EVIDENCE OF SALEM PROSPERITY

Fine Stores Line Our Streets From One End to the Other

It is very evident that prosperity has struck Salem and is still striking, judging from the large and attractive stores that line our streets from one end of town to the other.

The merchants are all carrying larger and better stocks than they did five years ago. Our reporter called into Buren & Hamilton's today to look through the store, and was shown what they have done during the last year in the way of making more space for showing goods. They have added a large balcony in the second story, enlarged their carpet department, put in a passenger elevator, and improved the store generally.

The increase in their business has been such as to require them to build a large two-story warehouse, which they have just completed. This is already full to overflowing, to meet the demands of their fall trade. They buy their goods direct from the East, in full car loads, which makes a great saving in price. Judging from the quality of new goods they are receiving, we agree with Buren & Hamilton that there is nothing too good for the Salem people.

Company M. Comes Home

Company M Third Regiment, returned from Gearhart Park last evening. Their train arrived in Portland at 7 o'clock last night and they were brought up on a special train immediately following the overland, reaching Salem about 11 o'clock last night, weary, but happy. This morning the non-commissioned officers were busily engaged in transferring the company property from the station to the armory, when the supplies were checked up and stored away. The men are highly pleased with their experience in camp, and the entire company is greatly benefited by the 19 days' drill under the strictest military discipline. Among the men there is a feeling that M company can and will be made the best organization in the National Guard, in point of discipline and drill, and all are ready to work toward that end.

A Good Play Well Played

"Buried at Sea" drew a remarkably good house at the Grand Opera House last night, when the weather and other conditions were taken into consideration. The play is a strong one, and, despite the fact that one of the parts had to be cut on account of the sickness of an actress, it was well presented. It is full of action from start to finish, and the situations were such that even a Salem audience was worked up to the point of hearty and continued applause, and the heavy villain scored a point by getting an encore of hisses. Taken all in all, "Buried at Sea," as presented by Orral Humphrey and the company is one of the most catchy and entertaining plays ever presented in Oregon.

Wind Was High.
A high wind Friday night gave the prunes a shaking down, and today the ground was covered in the orchards with fruit. All the pickers were busy, and will be all day Sunday.

A Bright Woman.
Among the "nigger baby stand" people who follow the fairs is a very bright woman with two children, who has set up a stand on the Murphy block corner. She erected her own outfit, and seems perfectly able to handle the crowds. Her children are a nicely-dressed little boy and a golden-haired little girl.
