AN ALASKA STORY.

All May Be True Except the "Pretty Indian Girl."

A Tacoma dispatch says: That the Indians of Alaska have an ear for catchy music is shown by the fact that a caravan of Mackenzie river Indians journeyed nearly 1000 miles to Dawson to learn the words and tune accurately that they might sing it during their Christmas festivities. Last summer a prospector came upon the Indian village and during his stay sang small snatches of "In the Good Old Summer Time."

the song that the miner could remember, and soon parts of the song were whistled throughout the camp. The Indian lass whom the song first attracted desired to learn the entire words and tune, and suggested that a large party of the Indian tribe should journey to Dawson and there learn this and other late songs.

The suggestion instantly came into favor, with the result that a caravan was led by W. N. Craigie. The expedition arrived at Dawson three weeks ago, after having discovered a new pass through the Rockies which shortens the distance between the Mackenzie river and Dawson 300 miles. While crossing the Rockies the party came upon a herd of caribou, of which they killed fifty. These were taken to Dawson and auctioned off at from 20 cents to 35 cents a pound, which relieved Dawson's fresh meat shortage.

A Personable Poet.

Joe Lincoln the poet of Cape Cod, though lacking considerably of being eligible to the Fat Man's club, could not, on the other hand, pass himself off as brother to the living skeleton. A lady who met him for the first time the other day said:

"Mr. Lincoln, I have always greatly admired your poetry, but you are not, I confess, just my idea of a poet. I thought all poets were thin and wore their hair long."

"Madam," returned Mr. Lincoln in a burst of confidence, "if I depended wholly on poetry I should fit your ideal precisely. But I write a story occasionally and so manage to get enough to eat and to have my hair cut when it needs it."—Philadelphia Post.

Maudy Objects to Husbands Osculatory Habits When Celebrating Christmas With His Troupe

Some sensational sidelights on stage life were shown in Judge Murasky's court yesterday when Maude Amber, leading woman at Fischer's Theater, began her suit for divorce from Ira Puerl Wilkerson, on the ground of infidelity, and a few other matrimonial wrongs. Says the San Francisco Chronicle:

The couple were married in Kansas City December 27, 1890, both being members of the theatrical profession. They came to San Francisco in April, 1902. Up to September of last year Miss Amber retained her furnished flat at 226 East Thirty-first street, New York city. Then she had her mother, who has since lived in Bakersfield, give up the New York flat and stored the furniture. Shortly before that Wilkerson went out from San Francisco as manager of the "Fiddle Dee Dee" road company for a tour of the Northwest. In the company were Miss Oveta Leathe, Miss Myrtle Rosedale and Miss Annie Gorman.

Miss Oveta Leathe, who has within the past fortnight become Mrs. Hawes, was on the stand practically all day. Her testimony bore upon the relations of Wilkerson and Miss Rosedale. As she described them, they were anything but proper.

Miss Amber evidently expected something was wrong, for, under date of November 20th, she wrote:

Miss Leathe: I want to ask you something, and I want you to tell me the truth. Did you see my husband kiss Birdie Starrett? You can rest assured if you did and say so your position will not be jeopardized in any way. Mr. De Forrest says you said it one time when she fainted, and that you, with some of the other girls, said it was perfectly disgusting. Wire me your reply at my expense. Yours very truly,

MAUD AMBER.

In response Miss Leathe had written a very flattering letter giving Wilkerson the character of a "perfect gentleman," who at all times had been both discreet and courteous and accustomed to playing no favorites. But she announced that this had been written at Myrtle Rosedale's dictation.

But, after the return to San Francisco, the three girl friends had a serious falling out while performing chorus parts at the Grand Opera House. And then it was that Miss Amber gained Miss Leathe as a principal witness against Wilkerson. There were notes and meetings, and finally a visit to the offices of Miss Amber's lawyers, where a detailed typewritten statement was made and sworn to. That statement recounted all the scandal of the "Fiddle Dee Dee" road company's trip in so far as it concerned Wilkerson and Miss Myrtle Rosedale, whose off-stage name is not given.

Had a Little Christmas Tree.

At Tacoma, where the three girls had a little Christmas tree in their bedroom, Wilkerson presented Miss Leathe with "several pairs of stockings," and the other girls with equivalent remembrances, while they had united and bought him a silver match-case. As they sat before the fire late that night, Wilkerson had caressed and kissed Miss Rosedale and called her his "little Indian squaw."

In addition to the alleged intimacy of Wilkerson and Miss Rosedale in Spokane, Seattle, Tacoma and other places in the northwest, the witness recited things she had observed at the Ash worth, on O'Farrell street, and at the Adams, on Eddy street, in this city.

There were indications in the line of questions by the offense that Wilkerson will attempt to consult Maud Amber on the plea that she really has no legal residence in California. Efforts were also made to establish the belief that Maud Amber had used her influence to get Oveta Leathe her present place in the chorus at Fischer's; that she had given the wedding present, and that there was $1,000 in it for her if Maude Amber won her case. But the little chorus girl denied all but the fact of a birthday present.

Wilkerson sat beside his lawyer and occasionally took side glances back at Maud Amber in a way that did not seem particularly agreeable to her. Miss Amber wore a blue tailor-made suit, a blue hat trimmed with red and a brown sealskin stole. She was flanked by several friends in very noticeable feathered millinery, that brightened one whole side of the courtroom.

The chorus girl bride, who was the principal witness for the prosecution, and the central figure of the day, wore a light gray suit and a big red hat, red gloves, and carried a red hand bag. She also had an immense pale pompadour. Her youthful little husband came in late and sat listening dejectedly. He entered softly, in very high-heeled patent leather, and sat whittling a pencil.

At 10 o'clock this morning the case will be resumed.

INCURABLE.

That is What the Books Say of Chronic Kidney Disease, But the New Fulton Compounds Have a Record of 87% of Recoveries Among Chronic Cases Incurable by All Other Medicines.

Druggists know that kidney disease that has hung on eight or ten months has become chronic and that it is then regarded by physicians as incurable and that up to the advent of the Fulton Compounds that nothing on their shelves would touch it. It is a proven fact that nearly nine-tenths of all cases are now curable, and druggists themselves are taking the new Compounds. One of the recoveries was Dr. Zelle himself, the pioneer druggist of 222 Pacific street, San Francisco, and he gave it to over a dozen others who recovered. Here is another interesting recovery. We copy from the Sacramento News of November 16, 1902:

"After a serious illness of over a year Judge H. Allen of this city has recovered and he writes himself most fortunate in successfully battling with what is generally regarded as fatal Malady, Bright's Disease of the kidneys in speaking of his case Judge Allen said: 'I believe that the treatment given me by my physician was in accordance with the best methods used in the regular practice of medicine, but it afforded me no relief. Hearing of the Fulton Compounds I went to San Francisco to investigate and was soon convinced I should undergo treatment. It was three months before I noticed a change for the better. I used the medicine faithfully for nearly a year and can now and no evidence of the disease and am convinced it is entirely eliminated. My appetite is good, I have gained seventeen pounds in weight and will be pleased to describe my experience to anyone who may call or write.'"

The editor of the News himself was the friend who told Judge Allen of the Fulton Compounds. They are the only things known that cure kidney diseases after as well as before they become chronic, which happens about the tenth month.
