LIST STILL GROWS

Josephine Spencer Number of Known Dead Now 591

George Dusenberry Accused of Locking the Children in and Causing Half the Deaths

Chicago, Jan. 5.—Josephine Spencer, 17 years old, died of injuries received in the Iroquois fire, last night, making the number of victims 591. She was removed to her home after the fire, where she died. The police did not know she was in the list of injured until this morning. George Dusenberry, head usher, charged with being responsible for locking the doors of the children's gallery when the fire started, was arrested last night. He confronts one of the gravest accusations of any one connected with the theater. His action is said to have cost half the lives lost. If the coroner's jury returns a verdict before the grand jury adjourns, the evidence will be immediately presented to the latter. The coroner today issued a hundred summons for witnesses.

Dusenberry is held to await the action of the grand jury under $5000 bonds, which were promptly given by the theater owners.

No Danger of a Crowd.

San Francisco, Jan. 5.—The police today notified the Grand Opera House Management that no one would be permitted to stand at the Patti concerts, and no chairs would be allowed in the aisles. Those attending must show seat check to the police before entering. It is determined to prevent a possible repetition of the Chicago panic.

Recalled Extradition.

Columbus, O., Jan. 5.—The governor today, on the ground that he believed W. M. Mahn innocent of the charges made against him, revoked the extradition warrant on which Mahn was to have been taken to New York to stand trial on a charge of stealing $39,000 from the Manhattan Insurance Company, of which he was an officer.

Tanner Gets an Office.

Washington, Jan. 5.—The appointment of James Tanner, otherwise known as Corporal Tanner, as registrar of wills for the District of Columbia, is announced at the White House. He succeeds Dent, who enters the consular service.

The Dietrich Trial.

SUMPTER SMELTER BLOWS IN

First of Its Kind, Marks New Era for Oregon Mining

Will Demonstrate the High Grade Character of Eastern Oregon's Base Ores

The Sumpter smelter was blown in on Thursday last, and the Reporter says of it:

"Backed up against the snow-capped hills surrounding the canyon through which Powder river takes its way yesterday were noticed great volumes of smoke tinged with a golden hue.

"Look at the smelter smoke," said those who had not been advised of the event, with exclamatory accents which sounded good to all ears.

"Blown in at last," said others. "I hope it means as much in the future for Sumpter as the construction work did."

General Manager Mueller, who is out at Quartzburg, had requested that nothing be said with reference to the firing of the furnace, in order that an unmanageable crowd would not appear and interfere with the workmen.

For several weeks Superintendent Carr B. Neel has been busy with his force of men getting ready for the event which yesterday marked an epoch in the mineral life of Oregon. That he did his work well was manifested by the smoothness with which every detail was worked out and by the absence of all friction at every point. There were no more delays than are to be found in old established institutions of the kind almost every day.

The coke had been placed and fired early. The shift went on at about 7 o'clock and worked as though a world of experience stood behind their labors. Soon the molten stuff was seen sizzling all along the battery of furnaces.

Those who had accepted personal invitations were anxious to acquire souvenirs of the first matte made, and when it had been made cool Mr. Neel had quite a quantity broken up and by the early part of the afternoon a large number of pieces had found their way up town and into cabinet collections.

The matte is as pretty as any to be seen anywhere, indicating that plant, operations, material and men are of the best quality and character.

It's the first smelter for precious metals in Oregon. It cost in the neighborhood of $175,000. It is managed and owned by men who have confidence in the ore values of this mineral belt. —Baker City Democrat.

Washington, Jan. 5.—At the conclusion of Rev. Hale's prayer on the opening of the senate at noon today, he requested the senators to join him in repeating the Lord's prayer, but no voice responded from the floor. A resolution was adopted directing the commissioners of the District of Columbia to inspect all places of public amusement in the city, to avoid a repetition of the Chicago disaster. Morgan's resolution declaring that a state of war exists between Panama and Colombia, and that the president exceeded his powers in recognizing the revolutionary government, was taken up in the house today. It unanimously adopted resolutions of sympathy with the families of the victims of the Chicago disaster.

FEATHERS ON TOP OF TAR

Corvallis Citizens Do Business With the Holy Rollers

Yet They Were Accused of Nothing More Serious Than Worshipping Their Own Way

Corvallis, Jan. 5.—Greffield and Brooks, leaders of the Holy Rollers, were tarred and feathered last night by a citizens' posse. They had been warned to leave the city, after burning up nearly all the household effects of G. V. Hurt, a recent convert. They did not leave, but secreted themselves, holding secret meetings, where they rolled about the floor praying. Last night they grew bold, and held a meeting in a convert's house, and their rantings were heard for blocks. A posse of citizens formed, raided the house, took the leaders out and stripped them, and then covered them with a heavy coat of tar and feathers. They fled, and are still going.

More Chicago Strikes.

Chicago, Jan. 5.—Rendered desperate by their ineffectual strike, the skyscrapers' engineers today issued a call to the engineers in many of the West Side factories to join the strike. They threaten to order a general strike if this is not sufficient. The excuse for calling out the factory engineers is that they are employed by members of the employers' association, which is aiding the managers of the downtown buildings to secure non-union engineers to take the place of the strikers.

Watchman Murdered.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 5.—The charred body of Nightwatchman Crawford was found in the fire of the Cushman Motor Company building this morning. His head was wounded, and the police believe that robbers attempted to loot the building, that Crawford resisted, and was struck. In the fight they kicked over the lantern, setting fire to the factory.

Bainbridge said of the 11 arbitration commissions, the Americans was the last to finish its work, as its claims involved larger amounts than most of the others, and were delicate and complex. They were 55 in number, amounting to $11,000,000, 23 were disallowed and $381,000 were awarded on the others. Miss Morley Acquitted.

Miss Neva Morley was last evening tried before a jury in Justice Horgan's court, on the charge of stealing a ring from Miss Cronise, a daughter of T. J. Cronise. Testimony was introduced on the part of the state tending to prove the charge, but the defense brought forth witnesses to prove that the two girls had traded rings, or at least had discussed the question of trading.
