SCORED UNION LABOR

Washington, Jan. 13.—Patterson presented resolutions from the Colorado State Federation of Labor, declaring the industrial conditions in that state demand congressional investigation. It drew out a statement condemning the attitude of the miners from Scott, of West Virginia. Patterson declared the mine owners were supplying money to pay the soldiers for the express purpose of exterminating union labor men. Scott replied that the Federation of Labor of Colorado had destroyed life and property. He declared no more tyrannical or despotic organization was in existence. The house bill appropriating half a million for stamping out the cotton boll weevil passed.

RECALLS AN OLD TRAGEDY

Charles Yerger, Once a Noted Bandit Pardoned

Marshal's Kindness Caused His Death, Yerger Goes Insane—His Partner Killed

Charles Yerger, who was serving a life sentence in the penitentiary at Chester, Ill., for robbing the mails in one of his numerous train hold-ups committed in Texas, was pardoned a few days ago by President Roosevelt. It is stated that Yerger is on his way back to Texas. He is bent with age, and few of his old-time acquaintances whom he knew 20 years ago, when he entered the doors of the prison, would recognize him now.

Yerger was a notorious train and stage robber. He was a member of the "Robbers' cave" gang, who terrorized this part of the state in the early '80s. For several years, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat of last Thursday says, they eluded the officers of the law, and committed one bold robbery after the other. In the Helotes hills, situated about fifty miles south of here, are a number of caves where the outlaws made their rendezvous. The story is told that the big amount of valuable plunder and money which the robbers gained in their numerous hold-ups was never recovered by the officers, and that it is believed to be hidden in one of the caves.

Yerger participated in a terrible tragedy after his conviction. The United States marshal for this district at that time was Henry L. Gosling. He was a brave officer and a popular frontiersman. Gosling's fearlessness led him to be careless when in the presence of danger. It was this carelessness that caused him to lose his life.

After the conviction of Yerger and Pitts, Marshal Gosling came to Austin to convey the prisoners to San Antonio, where they were to be placed in jail for safe-keeping, pending their transfer to the Illinois penitentiary. He was accompanied to Austin by Deputy Marshals Manning and Long, who took active charge of the prisoners when they had been placed on the train. The seat occupied by Gosling was situated three seats forward of the prisoners. His seat companion was H. S. Canfield, a former Texas ranger, and at that time employed on a San Antonio newspaper. He afterwards acquired considerable fame as a writer of fiction. He committed suicide in Chicago only a few weeks ago. Canfield was unarmed.

Woman Asks for Favor.

When the train was about to depart from the Austin depot Mrs. Pitts, the pretty wife of one of the prisoners, came up to Gosling and pleaded to sit by the side of her husband. She also asked that Rose Yerger, a sister of the other prisoner, be granted a similar privilege. Gosling's tender heart was moved by the tears of the woman and he granted the favor. Double seats, fronting each other, were made and the two desperate men and the two women sat facing each other.

It was about 9 o'clock at night when New Braunfels, 50 miles south of here, was reached. During the two hours' ride the prisoners had been very quiet, the sobs of the women being the only sounds that were heard to come from that quarter. The two deputy marshals sat three seats behind the prisoners.

The train had just left the station at New Braunfels when Yerger and Pitts stealthily reached their shackled hands under the folds of the dresses of the women and each drew forth a six-shooter. They sprang into the aisle of the car and began firing at the three officers. The first two shots of the prisoners were aimed at Gosling. The two bullets hit the brave marshal square in the back and he pitched forward on his face into the lap of Canfield. The prisoners then turned their pistols on Deputies Long and Manning. The latter were both out of their seats the moment they saw the first movement of the prisoners. The cylinder of Long's pistol would not work and he was powerless to give Manning any aid, although he begged the loan of a pistol from other passengers in the car. Manning, however, as soon as he could draw his own pistol began shooting at Yerger and Pitts as they backed towards the door in the darkness. The train was stopping and when the car had cleared of the smoke an accounting was taken of the casualties. Gosling was lying on the floor dead; Rose Yerger was shot through the thigh, and another woman, Mrs. Brown, was fatally wounded, dying the following day. Deputy Manning soon lost consciousness, but finally recovered and is still living on the Rio Grande border.

The next day the dead body of Pitts was found lying in a bunch of weeds near New Braunfels. He had been shot twice through the body. Yerger had released himself from the dead man by cutting off the latter's right hand at the wrist. Yerger was found wandering in the hills several miles west of New Braunfels late in the evening of the same day. He was demented and made no resistance when the officers called upon him to surrender. The shackles were still on his hand and to it was dangling the dismembered hand of his dead partner in crime.

The terrible experience had caused him to lose his mind. It is said that he has never fully recovered his reason and that he was a harmless prisoner during his 19 years of servitude at Chester, Ill.

Eugene's New High School Opened.

The new high school building in Eugene held its first assembly yesterday morning. Quite an interesting program was rendered by the pupils, and Supt. Becholdt gave an interesting address. The Eugene high school is a live school. It publishes an interesting journal entitled "The News," and the January number is just out, and is one of the best yet published. The cover is very attractive and the pupils have reason to feel proud of their work.

The Mystery of It. "I can't understand," said Uncle Eben, "how it is that some folks kin be too proud to work an' at de same time humble enough to let de fam'ly give 'em board an' lodgin' free."—Washington Star.
