good news for Oregon, or, at least, for the Columbia river section, and it ought to be a matter of congratulation to residents of the Willamette valley; yet, under existing circumstances, people up this way have only an indirect interest in the matter. The Willamette is the largest tributary of the Columbia west of the Cascades, flowing through the most richly settled portion of the state, yet not a salmon is available for those living this side of Oregon City. Some years ago, under the Penoyer regime, the legislature appropriated a small sum for building a fish ladder, so that the royal Chinook and his cousins and uncles, the steelhead, silverside and blueback might navigate the waters of the upper Willamette and there reproduce and multiply. The money was expended, but those who managed the job neglected to advertise the makeshift completion in such a manner as to let the salmon find it out. Now, between the canal and the water used for power purposes there is but a small amount going over the falls, and this amount is still further reduced by splashboards placed across the head of the falls. It is an outrage on the people of the Willamette valley that a proper fish ladder is not built and maintained. It would require but a small amount of water to operate it, and thousands of people would be benefited by having access to a stream filled with the greatest of all food fishes.

The valley legislators should unite in demanding the river be made navigable for fish, at least, and should see to it that some one who knows a fish ladder from a hotel elevator be employed to superintend the work of constructing it.

WHY NOT?

Professional prejudice or jealousy, or both, have come to the fore, and, in the name of medical science, sterner demand of a Salem osteopath the reason why his late patient, Mrs. George M. Lease, of that city, was permitted to die from suffocation, caused by a gathering of pus breaking into the pleural sac. If the doctors who seek to discredit as pernicious all medical treatment by physicians not of their school could show that by their methods death from disease was always averted, or life profitably or humanely prolonged, they would come to this conclusion better equipped with logic. The records of deaths quickly following "successful" surgical operations is a long one in every community. Yet the science of surgery does not suffer from these palpable and often cruel failures in its practice. Medicine, as everyone knows, has not been reduced to an exact science. The array of botches minus a small portion of their contents that stands upon the nurse's table in every room where a patient struggles for his life with typhoid fever, bright's disease or any other of a desperate malady, shows that, at best, the practice of medicine is but a series of experiments. The doctor who announces that he has changed his patient's medicine confesses this, and discloses his perplexity. The patient dies, and the baffled doctor retires behind a "visitation of God," duly proclaimed by the minister, and the little world in which this was an incident returns after the funeral laughing, or at least unquenching, the skill that failed to preserve or prolong human life.

This is commendable, since there is an acknowledged limit of human wisdom, and no man can do more than his best according to his light. But why not extend this mantle of charity over conscientious, careful, attentive, physicians, regardless of their "school"? Since the treatment of disease is more or less experimental, why should the osteopath, who is careful, conscientious and devoted to his method, be censured if, unfortunately, he does not succeed in restoring the patient to health? Why is the osteopath, or the hydropath, who gives no medicine, but relies upon manipulation, baths and diet, or the homeopath, who deals out medicine in infinitesimal doses, to be brought sternly to book by the "regulars" when a patient dies, as though death had been hatched by the methods and medicines of allopathy? Why not acknowledge the facts in the case, and admit that the best efforts of the best physicians are often powerless to save or prolong human life? Why not confess judgment in this matter, which, after all, is but to acknowledge that human power has its limits? Why not admit that personal opinion has a wide range in the field of medicine, and that here, as elsewhere, much depends upon the point of view? In brief, why not be just and reasonable?—Oregonian.

NEED OF THE PORTAGE ROAD.

The Dalles Chronicle discusses the portage railway. It says:

"The statement of President Mohler, of the O. R. & N. to the effect that there is no need of cheaper transportation rates in Oregon, will cause many people interested to hunt up some figures on the subject of transportation in the territory affected by the portage road.

"The Inland Empire, the territory which will be vitally affected by the construction of this road, produces annually 40,000,000 bushels of grain; 10,000,000 pounds of wool, 80,000 head of cattle, 520,000 head of sheep and hogs for market, 3000 carloads of fruit, 2,405,000 pounds of hides and pelts and 367,000 tons of hay. The statement of the head of the O. R. & N. company, to the effect that there is no need for cheaper rates from the Inland Empire, causes thinking people to wonder why rates are so much cheaper on territory covered by river competition than that not so affected.

"The present rate on wheat over the O. R. & N., from Arlington to The Dalles, a distance of 54 miles, is 11 1/2 cents per 100, on wool $1.06 per 100, and on cattle, hogs and sheep $24 per carload.

