

NAUGHTY AUTO MOBILE

Experience of Several Albany People With Steam Roadster

The Albany Herald relates the experience of several Albany people with an automobile:

George H. Graves, with his big automobile, was in the city yesterday, and last evening, while driving the big touring car about the city, he came near causing several accidents, horses taking fright at the big machine, and it was the greatest of luck that no one was injured. During the evening he had gone across the steel bridge into Benton county with a party of friends, and on the return, while driving across the bridge at a rapid rate of speed, met a single buggy going in the opposite direction. The two ladies in the buggy did their best to control their horse, but succeeded in passing the big auto only after a narrow escape from being hurled into the stream many feet below. The horse, frightened at the appearance of the auto, reared and sprang to the side of the bridge, and, with the buggy scraping the railing for a distance of fully six or seven rods, finally got past the machine. There were quite a number of people on the bridge at the time, and there was consternation and fear that the railing would give way with the result that the buggy and its occupants would be hurled into the river below.

One of the ladies in the buggy was Mrs. W. M. Phillips, who resides a half mile north of the Benton county end of the bridge. Parties who were on the bridge at the time report that the auto stopped about the center of the bridge until Mrs. Phillips had come within about 50 feet of the machine, when it suddenly started up at the same time sounding the whistle. This so frightened the horse as to make the animal unmanageable, and, but for the timely assistance of a couple of young men on the bridge, would have gone over the railing. Mrs. Phillips' efforts to hold the plunging horse severely strained her back, and after her arrival home she was compelled to send for a physician. Dr. Winnard was called, and he found the lady in a serious condition, suffering severe pain, and he reports her in a bad condition as the result of the strain and the fright received.

Later in the evening a well known business man who drives a good horse met the big auto in the street. Four big lights on the swift moving machine frightened the gentleman's horse almost out of his wits, and, while the driver kept control of the animal, he was compelled to turn quickly and get out of the way of the machine, which he did while using language that was far more emphatic than elegant.

A third case of frightening a horse occurred when a well known horseman, having in the buggy with him a Portland friend to whom he was showing his fine driving horse, and expanding on the many virtues of the animal, showing especially how gentle and obedient he was, when they met the big automobile. The machine, with its glaring headlights, suddenly hove in sight, and away went the gentlemen, horse and buggy, and the driver could not see his own animal for the cloud of dust kicked up by the latter. He said little at the time, but he can be depended upon to enter an emphatic protest against the fast running of automobiles on the streets and roads. It is said that, as a result of the three occurrences of last night, proper restrictions on automobiles will be asked for at the hands of the city council. The streets of the city and the bridge, all of them inside the city limits, should and doubtless will be made safe for all classes of citizens.

MR. TOBIN'S BLOOD CIRCULATED DEATH THROUGH HIS BODY.

Scrofulous Conditions Beyond Power of Physicians to Check Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mr. William Tobin, of No. 20 Smith's court, Newburyport, Mass., a well-known engineer, is very enthusiastic over the remarkable change which has occurred in his physical condition. "A few years ago," he says, "scrofula showed itself in the swelling of the glands of my neck and the disease gradually extended until my whole body was affected and I was covered with sores practically from head to foot; little watery puffs kept appearing, growing larger, and finally breaking and discharging a yellow fluid. After a while they would dry up in some places only to break out anew in other parts of my body.

"The physicians who attended me said I had scrofula in its worst form. Their treatment instead of arresting the spread of the disease only caused it to break out more extensively. After I had suffered in this way for four months, my misfortunes were increased by a severe attack of typhoid malaria. For some time I gave up all hope of recovery, but after five weeks the fever was checked and the doctors said the danger point was passed.

"I was still, however, affected as badly as ever with scrofula and it looked as if I never could get rid of that disease. A friend chanced to call on me one day and told me about the excellence of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a blood remedy. I became interested and bought a box and began to take three doses a day of two pills each until the first box was used up. Then I bought a second box and increased the dose to three pills. At the end of the second box, I noticed that the old sores were healing some and that there were not so many fresh sores breaking out. I kept on using the pills until I had taken ten boxes, and then I was entirely cured. I have had no return of the disease since and have not lost a day's work through sickness since I was cured by this wonderful medicine."

In cases of scrofula the blood becomes vitiated to such an extent that it is no longer able to build up the body. It carries to every part irritation and decay instead of renewal of life. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills relieve in two ways. They stimulate the digestion, which increases proper nourishment; and they introduce into the blood elements that purify and strengthen it. They are sold by all druggists.

The Salem business men should not be working for another bum Portland directory, that never does justice to this city.

The carnival, the campmeeting, the Chemawa graduating, not even the Fourth of July celebrations seem able to break the drought.
