

ROUSING REPUBLICAN MEETING

Navy. Corby created some laughter by saying that he was making the campaign for Scott, and vice versa.

There was no merit in the claim of the Republicans that they had wiped out the debt. Valuations had increased $2,000,000, and the increase in fees had helped wipe out that debt. Taxes had been collected up closer by a Democratic sheriff. He charged that county expenditures run up to $66,000 a year, when it was promised to run the county for $40,000. He ridiculed Scott as a graduate in the good roads movement. He had his diploma fresh from some Eastern college. He labored on this matter about as hard as an ox team on an old mud road in winter time. He attacked Scott for offering the people dollar for dollar in Champeog precinct to cut down some hills there. In four years they had built five miles of permanent road to take prominent Salemites out riding in automobiles with great satisfaction.

He had slept on his Turner speech, and was quite so severe on subscriptions for road purposes. He was just as much in favor of building permanent roads as Scott was, and declaimed the title of being bad roads candidate. The good roads movement was a boomerang. It was not the business of the county judge to assume the entire responsibility for road building. The county could employ a civil engineer to look after that. There was but one way to raise road funds, and that was by taxation. Subscriptions and donations were also a tax. This was in reply to Scott's question, "How would you raise road funds?"

Public subscriptions appealed to generosity and liberality, and not to the property owner's ability to pay. He did not object to voluntary subscriptions, but the system was all wrong. He got very little applause, and made no effort to get first base.

Kay went to bat, and made several good hits for the Republican running on the ticket with him. He praised L. Eddy, for judge, as a man of the very highest moral character. He maintained that he had made a good record for reform and economy. He would oppose any further appropriations for the Lewis and Clark fair.

He reviewed his record as heretofore published. He desired only to refer to the bills in which he had been prominent. He had fought the Newport Summer Normal School bill. He voted against more appropriation bills than any other member. Some had gone back on their convictions, and voted for the Indian War Veterans, which he would not do. But as $100,000 appropriated had paid two-thirds of the Indian war claims he favored paying off the balance of the claims.

He reviewed his record on the franchise tax bills, and had voted in the interest of the taxpayers on more bills than any other member of the house. What of seven out of 12 Democrats who had dodged on the franchise bill? He had supported a corporation tax bill that taxed his own business, while the Davy bill did not tax but about 15 corporations. He had held important places on committees in the house, while his opponent would be with a hopeless minority, devoid of influence. He had answered to more roll calls than any one member of the house. Kay told a story that brought down the house and he made his customary home run.

Richie defended the subscription system. They had subscribed for their own benefit, and what was it to the rest of the county? Would Judge Corby refuse to help a neighborhood that was willing to get in and help itself? He took the rest of his time to general approval of Republican principles, and asked his hearers to vote it straight. His remarks were heartily applauded.

J. H. Settlemier was introduced as a plain man of affairs, and made a short talk. He had been school director and mayor and member of the state fair board. Like Richie, he had cast his first ballot for Abraham Lincoln, and gone straight down the line to Roosevelt.

The old nurseryman warned the wax in his hearers' ears. He felt more at home in the ranks of the laboring men than among silk hats, and expected to remain there to his last days.

Joe Calvert recognized the necessity of retrenching appropriations in the next legislature. If elected he would favor no unusual appropriations. Joe Graham got an unusual appropriation of applause. There was no room for tomfoolery in the next legislature. Annul that registration law cut down the state tax. He wanted it understood that he would stand by laws in which the farmers were interested. He closed with a good story, as usual.

Scott closed the game for the Republican team, and the way the farmers tramped rattled some of the hardware off the shelves in the store down stairs. The one mill and a half levy for road purposes was less than $15 a mile for all the roads, bridges and culverts in the county, and, without contributions, it was impossible to build up any permanent highways. If the policies inaugurated for securing good roads were continued great changes would take place, and the county court was willing to extend aid to any and all parts of the county on the same plan. He, too, had been admitted to the supreme court. He went him one better and had been admitted to the supreme court of the United States. The expenditures for current expenses was as follows: For 1902, $45,000; 1903, $41,500, exclusive of expenses for roads.

Huckenstein closed with a few good stories. Defended his ability to represent the people, even if he was not a Republican. Because Jos. Teal, a Portland Democrat, and corporation lawyer, might oppose taxing franchises, but the people did not.

The candidates on both sides and the reporters and the occupants of the bleachers' benches and political fans all enjoyed the dinner at Mrs. Gilberts' hotel. They drove away to Sublimity for the next game.

At Sublimity

The Republican cheering brigade was in full voice when Joe Graham stepped to the bat. He thought a voter should not be required to register who had lived 40 years in the state. He had always paid the highest price for the farmers' products. If he could not pay it he had helped them to get the top price. He had learned the carpenter trade, and worked hard at it. Fred Rice was received with a tiger, and made the shortest speech of the campaign: "If I am elected assessor will assess everybody alike, regardless of party."