"The rate over the O. R. & N., from The Dalles to Portland, a distance of 88 miles, where there is river competition, 7 1/2 cents per hundred on wheat, 25 cents per 100 on wool and $28 per car on cattle, hogs and sheep. The four classified rates from Arlington to The Dalles are: first class, 53 cents; second-class 48 1/2 cents; third class, 42 cents, and fourth-class, 37 cents.

"From The Dalles to Portland, the same rates are 25, 20, 18 and 15 cents per 100 pounds.

"It is estimated that a reduction of freight rates east of The Dalles to correspond with those west of that point would result in a saving to the producers of the Inland Empire, amounting to $1,000,000 annually, and would stimulate the production of grain and live stock until the output would be doubled within two or three years."

JOURNAL X-RAYS.

The sultan seems to be disposed to make war on Bulgaria and Macedonia. Here's hoping he does, and that all three of them may lick.

Roy Ohmart has been arrested for running a traction engine over a county bridge without putting down planking. As the county sends its road roller over the same bridges, without complying with the law—it is not in good shape to prosecute individuals.

A telegram to the Oregonian from Independence Saturday said a body found in the river near there was in "a very bad state of condition," from which it is inferred both the body and the Queen's English need the services of the coroner.

An article in the Astoria News of Friday is signed "Sidney Dell." Sidney has been out of the public view so long that it seems impossible that it can be the same who nominated Penoyer for governor. Sidney must have been to sea, and came in with the late run of chinooks.

Secretary of War Root was guilty of a very small piece of petty spite work, in ignoring General Miles, on his retirement. The secretary went out of his way to offend a very large number of American people. He didn't hurt Miles, whose record is made, but he did show that his own name was attached to the right sort of animal.

Bridges and Traction Engines.

Chief of Police Gibson this morning arrested Roy Ohmart, for violating the law by running his traction engine across the South Commercial-street bridge without putting down the required planking, and Mr. Ohmart was allowed to go, on depositing $10 bail, until such time as the trial could be conveniently held. Mr. Ohmart contended that County Judge Scott had given him permission to cross the bridge by keeping on the street car track, without the necessity of putting down planking. The street car company has but recently been compelled to repair its portion of the bridge, that had been weakened by the running over of traction engines, and the management are just as anxious as are the city officials to prevent a recurrence of such travel.

ARE YOU SATISFIED.

If Not, What Better Proof can Salem Residents Ask For?

This is the statement of a Salem citizen.

The testimony of a neighbor, You can readily investigate it. The proof should convince you.

G. S. Cooper, farmer, living three miles north-east of Salem on the Garden road, says: "I was raised in the wheat district and when a good lump of a boy I prided myself on having as much strength as any other boy in the neighborhood and when a number of us got together we often tested our strength by lifting. I very often lifted two bags of wheat but have since regretted having done so as the result was that I strained my back and ever after had more or less trouble from dull aching pains across my loins and other symptoms of kidney complaint. In some way Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice and the first time I went to town I dropped into Dr. Stone's drug store and enquired about them. I was told they were highly recommended and advised to give them a trial. I did so, and while I did not follow the treatment as regularly as I should have done, being a poor hand to take any kind of medicine, the benefits I derived from their use stamps them as a remedy which acts fully up to the representations made for it."

Sold for 50 cents a box by all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name, Doan's, and take no other.

CATARH OF THE STOMACH.

When the stomach is overloaded, when food is taken into it that fails to digest, it decays and inflames the mucous membrane, exposing the nerves, and causes the glands to secrete mucus, instead of the natural juices of digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach. For years I suffered with Catarrh of the Stomach, caused by indigestion. Doctors and medicines failed to benefit me until I used Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. —J. R. Ives, Copell, Tex. Sold by F. D. Haas, 96 State street.

New Program at Shields

An unusually large audience greeted the new company at Shields' Park last night, and the way the crowd cheered proved that the new bill was greatly appreciated. The program opened with the Thompson sisters, who did a very neat dance, while singing very catchy songs, and the audience would not let them leave the stage until they had responded to three encores. Meria & Walton, in their laughable skit, "Tip at the Races," was simply immense—nothing but laughter prevailed throughout their turn, with many giggles between each laugh. Their parodies on "Goo-Goo Eyes" and "Good Old Summer Time" brought forth storms of applause. Joe Thompson, in illustrated songs, received an ovation while singing "Side by Side." The views for this beautiful song were simply grand. Sims, who appears in a bobo makeup, created all kinds of laughter by his clever cartoon work. He does everything with great rapidity, and must be seen to be appreciated. Little Marjorie Mandeville simply captured the audience by her graceful dance and contortion work. While doing her turn she has a wonderful little chirp that tickles the audience. The polychrome this week shows a splendid lot of films, including the play of "Que Vadis." With such a strong bill this week, it is predicted that this will be the banner week at Shields', and every one in Salem should attend at least one night.

