

The College Boys.

The Stanford University Glee and Mandolin clubs will be seen at the Grand opera house next Friday (Christmas) night. Of their entertainment the Santa Barbara Morning Press writes: "A large and sympathetic audience was well entertained at the opera house last evening by the Stanford

Glee and Mandolin club. It was an evening of good rollicking college music, interspersed with pleasing specialties, which received unstinted applause. The voices of the Glee club were well balanced, and their singing of college songs was replete with the spirit and dash that makes the college glee club popular throughout the land. The mandolin and guitar players were very good. The Stanford song, "One, Two, Three, Four," by the combined clubs, was one of the most pleasing numbers on the program. Messrs. Bush and Baker won the hearts of the audience by their clever comic specialty, which combined music, singing and dancing. Seats will be on sale at box office Friday at 9 a. m.

A FACT PROVEN.

Should Convince Even the Most Skeptical of Its Truth.

If there is the slightest doubt in the minds of any that Dandruff germs do not exist, their belief is compelled by the fact that a rabbit inoculated with the germs became bald in six weeks' time.

It must be apparent to any person therefore that the only prevention of baldness is the destruction of the germ—which act is successfully accomplished in one hundred per cent. of cases by the application of Newbro's Herpicide.

Dandruff is caused by the same germ which causes baldness and can be prevented with the same remedy—Newbro's Herpicide.

Mr. Curtis dropped deficiencies and surpluses, and worked on the problem for hours. He finally gave as his verdict that Ann might be either 13 or 14.

"That suits me," declared Mr. Curtis. "I can give a decision. Both sides are right."—Corvallis Times.

Merry Xmas And A Happy New Year.

When I came to Salem, about four months ago, I advertised to close out certain lines of goods. This I have about accomplished, as there are few articles in those lines left. Our many patrons know where to trade when they need goods in our line, and have taken advantage of the great bargain sale, which we have been holding for the past four months. Only last week we advertised a special sale on Mackintoshes. The next day we closed out 27. Other goods have gone at the same rate.

When I came to Salem I intended to return to Portland when I had closed out certain lines, but the longer I remain in my old home town the more I wish to locate here. Many of my friends are here, whom I have known almost from boyhood. I like the city and its surroundings. I have been treated well, and my patrons urge that I should remain with them. I am at present undecided whether to return to Portland or locate here. If the latter is my decision, I shall open out a nice, clean, up-to-date men's clothing and genteel furnishing goods store, which I am sure will meet with the approval of the most critical, and more than please my many friends. HOW OLD IS ANNE?

Trouble the New Puzzle Makes—Cain It Raised in a School Board.

The age of Ann is a vexed question in many a Corvallis household now. A well known housewife was sitting up the dough for biscuits when a neighbor woman came in and asked her how old Ann was. Straightway the two began to figure. They argued and figured oblivious of the lapse of time until the husband and children arrived for dinner to find the two women in a hopeless discussion of Ann's real age, with the fire out in the kitchen stove, the dough still un-kneaded, and the old Nick to pay generally. There is the story of another woman who read the puzzle, seized a pencil and paper and laboried with the figures until her husband finally rescued her from the exasperating calculations just in time to save her from hysterics. But these instances are mild compared to the trouble that the question of Ann's age made in a Kansas town. As sent out in a Washington dispatch the tale runs thus:

"Hiawatha, Kan., where the song comes from, is disturbed over 'How old is Ann?' When the query reached there every man, woman and child in the place, lead pencil in hand began to figure on the problem.

One bright school girl asked the principal of the public school, 'How old is Ann?' The principal figured and then announced that Anne is 18. The child went home and told her father, a banker, who is chairman of the school board, that Ann is 18.

"Not for mine," answered the proud father, who had figured it out 14. He filed charges against the teacher alleging that anybody who figures out 18 is unfit to teach school.

The school board wrestled with the problem but was unable to determine certainly whether Ann is 18 or 14, but as the man who made the complaint has considerable influence the board was disposed to call it 14 and dismiss the principal. The latter wrote Representative Curtis requesting him to use his influence with the school board to hold him his job.

"But no matter what the decision," he adds, "I am convinced that Ann is 18." Mr. Curtis is friendly to the principal, who has considerable influence in politics.

"How old is Ann?" Mr. Curtis asked his friends. They figured and they advised Mr. Curtis to see Mr. Courts, clerk to the committee on appropriations, who is authority on fig-
