Jack Johnston of Woodburn Out for Sheriff

A Man Whom None of the Politicians Can Throw Down With Impunity

Jack Johnson, of Woodburn, is not to be overlooked among the boys who are aspiring for the Republican nomination for sheriff.

Jack is proud of the fact that he was born right on French Prairie, and has always lived there, and expects to die there.

He is nothing but a hop grower, and, having cleaned up a wad from that wonderful Oregon lupulin plant, decided to go into politics this year.

Jack is a man who does not know what fear is, and that is a quality sometimes overlooked in selecting a candidate for this office.

Not since J. J. Murphy ran for sheriff was this nomination ever given to a French Prairie man, and Jack says it is time something was doing.

Jack Johnson.

Jack is not ashamed to say that the best blood in French Prairie courses in his veins, and he is never ashamed to be lined up with his friends.

When it comes to the politicians throwing him down, they will find he is right there in any style of a wrestling match that any of them are familiar with.

Jack Johnson is going to be a factor in the convention, who cannot be thrown down with impunity, or in any other old way.

Some of the mararax for the other candidates have offered the French Prairie roadster a deputyship, but that don't go this time.

Jack says the north end of the county is entitled to this place on the Marion county Republican ticket, and he is the end.

Jack does not deny that he takes a drink when he likes, and the common people are just as good to him as the four hundred.

He does not pretend to associate altogether with bankers and millionaires, but is something of a financier himself.

As showing his good political judgment, he offered to risk a cool thousand that the Simon faction would not win out in Multnomah county.

If nominated, Jack will be elected, and in the convention and at the election he will have the solid support of his friends.

BOLD BAD MAN MADE HIS ESCAPE

Sensational Chase After an Ex-Convict Through Salem Streets-- He Has a Reward

There was a little excitement in Salem last evening, as a result of the sensational escape from arrest of Jack Burrows, an ex-convict, for whom the sheriff had a warrant of arrest. Burrows was sent to the penitentiary 15 months ago, from this county, for horse-stealing. He was discharged four months ago, and since then worked in a livery barn. A couple of weeks ago he went away, returning a few days ago, coming up on the train north for Ladysmith. On the second day out she encountered a storm that shook her up so hard that the main yard came tumbling down with a great crash. The balance of the voyage north was a succession of gales and storms. On the return trip from Oyster bay, from which port she sailed March 1, the voyage was uneventful until March 10, when she ran into a terrible gale, which came upon her without any warning and carried away her sails, her main mizzen top-sail and stay sails. The sea struck her with tremendous fury, washed over her decks from stem to stern, and threw her on her beam ends, where she lay for hours entirely at the mercy of the sea and almost entirely submerged by the mountains of waves that swept over her. To add to the terrible predicament she was in her cargo of coal shifted.

The whole crew was ordered below and for 24 hours worked with might and main to try to readjust her cargo and finally succeeded in getting her into shape so that she was manageable. The great waves that struck her battered in the fore-castle and washed away all the stock of beef and provisions stored there. The carpenter, cook and steward had all their belongings washed overboard. At times while the storm was at its height there seemed to be at least a hundred tons of water on the deck. When the storm had somewhat abated and the ship had righted it was found that the rudder head had sprung and it became necessary to rig a jury rudder. Consequently the spanker boom was taken down and lashed across the poop deck from rail to rail and with the aid of relieving tackle the captain was able to guide her on her course. In the meantime from the terrible strain under which she was laboring her seams had opened and her hold commenced to fill with water, and when they tested the pumps they found there was seven feet of water in the hold. The windmill was set going and all pumps working, and by this means she was kept afloat. Second Mate Albert Maas had a terrible experience. He was washed overboard twice, but managed to scramble on board both times, and, although badly bruised, did not suffer otherwise. In speaking of the storm he said: "The gale struck us just as though it had been fired from a gun. There was no warning about it at all. It hit us in a bunch, threw the ship on her beam ends and whirled us around in the trough of the sea. Our forward houses are entirely gutted out. The waves struck the partitions between the rooms and smashed them as though they were paper boxes. I was washed overboard twice, and as I went over the first time I caught the starboard fore sheet, when suddenly the ship gave a tremendous pitch and rolled me back again. Before I could grab hold of anything I was washed overboard a second time and the sea threw me against the main hatch, and from there I was washed to the bilge pump. This I grasped and managed to clamber to safety. Unless the ship had been mighty staunch she never could have weathered the awful hurricane she passed through."—Astorian.