Reversed the County Court.

At 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon, Judge Boise, of the second department of the circuit court, decided the appeal case in the matter of the estate of William Fowler West, deceased, F. B. West, executor. The case was an appeal from the county court, where the heirs of the estate petitioned for the removal of the executor, and where it was decreed that the estate have judgment against the executor for $450 a year for the time he had been in charge of the estate. Judge Boise reversed this decision of the county court, and gave the executor judgment for his costs and disbursements, and remanded the matter to the lower court for further proceedings in accordance with this decision.

Dying of Black Tongue

Farmers at Glad Tidings, Marquam and Molalla are losing cattle from disease commonly called black tongue. The disease commences much like diphtheria in the human race. The throat swells, the animal becomes drowsy, and, after a day or two, bleeding from the nose sets in, and death soon follows. J. B. Taylor, in conversation with Postmaster Toose, says that turpentine and oil have been used with beneficial results. He lost a fine calf from this disease, and several Molalla farmers are heavy losers. J. A. Vancleave, of Monitor, lost a fine cow Saturday, and reports another cow dying of this dreaded scourge. Farmers should be alive to the situation, and take such preventative measures as may be necessary to keep the disease from spreading.—Woodburn Independent.

To him that hath shall be given.

This is illustrated at Eugene, where the Quaker doctors have the soap, and the community is presenting them with some fine specimens of eggs that forgot to hatch. So long as they have been granted a license they should be protected, but still the peculiar punishment seems adapted to the crime.

JUST ABOUT BEDTIME

Take a little Early Bitter—it will cure constipation, biliousness and liver troubles. DeWitt's Little Early Bitters are different from other pills. They do not gripe and break down the mucous membranes of the stomach, liver and bowels, but cure by gently arousing the secretions and giving strength to these organs. Sold by F. D. Haas, 96 State street.

The political acumen of the kids running the Oregon Journal, is something startling. The most recent idea evolved in that kindergarten is that Hon. M. A. Moody is holding up the appointment of Knowles to the land office at La Grande. Still, as they are all Californians, their utter ignorance of Oregon politics is excusable, the blame lying with their employers.

WHY WE ARE AGENTS

Here Are Some of the Convincing Facts That Caused us to Take the Agency for the Fulton Compounds, the First Thing Known that Cure Chronic Kidney Diseases.

First, let it be distinctly understood that every one of the cases below had been diagnosed by one or more physicians as chronic and incurable; second, note the certainty of the results as shown by the recovery also of the friends they told who were similarly afflicted with suppurating incurable kidney diseases.

M. W. Spaulding, President Spaulding Saw Co., San Francisco, had a recovery in his own family and told several others who recovered.

Adolph Wacker, capitalist, San Francisco, recovered himself and told two friends who recovered.

Dr. Carl D. Ziehl, pioneer druggist, San Francisco, recovered himself and gave it to more than a dozen patients who recovered.

Charles Engelke, editor of the German paper, San Francisco, recovered himself and told it to a number who recovered, one of them being Charles F. Wacker, the 31st Street merchant.

R. M. Wood, editor Waco and Spirit Review, recovered himself and told it to several who recovered, among them being an old-school physician.

Edward Short of the San Francisco Call recovered, also three of his friends, viz: William Marple, Captain Richard of the Russian route and William Hawkins of the U. S. Quartermaster's Department of San Francisco.

John A. Phipps of the Hotel Republic, San Francisco, and two of his friends, etc., etc.

The kidneys are the organs that strain the poisons out of the system. We can stand the strain of a short time, but when the interference becomes chronic (permanent), as best explained by Bright, it is only a question of how long before death will come. It is then of vital importance to get the kidneys working again. Fulton's Compound is the only thing that will cure it. It has been used for years, and its success is proven by the recovery of the above named persons. Fulton's Compound is sold by all druggists. John J. Fulton Co., 421 Washington Street, San Francisco, give complete and free pamphlet. We are the sole agents for the Pacific.
