HOLY ROLLERS NOISY

Corvallis Has New Sect, That is Decidedly Unique

They Burn Clothing, Carpets, Musical Instruments, and Pretty Much of Anything Else

A dispatch from Corvallis Friday says: This town has been agog for 24 hours with the doings of members of a religious sect who call themselves "God's Anointed," but whom sinners call "The Holy Rollers." In the fanaticism of their devotions, the enthusiasts have burned furniture, carpets, clothing and many other articles, and have destroyed or buried cooking utensils, musical instruments of all kinds, without regard to value or cost, have been delivered to the flames.

The scene of their devotions is the house of Mr. and Mrs. O. V. Hurt, in the south end of town. There, yesterday, the sidewalk about the premises were torn up and burned, the flowers, shrubbery and fruit trees were dug up and destroyed. During the day reports in circulation that dogs and cats had been burned on a sacrificial altar.

Members of the sect deny the case of the cats, but admit the dog was burned. They say, however, that it was a dog that was not wanted about the house, and it would not go away, and that it was first killed in a humane manner, and then burned. Neighbors insist that both dogs and cats to a considerable number were consigned to the flames, as a manifestation of the creed of the sect.

A feature that has added materially to the public interest in prevailing conditions is that O. V. Hurt, ex-chairman of the Republican county central committee, and at present state committeeman, has joined the sect. Members of his family, formerly members of the Salvation Army, have for several months been devoted worshippers in the new sect.

Wednesday morning, Mr. Hurt, who has been employed for a long time in a leading mercantile establishment, sent his keys to the store with the announcement that he was hereafter to devote himself to the work of God. Mr. Hurt took part in the destruction of furniture and other household effects, and in digging up and destroying the walks and shrubbery about his house.

All day yesterday about 20 of the sect were in the house. The destruction of the furniture is done, the members say, because God wills it. They claim to have direct communication with the Almighty at all times, and they say He directs them what to destroy, and what to preserve.

It is such things as they receive from carnal hands that are given to the flames. Guitars, mandolins and other musical instruments were among the articles burned yesterday.

Buying Prunes for Export.

M. Martineau, of Bordeaux, France, representing a large fruit importing house, is in the city, for the purpose of purchasing Oregon prunes for the French market. He states that the prune crop of France this year is very short, and large quantities will have to be imported from the United States to supply the demand. He came here last year, and purchased a number of carloads, and so well was their trade pleased with the Oregon fruit that his house has sent him here a second time.

M. Martineau stated that he had been unable to secure all the prunes he wanted at Salem, having purchased but a few carloads, but that he had bought some heavy shipments in Southern Oregon, and some of these are now on the way to France.

There Are Twice as Many Hancock Disc Plows Sold

As are put out by the other twenty makers combined. The Benicia Hancock has twice as many plows in the field in Marion and Polk counties as all other makes combined and we are selling more right along.

Why buy an experiment—yes or even try an experiment—when you only have to go a mile or less in any direction to find one of our plows in the field in use.

They turn the soil over. Does the other one? They cut even furrows. Does the other one? There is no side draft. Watch the other ones. They have jointers. The others haven't. They have gear wheel controller. The others haven't. They have front land gauge. The others haven't. In fact there isn't much that the others have that makes for efficiency in plowing.

Send for list of users in your section, then go and see them in the field.