SHIP MACY WAS THE PLAYTHING OF THE OCEAN

Storm Tossed and Battered, She Limped Into Port

Thrown on Her Beam Ends, Swept by Great Waves, She Struggled Home

The following story of the rough trip of the American ship, William H. Macy, is taken from the current issue of the San Francisco Call:

The storm beaten ship, William H. Macy, came into port Sunday. Her appearance more than verified the reports that the steamship City of Puebla had brought concerning her. She had a heavy list to starboard and her whole appearance showed the effects of the terrific encounters with the seas she had suffered. She was a woeful spectacle. How she weathered the gale and lived through the fury of the storm that threw her on her beam ends is a miracle to both officers and crew. At any rate, she has managed to get into port, and a more battered looking object has rarely crossed in over the bar. She left this port on January 30, bound north for Ladysmith. On the second day out she encountered a storm that shook her up so hard that the main yard came tumbling down with a great crash. The balance of the voyage north was a succession of gales and storms. On the return trip from Oyster bay, from which port she sailed March 1, the voyage was uneventful until March 10, when she ran into a terrible gale, which came upon her without any warning and carried away her sails, her main mizzen top-sail and stay sails. The sea struck her with tremendous fury, washed over her decks from stem to stern, and threw her on her beam ends, where she lay for hours entirely at the mercy of the sea and almost entirely submerged by the mountains of waves that swept over her. To add to the terrible predicament she was in her cargo of coal shifted.

The whole crew was ordered below and for 24 hours worked with might and main to try to readjust her cargo and finally succeeded in getting her into shape so that she was manageable. The great waves that struck her battered in the fore-castle and washed away all the stock of beef and provisions stored there. The carpenter, cook and steward had all other crowd. The Hall fight on Judge Scott is lining up that gentleman's friends with the Settlemente-Tooze-Johnston forces, and they seem to be in the lead by several lengths. The so-called Poorman Independents held a secret caucus Thursday night with an attendance of the Simon people, who were especially invited to be present. The regulars held their cau-

MARION COUNTY PRIMARIES

They Will All Be Pulled Off Next Monday

The County Judgeship Has Entered into the Situation in the Woodburn Controversy

The Democratic primaries are being held this, Saturday, afternoon, and the Republican primaries will be held Monday. All interest centers in the latter, and the slates that have been agreed on will be prepared this evening.

There has been no successful effort made to make an issue on any one candidate. The feeling is gaining ground that the Marion county officials have made a good record in county affairs, and to rebuke County Judge Scott for merely showing a progressive spirit on the subject of good roads would be to advertise the county in a bad light.

The fight in Woodburn precinct has taken a new turn by involving the fight for county judge. The friends of W. W. Hall have taken up his fight on County Judge Scott, and the line-up is now more of a Hall-Poorman-Dose-Simon fight than anything else. It is claimed that their candidate for county judge is C. T. Bonney. It is understood that Dose is a candidate for the legislature against Settlemente, who represents the Mitchell following, and Settlemente has the backing of the cus this evening, and the two slates will be given to the public.

No Contest in the Fourth.

The "anti" faction will not have a slate in the fourth ward, and there will be but one slate, the Wait Low slate of delegates, so that peace and harmony will prevail, and there will be no ocean of money spent there, as had been expected by some of the contestants. Concessions will probably be made, but not in the composition of the slate.

In the Fifth Ward.

There has been a division in this ward, the controversy growing out of the Englewood end of the ward not giving sufficient recognition to the old North Salem end of the precinct. The sheriff question does not enter into the controversy as much as the geographical considerations, and the result may be a mixed delegation, with some from each side elected delegates.

The Silverton Fight.

There is a general combination against the Adams slate in the three Silverton precincts, and the fight is more against his faction than against or for any of the county candidates. Indications are that only a small part of the Adams delegates will be elected, but it is possible that there will be some of his men elected. In none of the other precincts does there seem to be a fight for points, except in Brooks.

Old Battle in Brooks.

In spite of Alex. LaFollette's declaration that he was not a candidate, there is a disposition to rake up his legislative record, which was one of the best made by any man in the legislature. Alex. gets credit for having taken the scalp of the scalp bounty law, and saved the state any further imposition of that iniquity. But he is to be scalped for the hop inspector bill that he introduced, and which never saw the light of day in the legislature.
