Harry Keen, of the Maxwell mine, who was ruptured some time ago, came to the city ten days since and was operated upon by Drs. May and Curry at the corner of Fifth and Madison streets. Keene's condition was very serious and mortification of the bowels had already set in. The patient was cut open and his entrails removed, three feet of the decayed part being cut out, the ends of the intestines being spliced together and returned in place. Sunday was the twelfth day after the operation and the patient was able to sit up in bed, circulation having been restored through the affected parts.—Baker City Democrat.

QUEER ARKANSAS PEOPLE

Vegetarian Colony That Expects to Live Forever

Say They Will be Found on the Ozark Hills When Gabriel Blows His Horn

Judge Edward Wallace Conable, known as the founder of the original vegetarian colony in Roswell, Colo., a number of years ago, has just bought 8000 acres of rough land near Rogers, Arkansas and founded an original colony of non-meat eaters. Outside of this feature there are others which commend the colony to those seeking things curious. Any man who eats anything but breakfast food in original packages for his morning meal is banished from the colony, and one who swears or chews tobacco must forfeit his citizenship, and behold the man who looks upon a woman and loves her at sight is doomed to everlasting disgrace.

Judge Conable has laid down some strict rules to follow if one wishes to enter this earthly paradise, as he is pleased to term it. He says he will make his Pathfinders park the real Garden of Eden. That the idea is a popular one is evidenced by the unusual activity in the sale of his blocks of stock to followers of the principles set forth in his by-laws. There are over 2000 persons in the United States, says the judge, who believe in this same doctrine, and he thinks he is going to get his share of them.

"I traveled the United States over," he told the writer, "in search of a colony where I thought the climate and the soil was all to make one happy. And then I came to North Arkansas. Here the North and the South seem to meet, so far as the climate is concerned. This tract of land in the woods is all that could be wished for an earthly paradise, and with the right kind of people we can have the most entertaining colony in the United States.

When the correspondent reached Rogers all the talk on the street of that little village was about the vegetarian colony on the Frisco system not far from town. The writer, accompanied by several citizens of Rogers, drove to the place. The 8000 acres are covered with a growth of tall pines and oak trees, while on the mountain sides, according to the natives, is the best kind of soil upon which grow apples, peaches and small fruit. Only a few inches beneath the soil lies the rich, black earth and the rock which serve to hold the moisture during the dry weather.
To quote from the judge's own mouthpiece, the Pathfinder, let the doctrine of this sect be told: "I propose to teach the people how to live to attain the highest state of physical and mental culture. This embraces all the extended periods of fasting for the purification of the body and soul and the elimination of disease."

The most extraordinary feature of the colony is that not even a snake may be killed upon the premises. If one is sick they fast. The services of no physicians are needed or accepted. Often when the judge himself feels disease and sickness approaching he leaves off eating even a simple fare and starves out the approaching illness.

No meats of any kind are eaten by the followers of Conable. No breakfast is eaten except raw produce, such as whole wheat, sliced tomatoes, etc. As a rule, the members of the colony do not eat any morning meal at all. Conable himself says that he never eats a meal of cooked food.

Their religion is likewise extraordinary. Conable says:

"The Pathfinder (name of sect) does not believe in the existence of a personal God. It believes that God is the universal life force that permeates every living thing. It believes that it is possible for man to so perfect himself physically as to come in absolute harmony with the soul and live eternally in flesh.

This latter statement that one can live forever if proper treatment is taken of oneself is sincerely believed by many members of the colony and those who are taking up their homes on the crest of the Ozarks think that they will be here when Gabriel blows his horn. At least they profess to have such belief.

No animal, fowl or fish will be permitted on the premises of this unique colony for either selling, killing or food purposes. Of course, says the by-laws, this has no reference to the keeping of animals for work purposes or pets. The intent is to bring people into the uncooked diet as quickly as possible. Fruits, nuts, cereals and vegetables that are palatable will be the only products of the colony. A few cattle have been bought by the judge, the milk and butter to be used in the beginning by those tenderfoot who cannot live without some grease. But within the next few months, or by the time fruit and garden truck is ready for consumption next spring, it is expected that all animal life will have vanished from this 8000 acre tract, even to horses for driving purposes and use in the fields. The work of plowing—what there is to do—will be done by steam, and the residents will walk to town and carry their market steam engine will be hitched to a baskets with them. When a big load of produce is to be hauled away a wagon. This modern colony with such advanced ideas is certainly attracting considerable attention and many are going there to take up their abode.

Arrest Sam Morris.

Sam Morris, the famous Indian pitcher of the Portland Browns, looked upon the firewater several times last evening, and as a consequence he was arrested at 2 o'clock this morning near the Union depot. Very much the worse for wear he was landed in the police station. Several persons on Sixth street heard two pistol shots a few minutes before Morris was landed in jail. They saw the patrol wagon stop as the shots were fired, and also saw the man who had attempted to escape hauled inside again. The officers who made the arrest admit there was trouble with Morris, but as tied-mouth orders prevail around the station just now, they dare not say they shot at the escaping prisoner.—Oregonian.
