Train Load of Hop Pickers

The morning overland train, due here at 5:40, was delayed somewhere in California yesterday, and did not reach Salem until 1:40 o'clock this afternoon. The afternoon train from San Francisco, due here at 4:34, will not come in until about 6:15, being reported an hour and 40 minutes late. The south-bound train, due here from Portland at 11 o'clock this forenoon, was 40 minutes late, owing to the crowds of hop pickers and their baggage, brought by "be train to the hop yards of the northern part of this county. A special train composed of six passenger coaches and three freight cars came up from Portland this morning, bringing 500 hop pickers to Brooks. The freight cars were loaded with the camping outfits of the party and the coaches were crowded to the very doors with the people eager to begin work in the hop yards of Marion county. The special train, after unloading its human freight at Brooks, came up to Salem, and left here at 3 o'clock this afternoon for Portland.

England Likes Oregon Hops

Jack Carmichael, the hop dealer, who spent the past few months at his home in England, where he informed himself as to the market for this year's crop, is enthusiastic regarding the outlook for Oregon hops, and is making arrangements for handling his share of the output of the Oregon yards this year. In speaking of market conditions this morning and the conditions of the English crop, Oregon's greatest competitor in the world's market, he stated that the English crop will be a fair one, aggregating about 450,000 cwt., or about 225,000 bales. He urges the Oregon growers to give their hops the best possible care, and use the best of refined sulphur. The English growers have heretofore used crude sulphur in curing their hops, but they are this year following in the footsteps of the Oregon growers and are using the best article as they are determined to produce an article equal to the hops shipped from this state. The Oregon hops coming of the London market are among the best received there and it will pay the Oregon farmers to keep up the standard. Another point emphasized by Mr. Carmichael is that the hops should be well mixed in baling so that they will run even and come up to the sample. He especially cautions growers against the use of sweepings and rubbish, so that there can be no rejections on account of inferiority. "The Oregon hops are the best in the market," said Mr. Carmichael, "and they should be kept up to that standard. When people pay a good price for hops, they want the best and it will pay well to put up a good article and hold the trade in the world's market that we now enjoy."

A dispatch from San Francisco Friday says that Californians are after better prices. It says:

Growers throughout the state have raised the cry of 25-cent hops. The greater part of the crop in Sonoma, Humboldt and Yuba counties has been harvested and a few early sales made. The highest figure recorded is 23 1/2 cents, which was obtained yesterday at Wheatland.

The great majority of the growers refuse to sell, and state that if the growers of Oregon will stand in with them and hold they will force the price up to 25 cents.

The demand from England is almost without precedent and buyers are thicker and more eager than ever before. This condition, when considered with the fact that the yield in both California and Oregon is short, encourages the producers. One grower said today:

"While our crop is short, its quality is excellent. The producers in this state and Oregon have the finest article for sale this year and can bring the buyers to our figures if we simply stand together and refuse to sell until 25 cents is offered."

Rock Salt Lumps x x Lumps

The only economical and profitable method to supply salt to stock is to have it easy of access at all times. This allows the animals to secure all they need at all times, hence there is no danger of scours which are so often caused by the animals getting too much salt at one time if salted in the old fashioned way—once a week with loose salt. Get a big lump of rock salt, place it in the pasture and the stock will go to it and get the amount their system calls for in the natural way. We have obtained a fine supply of this lump rock salt and can give you pieces as large or as small as you require.
