A FORTUNE AWAITS HIM.

Walter Comber, Once a Resident of Oregon, is Wanted in England.

The Journal has been sent an advertisement from the Chancery Court of England, relative to the closing of an estate. The notice is virtually an effort to locate the whereabouts (dead or alive) of one Walter Comber, and states that he had once lived at Oakland, Oregon. There is evidently something of an estate awaiting this gentleman or his heirs, coming from the estate of William Comber, deceased (late of Pias Cottage, in the Parish of Slangham, Sussex, Beer-house keeper and gardener.)

Walter Comber was last heard of about September, 1887, and any information pertaining to his whereabouts would be gladly received, and should be addressed to Field, Roscoe & Co., 86 Lincoln Inn Fields, London, England, solicitors for the plaintiff.

Dependableness

That is a Coined Word
Not in the Dictionary, yet It's Meaning is Plain Enough When Applied to Our Clothing.

This store is Dependable. Our name on an article of merchandise means that we have done all humanly possible to insure it's high character. Remember we are Salem's leaders in Men's Wear. Read our ads they mean something.

Odd Fellows in Church.

The Odd Fellows of this city last night attended services in a body at the Unitarian church, where they enjoyed the service to the full. The minister, Rev. F. A. Powell, who is chaplain of Olive lodge, No. 18, delivered an interesting discourse on the familiar subject, "The Good Samaritan," before a good-sized audience. The members of the order were present by invitation of the pastor, who is held in high esteem by them.

A Temporary Roof.

Steiner & Berger had a force of men at work Saturday night until about 9 o'clock, putting a temporary roof on the Breyman building. The material used was the Malthoid Ready Roofing, furnished by Walter Morley, and, while it was only put down temporarily, it pretty effectually shut out the water.
