The Weather.

Tonight and Sunday, probably fair; warmer Sunday.

Mushmelons.

Mushmelons! They'll be good just ripe in just a little while—I reckon they're the best; although they're sort o' out of style.

Some people likes—or says they likes—th' watermelon finer.

An' 'low they's nothin' finer for to put behind th' vest. I know it's red as ar'y rose, an' mighty nigh as sweet—

But say! Old time mushmelons! W'y they simply can't be beat!

Then there's them little nutmeg things an' cantalopes an' gems—So tuffin' 'at it's hard to tell th' melons 'm th' stems. They's lots o' people says 'at these is what they's most p'fer—

But they ain't got mushmelons beat. I tell you now. No, sir!

Mushmelons—when they're good and ripe, they got a rich p'time. Jest like the coxins' tang 'at holds a sweet shrub bush in bloom; Th' inside is as yaller as the finest kind o' gold.

Mushmelons—when they're thataway, I want all I can hold.

W'y when I feel th' juice a tricklin' down my chin

An' have to shed my lips an' sort o' breathe th' goodness in— Baldheaded an' rheumatic as I be, I'm full o' joy An' o' onmost as happy as I was when jest a boy!

Mushmelons! Th' old-fashioned kind 'll be here after while—I reckon they're the best they is, if they be out o' style! —W. D. Nesbit.

A PROFITABLE MONOPOLY.

If it is a fact that the Wilcox warehouse and milling trust, of Portland, can afford to lease and close up the Magnolia mills, at Albany, there must be a big margin in wheat at "the market price."

The Magnolia mills was one of the most successful milling plants in the state. It did a large business and must have earned a great deal of money when in regular operation.

Now add what it costs to lease and maintain the plant in idleness to all it earned for the owners, and you have what it is worth at one point in Oregon to stifle uncontrolled competition.

What is the market price of wheat? It is claimed the world's market price for flour fixes the price for wheat in Oregon. Is this a fact? What a profit there must be in flour if mills can be leased and shut up.

The Journal is undertaking to collect market quotations on wheat at all points in Western Oregon for publication. A comparison of those figures with markets elsewhere ought to show some interesting facts.

The Journal invites farmers and millers and warehouse men to send us facts about the grain markets and the flour markets. The farmers have all to gain and nothing to lose by airing the facts.

Let the truth come out and let the facts be known. The elevator and warehouse clock cannot be made tighter than it has been under the regime of the Portland milling trust. It may become less profitable.

JOURNAL X-RAYS.

Here is a very cute proposal in the Woman's Home Companion, for September: "I love you, pretty maid," he said; "But should you say me nay, I would not die as others have, Whom you have turned away.

"I would not go and kill myself— A foolish thing to do— I'd give some other pretty maid The love I offered you."

She sat awhile, all wrapt in thought. What else was there to do? She heaved a sigh, and shyly said, "I guess I'd marry you."

The Harry Lehr hat is the latest candidate for feminine favor. Milliners claim the name is objectionable. Why not name it after the leading attribute of "Ary, and call it the "Leary hat?"

How have the mighty fallen! Making her debut with the record of ten bar rooms in a single night, Carrie Nation now waddles on the stage in "Ten Nights in a Barroom."

WILL SALEM PROFIT BY IT?

The lesson Salem has had this summer in the prevalence of fevers should warn this city that some general line of action is necessary to protect the sanitary condition in the future.

Let us suppose there had been five times as many cases as there were, what would have been the result? The city would have been advertised as an unclean, unsanitary municipality for all time to come.

The rest of the state would demand the immediate removal of the state capitol and state institutions, and Salem would be branded as a place unfit for human habitation.

As it is, Salem has had no more fever cases in proportion to the size of the town than some other cities, except that they are not state capitals and not so much is demanded of them in the way of sanitation.

It is also to be noted that the state institutions have been almost free from all such cases as have afflicted this city and suburbs. The asylum and state prison have been free from typhus since January.

