Lester B. French Wants Right of Way to Canemah

Lester B. French, who claims to reside in Portland, is in Salem canvassing the property owners who have land north of this city with a view of securing a right of way across their property, 50 feet in width, for the purpose of building a railroad.

The contracts are in the form of a deed, and give French, or his successors, until July 1, 1907, to complete their road, and in the event that injunction suits should be instituted or the building otherwise delayed by legal process, then the contract is extended indefinitely.

It is claimed by some that Mr. French is representing the Oregon Water Power Company, and that the road will be built in connection with the Portland-Canemah line, but, from what can be learned from Mr. French, he is in the interest of Eastern capitalists, and is securing the contracts with the understanding that his company will take up the proposition in time for the fair next year.

The land owners and Mr. French will have a meeting this afternoon, and will discuss the various features of his plan at that time. It is thought by some that it would only be fair to all concerned that Mr. French show some substantial plan or his ability to construct the road before the farmers are asked to deed away a portion of their land.

The Dallas-Salem road, however, will not be lost sight of during the discussion of the proposed Canemah line, and whenever Mr. French has perfected his plans, in the manner furnished by Mr. Covert, and will meet with the citizens of Salem, and tell them what he wants, and what he will give in return, he will secure his right of way without trouble.

Couple Not Married.

Anna Dodder, who was married on January 1, 1895, in Linn county, to George W. Dodder, and within six months of her divorce from George E. Flatman, has commenced suit in the state circuit court to have the marriage declared null and void. This is because the statute of Oregon provides that a divorced person cannot legally marry a third person within six months of the date of the decree. Mrs. Dodder obtained a divorce from Flatman in Marion county, July 11, 1894, and was united to Dodder within 10 days of the six months' limit. She sets forth in her complaint that Dodder persuaded her that she could lawfully become his wife on January 1, 1895, and consequently she consented to have a marriage ceremony performed, which joined them together on that day. On June 7, 1904, she avers, she ascertained that her marriage to Dodder was illegal and refused afterwards to live with him. She asserts that Dodder still claims her as his wife, but she declines to be so accepted, and asks the court for relief, otherwise, she says, her individual property rights will be affected.

When the last case of this kind was presented before Judge Cleland, relief was denied on the ground that, as the marriage was void, that was all there was too it.—Oregonian.

Will Issue Proclamation.

The governor's office is preparing the annual proclamation relating to forest fires, and it will be issued on July 1st. The proclamation declaring the local option and direct primary laws a part of the Oregon code will be issued as soon as the official vote is canvassed by the board. This will probably occur within a few days, as soon as the returns from all the counties are received at the office of the secretary of state.

Important Divorce Case.

Judge R. P. Boise held a short session of department No. 2 of the circuit court this morning, and granted a divorce in the case of Nora B. Fletcher vs. George A. Fletcher. The technical grounds stated in the pleadings were cruel treatment and personal indignities. The custody of a child, aged 3 years, was given to plaintiff. Attorneys Bonham & Martin appeared for the plaintiff.

NATIONAL REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

nounced that a strong undercurrent of sentiment was favorable to an early adjournment. Foraker says he would not be surprised if the business of the convention was concluded Wednesday night. Gov. Black also is of the opinion that the convention ought to be put through with speed, as everything is cut and dried.

Temporary Chairman's Address.

Temporary Chairman Elihu Root delivered an address which is the party slogan for this campaign. He referred to the responsibility of governing 80,000,000 people resting on the Republican party. To keep all this great population active in production and commerce, social progress and a standard of moral and intellectual life never before attained in the history of the world was the problem before the national government. In the course of the next administration the Republican party would pass the first half century of national life. A renewal of confidence at the hands of the people was now asked at the hands of the people because the principles the party defended were right, and because the party primarily gave assurance of good government. The candidates they would present were men of proved competency and patriotism, fitted to fill the offices for which they are nominated to the credit and honor of the country. He reviewed the achievements of the past, the issues of the present, and paid a glowing tribute in conclusion to the characters of McKinley, Hanna and Roosevelt, as follows:

