THE WOLVES OF THE WIND.

(East Oregonian.)

Have you heard, little children, the hungry wolves cry,
As the wind from the Northland goes scurrying by?

Have you listened, at night, to the wail of the pack,
As it followed in anger, the Autumn winds track?

It shrieks at your window, and sniffs at your door,
And snarls where its fellows have snarled before,

O'er the roof and the walls, in the darkness they fly—
And you cuddle close down, when you hear the far cry,—

They lick up the dust from the fields as they race;
They frighten the leaves from their high hanging place,—

They howl in the forests, so lonely and deep,
That you waken and wonder, at night, in your sleep.

It's the wolves of the Wind, that you hear, little child;
It's a fierce, savage pack, ever hungry and wild.

It starts o'er the world, when the Autumn comes down,
And the forests and meadows are lonely and brown.

Their voice is the moan of the hurrying gale—
Their footsteps are heard in the wind's eerie wail;

And the snarl that you hear at your door, in the night,
Is the Wolves of the Wind, in their savage delight.

They come and they go, while the darkness is deep,
To snarl 'round the pillows of children asleep.

But the Wolves of the Wind, are as harmless as feet—
No fangs have their mouths, and no claws have their feet.

So laugh, little boy, when you hear them at night,—

Not tried Ayer's Sarsaparilla? Then you haven't tried Sarsaparilla!

Not tried Ayer's Sarsaparilla? Then you haven't tried Sarsaparilla!

some will believe it. They will believe it just because there are human buzzards who delight in feasting on that kind of material; because, in political contests mud is sometimes as dangerous as stones; because there has grown up in this country an unfortunate belief that all our officials are dishonest, and any statement against them finds many who believe it.

In so far as this result can be accomplished Moody's personal enemies have been successful; but they have left no blot on his integrity, no stain on his honor. On the other hand, the underhanded attack on Moody has had an effect the little gang of conspirators failed to consider. It has created a feeling of indignation among fair-minded people, who compose the great majority. The average American likes to see fair play, and the man who strikes the foul blow invariably loses. Moody comes out of the ordeal with clean hands and reputation, while those who conspired to his undoing have succeeded only in bringing or themselves the supreme contempt of decent, cleanly people.

THE LAW'S DELAY.

The outrageous injustice which often accompanies the law's delays is notably illustrated, in a New York case for the recovery of damages for physical injuries received by a brakeman who was struck in the back of the head while passing under a bridge on the roof of a box car, where he was engaged at the time in the performance of his duties. The accident occurred twenty-one years ago last July. Six months afterwards he brought suit against the railroad company, and in February, 1884 a jury brought in a verdict of $4000. Since then the case has been retried seven times through appellate division reversals of the verdicts of juries, which have variously assessed the damages at $4500 and $4900. On the seventh appeal the appellate division finally affirmed the jury's award of $4500, but it is said by Case and Comment that the railroad company may still go legally before the court of appeals, and that a possible reversal and eighth trial may follow. When litigation gets into that shape it resolves itself into a legal farce. There is certainly no element of justice in it.

THE LIFE SPIRITUAL.

Men become like that which they love. Almost insensibly, but with absolute certainty, the process goes on until by degeneration the man is brought down to low and mean depths or else by transformation he has been raised from glory unto glory. As illustrating the one, there are those of whom the Scriptures say, "But they came to Babel-pear and consecrated themselves unto the shameful thing and became abominable like that which they loved." As illustrating the other class there are those of whom the Scriptures say that they "with unveiled face reflecting as a mirror the glory of the Lord are transformed into the same image from glory to glory even as from the Lord the Spirit."—Pacific Baptist.

Today men care nothing for the theological aspect of morals; they are concerned about the moral aspect of theology. The present demand upon religion is not what rewards will she bestow on us in some distant future state, but what means of present growth and happiness does she offer man. Man's soul is described through the medium of his ordinary habits and conduct; and whatever salvation it is to win must be through the avenues of sense and natural desire, purged of selfish animalism and bent to spirit uses. The whole man must be uplifted and purified. "If religion cannot cure your temper, it cannot save your soul."—Clara Parker in the Christian Register.

We should not wonder if the friendly visits of the Ancient and Honorable Companies of England and America should do more to promote peace on earth than all the enormous sums our administration is proposing to spend on the new war vessels.

We would propose that the cost of one battleship be voted by congress to invite and entertain two hundred prominent citizens of every civilized nation in the world.—Geo. T. Angell, in Our Dumb Animals.

It should never be forgotten that the Christian spirit may exist where the knowledge of Christian truth is quite defective. Hence a man's creed is not an infallible indication of his Christian character.—The Watchman.

A Ministers Mistake.

A city minister was recently handed a notice to be read from his pulpit. Accompanying it was a clipping from a newspaper bearing upon the matter. The clergyman started to read the extract and found that it began: "Take Kemp's Balsam, the best Cough Cure." This was hardly what he had expected, and, after a moment's hesitation, he turned it over and found on the other side the matter intended for reading.

JOURNAL X-RAYS

We note with pleasure that our esteemed contemporary, The Congressional Record, has again resumed publication.

Mayor Bishop's resignation leaves a fine opening for some patriotic citizen who will work for nothing.

The poem in this issue, written by Bert Huffman, of the East Oregonian, is a very pretty conceit, prettily told. He has true poetic expression, and it is a pity his modesty prevents more of his poetical work finding its way into print.

The annual agitation of "the terrible vice of gambling" has begun. The crusade will last until after this city election.

If anybody wants to throw mud in the coming city campaign, there will probably be enough to 'round, judging from the appearance of the streets.

"The jingling of the guinea cures the hurt that honor feels."

The Silvertown Appeal has reached the dignity of a libel suit.

W. H. Holmes, T. L. Davidson, Dan Fry and Geo. S. Downing are mentioned as possible Democratic candidates for mayor. With such possibilities in the field the Republican managers will have to look to their best timber, if they propose to get back into power.

When there is no other issue the sore-head politician fills his organ about "gambling."

During the opening play at the Eugene's new opera house, the building caught fire. The play was "The Christian," and it must have developed more warmth than it showed here, if it fired anything but the audience.

Murderer to be Shot.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Nov. 19.—The state law of shooting instead of hanging a person convicted of murder will again be applied in Utah tomorrow. Peter Mortensen, the convicted murderer of James R. Hay, will pay the penalty of his crime between the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 p. m. He will be shot to death by the county sheriff in the jail yard at the penitentiary. Much interest is manifested in the execution and the sheriff's office is besieged with applications for admission tickets.

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climatic conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient, and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion; and a regular course of German Syrup. Free expectoration in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweat. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer clime you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottle, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists. At Dr. Stone's drug stores.
