o'clock, Rev. W. C. Kantner, of the First Congregational church officiating. Hymns were sung by Mr. and Mrs. Staiger, Mrs. W. H. Byrd, Miss Blanche Kantner and Judge Burnett, accompanied by Miss Shelton. Rev. Kantner spoke of the deceased in very high terms. He paid many tributes for his worth as a neighbor and friend. He was a member of the Congregational church for 40 years. He was well known in the business circles of the city, where he was closely associated in many enterprises until several years ago, when his health failed him, and he was obliged to give up his active work. His last sickness was one of great suffering, but the end came very peacefully. He leaves besides the widow, three children, a son, De Witt Hamilton Jones, of Portland, and Mrs. Genella Parker, of Ballard, Wash., both of whom were present, but the other daughter, Miss Frances Jones, of Brooklyn, N. Y., did not arrive until today. The remains were laid to rest in the family lot in the Odd Fellows cemetery.

The Bulldog Was Lost.
That a bulldog is not very strong on geography was illustrated by the X-Ray man's white dog, Jim. He followed the editor into a number of places, but in one of the hallways was lost, and then began a disconsolate chase, that took him into every saloon in town until he met up with Tom Reynolds' "Teddy," and was escorted home in safety.

There are a few persons in every community who are willing it should be at the tail end of progress, and these are even willing to be the tail.

MILLARD HILL DROWNED

Gasoline Launch Overturned and He Lost His Life

Millard Hill was drowned in the Willamette along about one and one-half miles above town Saturday evening while on a pleasure trip with a party of friends, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Smith and Roy D. Price.

They left the city about 3 o'clock with Hill Bros' new gasoline launch for a fishing trip up the river. When they reached the old channel, sometimes known as the government slough, the machinery of the engine failed to work and Mr. Hill was at work making repairs when the little craft unexpectedly shot forward, striking a log which was several inches under water. It hit the obstruction with enough force to throw the occupants out of the boat. Mr. Hill and Mrs. Smith fell in the water near each other and from all reports he attempted to save her. Whether he was suffering from some injury received when the boat capsized or not is unknown, but in a very short time he released his hold on her and went down. Mr. Price made a heroic effort to save Mrs. Smith and finally succeeded, with the aid of Mr. Smith, who at the time of the accident was in a row boat a short distance from where the accident occurred, with Leslie Garber, a young man who resides in West Salem.

It took some time to revive Mrs.

Smith, but with persistent work she was brought to life. Dr. Morse was telephoned for from the home of Sim White across the river, where the woman had been taken in a boat by her husband and Leslie Garber. The remains of Mr. Hill were recovered about 8 o'clock by a party of searchers and were brought to this city.

The news of the accident spread rapidly over town and a large number secured buggies, boats and bicycles and started for the scene of the dreadful accident. Mr. Hill was a favorite with his large circle of acquaintances and universal sympathy was expressed for the bereaved family.

Roy Price, who was one of the party, said:

"When we entered the government slough the engine refused to work and Millard and I were making repairs on it. It started very suddenly and without warning collided with an old snag in the edge of the channel. The front end of the boat was raised clear out of the water and Millard, Mrs. Smith and myself were hurled into the water. We hardly realized what had happened, the jar came so unexpectedly and in a place where we were apparently free from danger.

"Millard and Mrs. Smith grappled with each other and the former seemed unable to do anything to help himself. I asked him if he could swim, and he replied, 'I think so.' He was only a few feet away and I thought that he would be able to reach the side of the launch without doubt. When I swam to the boat it was with some difficulty that I held on to it, not being able to do so until I had secured a hold on the bow of the boat. I handed the one oar that we had to Mrs. Smith and she clung to it, although she went under and was not in sight when her husband arrived. The end of the oar sticking out of the water was the only mark to show where she was and Mrs. Smith and Leslie Garber finally succeeded in getting her into their small row boat and taking the almost lifeless form across the river to the home of Sim White, and Dr. Morse was soon on the ground. The accident happened about 5 o'clock, but the remains of Millard were not recovered until about 8 o'clock."

The body was brought to this city and taken to the undertaking parlors of A. M. Clough, where it was prepared for burial. Deceased was 25 years of age and a member of the firm of Hill Bros., cigar dealers on Commercial street. He was a pleasant and agreeable young man, and had a host of friends. His parents reside at Stayton and the remains were taken there this morning at 6 o'clock and interment was held at 11 o'clock. He leaves besides his father and mother, five brothers, Lefe, Clarence and Ellis, of this city, and Delbert and Clyde, of Stayton, and two sisters, Mrs. Elsie Potter and Miss Gladice.

The mother is on a trip to the St. Louis fair and other Eastern points and expected to be absent during the greater part of the summer. She was notified of the sad accident by wire last evening and her visit will be marred by the unfortunate occurrence.

Funeral of Mrs. Albert.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Jane G. Albert, widow of the late E. T. Albert, was held at the home, on the corner of Mill and Winter streets, yesterday afternoon, at 2:30, Rev. Ketchum, of the First Presbyterian church officiating. The funeral was one of the largest ever held in this city. The services were very impressive. The music was furnished by the Girls' Choir of the Presbyterian Sunday School, who sang two hymns and the Twenty-Third Psalm. On behalf of the Missionary Society, of which deceased was an ardent member, Mrs. Draper read the following poem:
Dear, folded hands, so worn with care,
So quiet on the pulseless breast,
Will any burden need you there,
If heaven is a place of rest?
And you, dear heart, will you forget,
The struggles of these lower lands?
Or is there some sweet service yet
For folded hands.
Yours was the never-ending task
Born of a never-ending need.
Our selfishness it was to ask,
Your sweet unselfishness to heed.
And now in the unwonted rest
Long promised in the better lands,
How can you sit an idle guest
With folded hands?
No tears to dry, no wounds to bind,
No sufferer to tend and bless—
Where will those eager fingers find
A need for all their tenderness?
Yet, knowing all they did before,
Perchance the Father understands,
And holds some precious work in store
For folded hands.

The pastor took his text from the Book of Romans, and he spoke many comforting words for those left behind, and told of the grand and useful life which Mrs. Albert always lived. She was born of Scotch parentage in Pittsburg, Pa., in 1818, and was the eldest of 17 children. In 1837 she was married to Eben T. Albert. The came to Oregon in 1881, and made their home in Salem. Mrs. Albert was a noble Christian woman. Her whole life was devoted to her family and missionary work. She was a member of the Presbyterian church for many years, having united at the early age of 15. She was always thinking of others, and took a prominent part in the home and foreign missionary societies, where she will be greatly missed. The pastor closed with an appropriate poem, the sentiment of which was "Weep for the living, but not for the dead."

The pall bearers were the grand children of the deceased, Joseph, Harry, John, Eben and James Albert, and Geo. Rodgers.

The remains were laid to rest in the Odd Fellows' cemetery, with appropriate services.

The floral tributes were many, and showed the respect in which she was held by her many friends.