As we gather in this convention,

Shall not these have honor in our land? Truth, sincerity, courage! these underlie the fabric of our institutions. Upon hypocrisy and sham, upon cunning and false pretense, upon weakness and cowardice, upon the arts of the demagogue and the devices of the mere politician—no government can stand. No system of popular government can endure in which the people do not believe and trust. Our President has taken the whole people into his confidence. Incapable of deception, he has put aside concealment. Frankly and without reserve, he has told them what their government was doing, and the reasons. It is no campaign of appearances upon which we enter, for the people know the good and the bad, the success and the failure, to be credited and charged to our account. It is no campaign of sounding words and specious pretenses, for our President has told the people with frankness what he believed, and what he intended. He has meant every word he said, and the people have believed every word he said, and with him this convention agrees because every word has been sound Republican doctrine. No people can maintain free government who do not in their hearts value the qualities which have made the President of the United States conspicuous among the men of his time as a type of noble manhood. Come what may here—come what may in November, God grant that those qualities of brave, true manhood shall have honor throughout America, shall be held for an example in every home, and that the youth of generations to come may feel that it is better than wealth, or office, or power, to have the honesty, the purity, and the courage of Theodore Roosevelt.

Governor Odell, of New York, then moved the approval of the selection of Root as temporary chairman, and it our hearts go back to the friend—the never to be forgotten friend, whom when last we met we acclaimed with one accord as our universal choice to bear a second time the highest honor in the nation's gift; and back still, memory goes through many a year of leadership and loyalty.

How wise and how skillful he was! how modest and self-effacing! how deep his insight into the human heart! how swift the intuitions of his sympathy! how compelling the charm of his gracious presence. He was so unselfish, so thoughtful of the happiness of others, so genuine a lover of his country and his kind. And he was the kindest and tenderest friend who ever grasped another's hand. Alas, that his virtues did plead in vain against cruel fate!

Yet we may rejoice, that while he lived he was crowned with honor; that the rancor of party strife had ceased; that success in his great tasks, the restoration of peace, the approval of his countrymen, the affection of his friend, gave the last quiet months in his home at Canton repose and contentment.

And with McKinley we remember Hanna with affection and sorrow—his great lieutenant. They are together again.

But we turn, as they would have us turn, to the duties of the future; we turn, as they would have us turn, to prepare ourselves for the struggle under the same standard borne in other hands by right of true inheritance. Honor, truth, courage, purity of life, domestic virtue, love of country, loyalty to high ideals—all these combined with active intelligence, with learning, with experience in affairs, with the conclusive proof of competency afforded by wise and conservative administration, by great things already done and great results already achieved—all these we bring to the people with another candidate.

was carried unanimously. Root was greeted with enthusiastic applause. Root commenced his speech in a low voice, with calls of "Louder."

He was frequently interrupted with applause. His description of the splendid financial condition of the country brought forth a volley of cheers.

The reference to the beneficial result of the occupation of the Philippines was wildly cheered, as was also his remarks.

Before he concluded he referred to the late Senator Hanna, and his tribute brought the convention to its feet.

Governor VanSant, of Minnesota, was recognized by the president of the convention, and called to the table at which Payne sits. The reference of VanSant to Roosevelt brought the convention to its feet again.

Signal for Applause.

At 1:30 p. m., Root's concluding words, naming Roosevelt, were the signal for an enthusiastic demonstration. The whole convention sprang to its feet, cheering wildly, waving flags and handkerchiefs.

1:32 p. m., temporary officers selected by national committee were approved. On motion of Dick, of Ohio, rules of last convention were adopted.

1:35 p. m., on motion of Foraker, of Ohio, seconded by Heyburn, of Idaho, the convention agreed to accept Porto Rico and Philippine delegates. On motion of McComas, of Maryland, roll call was had on announcement of standing committees.

2:10 p. m., completed list of committees was read and convention adjourned until tomorrow.
