LIPTON IS STILL HOPEFUL

Forecast Promises the Weather to Suit the Shamrock

Wants to Win Next two Races and Then Beat the Third in a Blaze of Glory

New York, Aug. 26.—Lipton today refuses to confess defeat. He says if there is a decent breeze tomorrow to look out for the Shamrock at the weather mark. He is hopeful of winning the next two races, then will either face defeat, or win in a blaze of glory. The only thing that appeared to worry him was the handicap of 19 seconds which was chalked against the challenger yesterday. He says he is sorry such a mistake was made, as it looks stupid that either boat was in any wise strained in yesterday's race. The Reliance's new gaff was measured at noon today, and was exactly the same as the old one, so it didn't change any measurement of the boat. The weather bureau today says the wind over the international yacht course Thursday will be light to fresh, northeast, shifting in the afternoon to east and southeast, and probably cloudy weather. Lipton accepts this as forecasting the Shamrock's weather. When asked as to his future plans, he declined to say whether, in case of defeat, he would again challenge, but says after the races he will visit Chicago and Boston. He doesn't want to prolong his stay in America, but is willing while the Shamrocks are in commission to arrange a race with the Reliance, Constitution and Columbia.

Arrested for an Old Crime

Crawfordsville, Ind., Aug. 26.—James Lewis Meyers has been arrested here for a murder committed 27 years ago, and when taken to the jail said he looked forward to the first peaceful night's sleep since 1876, when he became a fugitive from justice.

The man arrested here is known in his Tennessee home as James Lewis, a successful and respected lumber dealer. He came back to Crawfordsville because he wanted to visit his old home and his relatives in Montgomery county.

He relied upon his changed appearance to disguise him from the few who might remember the killing that took place at Darlington, a mile or two from here, so long ago.

Meyers says the killing was done in self-defense, and now that he has money enough to engage competent lawyers, he is confident of clearing away the cloud that has so long darkened his life.

Only a Boy at Time of Killing.

In 1876 James Lewis Meyers, 18 years of age, was a timber buyer at Darlington. He got into an altercation with one of his employes, Branson Sloan. The latter was drunk at the time, and threatened to kill his employer because he had refused to furnish him money to attend a dance. Meyers, in the fight that followed, killed Sloan with a pocket knife.

There was no jail at Darlington at that time, so the murderer, who surrendered to arrest, was locked up in a school house and a guard placed over him. That night he escaped and was never heard from until today.

An old acquaintance recognized him as he was registering at the hotel as James Lewis, and an hour later he was arrested at the home of a relative in Hiding for Many Years.

After his escape, Meyers says he made his way afoot traveling under cover of darkness to Southern Illinois, where for several years he buried himself in the timber, shunning the company of civilization. He contracted his name James Lewis Meyers by dropping the surname, and as James Lewis has been known ever since.

For several years Meyers claims ill fortune pursued him. He shifted from one point to another throughout Southern Illinois, but with no change of luck, and he began to think it was retribution being visited upon him for his crime. He was ready to return to Indiana and give himself up, when he secured a contract which netted him several hundred dollars profit, and he decided to try his fortune in a new country. In the meantime his wife had joined him and they moved to Benton county, Tenn., which is yet their home.

Fortunes Change for Better.

Fortune seems to have smiled upon him there and Meyers is now in comfortable circumstances.

Now that he has been arrested he says a great load has been lifted from his conscience. Said he the day of his arrest: "I anticipate the best night's sleep tonight I have had in 27 long years. When I ran away I was a poor boy, young and inexperienced, and at that time I could only look on the dark side of things. I had no money to employ good legal talent, but now it is different."

The arrest was made on an indictment returned November 7, 1878, which still is in force. One of his attorneys was on the circuit bench when the original indictment was returned.

HIGH TONED ROBBERS

Haynie and Wife do the Hold-up Act in Seattle

The Lady was a Candidate for Carnival Queen in Portland, That was the Beginning

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 26.—H. W. Haynie has been arrested with his wife for several bold hold-ups. They lived in a fashionable boarding house, and would hire a carriage; the wife would hold the horses while the husband held up the pedestrians. When arrested, the man wore a silk hat, and the woman was fashionably clad. Mrs. Haynie was Grace Walton, of Portland, a daughter of Mrs. Dr. Talcott, the well-known specialist, and was a candidate for queen of the carnival at Portland. She was engaged to a prominent Portland attorney, but three months ago married Haynie. The pair are suspected of wholesale operations, as the man answers the description given by at least 10 victims.

The Tiresome Power's Case

Georgetown, Ky., Aug. 26.—Arguments in the Powers case commenced today.

Bill Devery's Big Picnic

Big Bill Devery of New York treated 40,000 women to ice cream, cake and milk last week; led a grand march with a woman he didn't know, and announced his platform as candidate for mayor in the next campaign. All this happened at a picnic at Sulzer's Harlem River park, at which the William S. Devery association was host and women and children from all over town were guests.

Men were charged a quarter a head to get into the grounds, the receipts to be used to buy next winter's coal for the poor—before the election. At least 8000 men were there, so there's $2000 as a starter for the Devery free coal fund. Estimates of the total attendance, day and evening, varied all the way from 20,000 to 75,000. There were 60,000 people there in the course of the day, anyhow, and when Big Bill sat on an upturned ice cream freezer along about midnight with a nursing bottle in his right hand and a hungry baby on his left arm which he was good-naturedly attending while the mother retired behind a tree to fix up, he figured that the memories of his picnic would add at least 20,000 to his total vote on election day.

Bill didn't go up to the park till the evening, after the afternoon crush of babies and the small boys had been filled to the muzzle with ice cream and cake. Before leaving the pump at Twenty-eighth street he read in the evening paper stories about the great naval inspection at Oyster Bay and they gave him an idea. He called up Eddie Schneider, his factotum, at Harlem River park and gave him this message:

"I want to walk into the joint between a double row of rooters that will make that warship game down at Oyster Bay look like a Prohibition rally in Second avenue. Just line the bugs on one side of the hall and the mothers and babies on the other, and I'll walk down between 'em; and have the band play 'Devery Every.'"

Schneider did his full duty and got enough "bug" away from hat and enough babies away from ice cream freezers to make a crush of admirers, and five bands played together the Devery anthem.

"There's two great events in this country today," said Bill after he reached the platform. "Here's one right here that shows the populace is supreme, and the other down at Oyster Bay, which ought to be called Washington."

He Arraigns England

London, Aug. 26.—Labouchere in Truth today severely arraigns England for her attitude in the Turkish imbroglio and says the powers ought to give Macedonia to Russia, provided the latter will put an end to the continual horrors. He says: "That tricky scoundrel, the Sultan, has long succeeded in converting the fairest districts in the world into a hell by playing one European power against another. We are now the only one on which he can still count in this devil's game."

Rain Quenches Forest Fires.
Baker City, Ore., Aug. 26.—A heavy rain began falling early yesterday and has continued all day. It is the first drop of rain since July 4.

Will Build Smelters

Salt Lake, Aug. 26.—The Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. paid spot cash for seven iron claims in Iron county, to the Taylor estate.