They must have perfect sewage, better drinking water, and greater cleanliness about their premises. Their inmates lead more regular lives, dissipate less and do not go to summer resorts.

Will Salem profit by the lesson of the past year, or must the community receive still more drastic warning that a state capital cannot continue in a highly unsanitary condition with impunity?

Salem needs a scientific sewer system for the city and suburbs, no matter what it costs. Salem needs a public water supply, and all residents should have their houses provided with sewage and with water that flows.

The introduction of septic sewage and private disposition of sewage, with proper public regulations, will be a partial remedy. A public sewer system would still be needed. "Think of these things" calmly and intelligently.

CLEAN UP THE CITY. Before the fall rains set in it will not be out of place to suggest a general cleaning of the streets and alleys and private premises.

It would be in vain probably to ask the city government to clean the streets and alleys and public places, as they lack funds.

But if the residents of any block knew how easy it was to get the streets and alleys and grounds of that block made perfectly clean, they would all say let it be done.

One or two public-spirited citizens, in a block, without offending any of their neighbors, but using a little lime, fact and a garden rake, can bring this about.

A few hours' work of a morning will rake the stones and rubbish out of the street, remove debris, old papers, lumber, rubber shoes, old clothing, sawdust and other nuisances out of the street.

There are too many pieces of rotting plank, pieces of stove-wood, tin cans, old stovepipes, baling wire and barrel hoops ornamenting our residence streets, to have us pose as a cleanly Capital City.

A few hours will remove all this. What shall we say about the piles of weeds, lawn-trimmings, brush and other refuse from private property that are deliberately dumped on the street or alley?

Only an officer can take the proper action in such cases. The owner of the abutting premises should be educated by a public official, if he himself has been educated to have proper regard for a clean city.

By cleaning up the streets the citizen becomes a better citizen. A clean street and a clean city is a moral purifier, to say nothing about adding to the value of real estate, and making Salem a charming residence city.

Will Make Them Soggy.

The San Jose scale, one of the worst pests in an orchard, has made its appearance on some of the trees in this vicinity. Vigorous and drastic measures for its suppression have been commenced. Prof. Cordley, entomologist at the college, has received from the agricultural department at Washington, some specimens of Chinese beetles, the natural enemy of the San Jose scale. Efforts will be made at once to propagate these beetles, and spread them broadcast over the state, wherever any indication of scale can be found.—Corvallis Gazette.

More Paper Railroads.

The latest, and, apparently most reliable railroad news for Oregon, is to the effect that Harriman has decided to extend the D. R. & N. through Southern Oregon, thereby opening up the rich isolated section of the state to outside communication, and preparing the way for development of a rich and prosperous section of the state. It is time something was done for that section.—Eugene Register.

THE BROOK.

I come from haunts of coot and hern, I make a sudden sally, And sparkle out among the ferns, To bicker down the valley.

By thirty hills I hurry down, Or slip between the ridges, By twenty throps, a little town, And half a hundred bridges; Till last by Philip's farm I flow To join the brimming river:

For men may come and men may go, But I go on forever.

I chatter over stony ways, In little sharps and trebles, I bubble into eddying bays, I babble on the pebbles.

With many a curve my banks I fret, With many a ford and fallow, And many a fairly foreland set With willow-weed and mallow.

I chatter chatter, as I flow To join the brimming river, For men may come and men may go, But I go on forever.

I wind about, and in and out, With here a blossom sailing, And here and there a lusty trout, And here and there a grayling, And here and there a foamy fave Upon me as I travel.

With many a silvery waterbreak Above the golden gravel, I draw them all along, and flow To join the brimming river, For men may come and men may go, But I go on forever.

—Alfred Tennyson.

A Ministers Mistake. A city minister was recently handed a notice to be read from his pulpit. Accompanying it was a clipping from a newspaper bearing upon the matter. The clergyman started to read the extract and found that it began: "Take Kemp's Balsam, the best Cough Cure." This was hardly what he had expected, and, after a moment's hesitation, he turned it over and found on the other side the matter intended for reading.