J. H. Settlemier said he was not born with a silver spoon in his mouth, but as a child used a wooden spoon, and made it himself.

"I learned early to work, and that has been my chief occupation ever since. If he made any mistakes they could only say he was born a Dutchman, and didn't know any better." Great laughter and applause.

Scott said he was handicapped by having 15 only minutes, while his opponent, Mr. Corby, had 40 minutes, as the Democrats put up only two speakers.

"The county tax has been reduced from 11.2 to 4.6 mills in four years of my administration," said the judge proudly, as he looked the sturdy farmers of Sublimity right in the eye.

"We shortened up a mile and a half of bridges in the county, by making earth fills.

"The county has a new system of bookkeeping that reveals the financial condition of each department at any time to a cent."

He closed with a high compliment for his colleagues, Wm. Miley and Isaac Needham. They had given the county good service, and he trusted Needham would be re-elected.

The county had adopted a system of charging up the tools and machinery used by each road supervisor to that official, and holding him responsible. If the county government suited the taxpayers he would be glad to be re-elected, otherwise elect Corby.

The cheering lasted until Aug. Huckenstein was introduced, and sailed into Kay, as usual. He told a new story on the Israelites crossing the Red Sea. He made an additional attack on Kay's record on the car shortage bill. Huckenstein felt at home, as this was the first really Democratic audience he had appeared before.

"Wouldn't that be double taxation of corporations?" asked young Mr. Schellberg.

"Not at all," and Gus read from the report of the Republican secretary of state of Ohio and of Oregon on taxation of franchises. He got the biggest applause of any Democratic speaker so far, and was followed by Judge Corby, who made some good hits at the air. He eulogized Huckenstein "for making a battle royal for the common people. Franchises have a money value, and should be justly taxed upon them." He devoted the rest of his speech to Judge Scott, and became quite humorous. He did not favor the present system of road improvement. Under the present law a road district could levy 10 mills to build roads, and that was the right way to get at it. He would take his stand among the ranks of the mossbacks, if it made a man a mossback to construct roads the way Scott was doing. They proposed to take $1600 of the county funds, and help the people of Mt. Angel and Scotts Mills build a road, for which they had subscribed $4000. Why did not these communities tax themselves to build their roads? The subscription plan taxed the liberal and public spirited man. Was there anything wrong in asking any locality to tax itself to build roads? He charged that the present county court had taken $2000 of county funds to build an automobile road from Salem to Liberty, to promote the interests of some real estate brokers, who have some land they want to sell. That was a boomerang system of building roads. His discussion of county finances was the same as at Aumsville.

Judge Corby asked Scott to explain the system of keeping books, which he did. He made a plea for the rest of the Democratic ticket.

T. B. Kay closed the game, and batted files and fouls and finally landed several runs. Here the audience had thinned out, as it was 5 o'clock, and the farmers were anxious to go home. His speech was the same as at Aumsville, and, considering that his audience was almost solidly of the opposition. He was not opposed to franchise taxation, and would introduce a bill to tax franchises at the next session, if elected.

Mr. Kay closed with a review of his own record, and an eulogy of the secretary of state. "There has never been a better secretary of state than Mr. Dunbar in the history of this state." He concluded with a story on Huckenstein, and this ended the game.

10. Memorial exercises by six little girls.
11. Song, "Tenting Tonight," and response.
12. Closing remarks by pastor.
13. Quartet, "Rest, Peacefully Rest."
14. Benediction.

The members of Sedgwick Post and Woman's Relief Corps, also all old soldiers and their families, are cordially invited to be present. By order of committee.

Woodmen Elect Officers.

The Woodmen of the World held their semi-annual election of officers last evening, with the following result:

- C. H. Fletcher, C. C.
- L. R. Stinson, A. L.
- J. M. Townsend, escort.
- James Cornwell, watchman.
- Geo. Swelink, sentry.

The Woodmen are making great preparations for the carnival which will be held under their auspices August 9th to 13th, inclusive, and are certain that the people of Salem will appreciate their efforts.

The state fair board has designated September 13th as Woodmen day, and the enthusiastic ax-men expect several thousand choppers to be in attendance.

Sunday, June 12th is memorial day for the craft, and the services will be of the usual ritualistic order.

The Euchre Club

The Euchre Club were entertained by Mrs. John McNary and Mrs. Charles Gray, at the home of the latter. Mrs. J. D. Sutherland won the prize, a plate. The club will be entertained next by Mrs. T. T. Geer, and the plate which will be given will be hand-painted china, done by Mrs. Geer.

Nervous Depression.

Summer months are peculiarly the months of nervous diseases, especially nervous prostration and other depressed states of the nervous system. People who are not at all inclined to be nervous or suffer from weak nerves find this time especially trying. Sultry heat and electrical disturbances of the atmosphere are probably the cause of this.

