SAVED THEIR MONEY

How Some Smart Merchants Got Their Tin

Company Sold it to Victoria Merchants for $11 a Ton Less Than Charged Americans

Hon. John Lind, former governor of Minnesota, and new member of congress from the Minneapolis district, made a speech the other day of interest to our own people.

The subject under consideration was "Tariff Revision and Canadian Reciprocity"—and during the argument Mr. Lind told the following story:

"I was out on the Pacific Coast for a couple of weeks just before I came down here, and I learned of an occurrence that impressed the situation with reference to our iron and steel schedule on my mind in a greater degree than anything that has yet come to my notice.

"As you all know, there is an immense packing industry on the Pacific Coast. A great deal of tin plate is used in that industry. There is also a large demand for sheet steel and sheet iron for Alaska. On the trip referred to I learned what I am now about to state. I am not going to give names, but what I shall say is capable of verification by anyone who is curious. The Northern Pacific Railroad company, to which I shall refer, will give you the data and the facts.

"A firm in Portland, Ore., dealing in hardware and handling large quantities of tin plate and sheet steel found that they needed some six or seven carloads of such material. This was about a year ago last summer. They wrote to Pittsburgh, the only place where those commodities could be bought, to one of the subsidiary companies of the steel trust, and received quotations. These people at Portland found that the price made by the Pittsburgh company was exorbitant, that it left no profit to them on the basis of the contracts that they had entered into, so they sent up to Vancouver, a thriving town just over the Canadian line, I think within 15 miles of the United States boundary, and they procured a firm of Canadian brokers to write to the same concern a letter similar to that which they had sent, to ascertain at what price they could buy these seven carloads of tin plate and sheet steel.

"The Canadians were given quotations ranging from eight to eleven dollars per ton less than the quotations to the American applicants. At the instance of the Portland firm the Canadian brokers immediately ordered the tin plate and the sheet steel. In due course of time the orders were filled and the bills of lading, with drafts annexed, were sent to the bank at Vancouver. Those of you who are at all familiar with dealings in that kind of commodities know that the manufacturer usually advances the freight, directs the route of shipment and sends draft with bill of lading. These cars had been routed from Pittsburgh to Chicago, from Chicago to St. Paul via the Burlington road and from St. Paul to the Pacific via the Northern Pacific railroad.

"In due time, as I say, the bills of lading, with drafts attached, arrived in Vancouver, and the Vancouver brokers promptly paid the drafts, indorsed the bills of lading, and sent them to their Portland customers.

"They immediately put themselves in communication with the Northern Pacific railroad and found that the cars were in transit somewhere in North Dakota. They demanded that the cars should be diverted, so as to be sent—three to Portland, two to Seattle, one to Tacoma, and one to another point, I think, instead of being carried through to Vancouver. They had the title papers—the bills of lading—indorsed; the drafts duly receipted. The railroad company could do nothing else than comply with the demand, and the cars were diverted, and this clever Portland firm saved about $3000 by the transaction.

"Now, gentlemen, speaking to you as American citizens, what do you think of a condition of affairs that compels our own citizens to resort to lying and subterfuge to get that decent treatment that they ought to be entitled to as a matter of right under our own laws? And still you say, 'We stand pat.' Party policy, the exigencies of a prospective campaign, will not justify you, in remedying these evils at this time; nor do you promise to do it at any future time."

A COUGH CONUNDRUM

When is a cough more than a cough?

When it's a settled cold. When it hangs on in spite of all you can do. Cough mixtures won't cure it because they are merely for a cough and this is something more.

Scott's Emulsion cures the cough because it cures the something more. It heals and repairs the inflamed tissues where the cold has taken root and prevents its coming back.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.