Invalids need to be particularly careful to fortify the nervous system by the use of Peruna.

Miss Helen Rolof, Kaukauna, Wis., writes: "Several times during the past two years or more my system has been greatly in need of a tonic, and at those times Peruna has been of great help in building up the system, restoring my appetite and securing restful sleep. I know a great number of women who are using it for the troubles peculiar to the sex, and with the best results."—Helen Rolof.

MISS HELEN ROLOF.

Miss Louise Bertsel, 19 1/2 Second street, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "My health was excellent until about six months ago, when I seemed to have a collapse from overdoing socially, and the doctor ordered an entire change of scene and climate. As this was an absolute impossibility at the time, I had to try and regain my health in another way and was induced by a friend, who gave Peruna such a good recommendation, to try Peruna. I can not tell you the condition of my nerves when I began to use it. The least noise irritated me, and I felt that life was not worth living, but Peruna soon changed me into a well woman, and now I do not know I have nerves."—Louise Bertsel.

MISS LOUISE BERTSEL.

A newspaper contributor was lately admitted into the extensive suite of offices which constitute the headquarters of Dr. Hartman, who treats catarrh patients by the thousand. Among the busy swarm of assistant doctors, clerks, stenographers and bookkeepers, Dr. Hartman stopped long enough to say a few words.

"A large number of female patients visit me every year, but the number who are entered on my books as regular patients and are treated by correspondence is very much larger. Hundreds of letters are received and answered free every day. A yet greater multitude take my catarrh remedy, Peruna, and are cured, of whom I never hear. Some of this latter class write me years after their cure."

"I never allow a name published except by the written consent of the patient. We make no charge at any

For County Judge.

Grant Corby, the man placed in nomination by the Democrats of Marion county for the office of county judge, is a native son of Oregon. He was born in Clackamas county on September 14, 1864, and when he was 12 years of age his father, with his family, removed to Marion county, settling upon a farm near Woodburn. Here the subject of this sketch spent the remaining years of his boyhood, and the years of his early manhood. He attended the country school in the winter, and helped to work and clear the farm. Being ambitious, and desiring to obtain a better education than the country school afforded, he left the farm, and entered Philomath college at Philomath, in Benton county, this state, where he graduated with the degree of "B. S." in June, 1898. He thereafter registered as a law student in the office of H. J. Bigger, at Salem, entered the law department of Willamette University, and graduated therefrom in June, 1900. Over half the women have catarrh in some form or another. And yet, probably not a tenth of the women know that their disease is catarrh. To distinguish catarrh of various organs it has been named very differently.

One woman has dyspepsia, another bronchitis, another Bright's disease, another liver complaint, another consumption, another female complaint. These women would be very much surprised to hear that they are all suffering with chronic catarrh. But it is so, nevertheless.

MISS JENNIE FINLEY.

Miss Lucy M. Riley, 33 Davenport street, Cleveland, Ohio, writes: "I wish to add my indorsement to thousands of other women who have been cured through the use of Peruna. I suffered for five years with severe backache, and when weary or worried in the least I had prolonged headache. This ail I caught had come and was advised to take Peruna for it. Imagine my astonishment and pleasure to find that after taking two bottles not only was my cough gone, but I had no more backache or headache, and now in perfect health, enjoy life and have neither an ache or pain, thanks to Peruna."—Lucy M. Riley.

ably not a tenth of the women know that their disease is catarrh. To distinguish catarrh of various organs it has been named very differently.

Each one of these troubles and a great many more are simply catarrh—that is, chronic inflammation of the mucous lining, of which organ is affected. Any internal remedy that will cure catarrh in one location will cure it in any other location. This is why Peruna has become so justly famous in the cure of female diseases. It cures catarrh wherever located. Its cures remain. Peruna does not palliate—it cures.

It is Actually Open.

The campaign is actually open now, and the strenuous life of the candidate is on, making it necessary for him to have sustaining food, like the meats to be had at the old reliable market of E. C. Cross, where the best in all Oregon is always ready, and at the cut prices, for the meat war is still on.

For Weak, Languid People.

Weak, sickly people often remark "If I could only get something that would nourish me and give me strength," they do not know why, but the food they eat is of no benefit to them. They gain no flesh and feel no stronger. The fact is the stomach is too weak to perform its work. And the little appetite they once had is soon gone. The blood becomes more thin and watery, bringing on faint sick spells with loss of memory and ambition. There is a remedy for all this that acts in the right way. It is called Dr. Gunn's Blood and Nerve Tonic, and is sold by all druggists for 75c per box, or 3 boxes for $2.00. It turns the food you eat into rich, red blood, making flesh and strength, creating an appetite because the system demands sustenance.

For sale by Dr. S. C. Stone, druggist.
